OUR idea of a home is one both PRACTICAL and ARTISTIC. By careful thought we manage to instill certain INDIVIDUALITY into each home.

It quite frequently happens that the PROSPECTIVE BUILDER'S IDEAS and PURSE do not correspond. In such cases our PRACTICAL knowledge comes to the rescue, and often where others have hopelessly FAILED, WE SUCCEED.

We build homes from the modern five-room cottage, at $[illegible], to the most elaborate dwelling. It rests with the INDIVIDUAL, entirely, what his home will cost. By concentrating our PURCHASING POWER, combined with our PRACTICAL knowledge, and being in a position to DISCOUNT our BILLS, we can, for a given quantity of work, discount our competitors' prices.

We build either by contracts on a fixed fee of 10 per cent. of estimated cost of work, or on our own lots in Los Angeles, Redondo and San Pedro, on easy terms.

We make no additional charge for our Architectural services, if we build, or if we fail to satisfy you both as to price and design.

Our REFERENCES are PEOPLE for whom we HAVE BUILT, who FREELY indorse us.

We make liberal building loans.

—what does HOME mean to YOU?

Does it mean the stuffy, crowded unnatural "home life" of a flat or an apartment?

Does it mean a good portion of your earnings given in exchange every thirty days for a worthless rent receipt?

Have you ever felt that spine-stiffening, independence-producing sense of home-ownership?

"My own home"—the most comforting words in the English language.

The man unprivileged to use those words is unfortunate—he is to be pitied.

Hundreds of live, earnest, thoughtful, wideawake people have recently bought home-sites at West Adams Park.

The great sales-record proves the home buying advantages of this well-located property.

The extra low prices, the easy terms, the prospect of heavy increase in value, the quiet, restful, attractive environment—good, pure, clean air, excellent cold water, ever-visible mountain view, cool, health-giving ocean breezes—good car service (choice of two car lines)—the substantial improvements, including a real sewer system—all included in the price of lots—these tangible advantages have appealed irresistibly to those who have bought at West Adams Park.

YES!!!

A LADY CALLED US UP LAST WEEK AND SAID: "I want to ask you about PRINCETON PARK houses."

"Have they hardwood floors?" YES.
"Have they beamed ceilings?" YES.
"Have they built-in buffets?" YES.
"Have they nice electric fixtures?" YES.
"Have they linen closets?" YES.
"Have they nice fireplaces?" YES.
"Have they large closets?" YES.

We had to say "YES" so many times, that it sounded like a man stuttering. We had thought of everything she thought of, only like David Harum, "we did it first," and, in fact, we thought of a lot of things that she didn't think about.

The officers of this company have built so many bungalows that they have brought the building of them to a point where it amounts to positive genius. Their homes are just full of quaint, characteristic, inviting innovations, that suggest comfort and ease, and the full enjoyment of that best of all places, "HOME."

Our customers are our best friends. We would like to add you to the number.

FOR SALE—

EL SEGUNDO

$11,700 PROFIT
ON A $750 LOT.

BUSINESS CORNERS THAT COST THE PURCHASERS NOT OVER $750, NOW VALUED AT $20,000.

That's the record at Richmond, the only city in California that gave investors the same opportunity for big real estate profits that

EL SEGUNDO
Gives Them Today.
THINK OF THIS.

The Standard Oil Company's great refinery at EL SEGUNDO will be the biggest in the world.

Don't let that fact be overshadowed in your mind by anything that you may see or hear—because it's a fact that means big profits for those who buy property at EL SEGUNDO NOW.

TODAY

The Standard Oil Company, with ONLY ONE unit of its great plant completed, is refining upwards of 20,000 barrels of oil per day at EL SEGUNDO and shipping that oil from its mammoth 4000-ft. pier to South America and the Orient, and is already building another unit of its refinery—to double its present capacity.

RIGHT NOW

The Standard Oil Company is rushing work on its asphalt plant at EL SEGUNDO and will probably be employing about 250 additional workmen within the next 60 or 90 days.

WITHIN A YEAR

The Standard Oil Company, we believe, will be employing approximately 1000 additional workmen at EL SEGUNDO.

10,000 POPULATION.

EL SEGUNDO will have a population of 10,000 almost before you know it, and the lots, quarter-acre, half-acre and acre tracts that you can buy TODAY for a few hundred dollars, will then be worth THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS.

PROFITS FOR YOU.

These profits are YOURS if you are awake to the opportunity. You can shut your eyes and buy property at EL SEGUNDO—anywhere in EL SEGUNDO—and make money.

EASY TERMS

And the best of it is that you can buy property at EL SEGUNDO today on such easy terms that you will be able to realize these profits long before your property is paid for.

VISIT EL SEGUNDO AT OUR EXPENSE.

We want you to see EL SEGUNDO for yourself and get the FACTS at first hand. You can go by auto or by electric car at our expense. But go TODAY. Secure your lot, quarter acre, half-acre or acre tract NOW, while prices are LOW.

You know what Grover Cleveland said: "No investment on earth is so safe, so sure, so certain to enrich its owner as undeveloped realty. I always advise my young friends to place their savings in realty near some growing town. There is no such savings bank anywhere."

THE IMPORTANT THING FOR YOU TO DO, IS TO MAKE THE START—AND BUT LITTLE MONEY IS REQUIRED TO MAKE A START IN EL SEGUNDO.

FOR SALE— Suburban Property.

FOR SALE—

PRE-OPENING SALE.

$50 REWARD.

We are about to place on the market the highest class, most beautiful suburban acreage home sites in all this country. This property lies just south of Van Nuys, in the choicest district in the San Fernando Valley. It fronts on Sherman way and is surrounded by the finest of country home estates. This has never before been offered for sale. It was the first property reserved before the Van Nuys-Lankershim lands were put on the market. Do you realize what opportunity this spells for you? To buy now, the first offering of the choicest land in all this wonderful valley at pre-opening prices, way below the actual opening prices. Our idea is this: We want a name for this subdivision. We want you to name it. We want the people actually interested in its development to share in its success. For one week and one week only this will be offered for sale at these pre-opening prices. Every person lucky enough to secure one of these tracts at these figures will also be allowed to submit ten names for this subdivision. The name of the tract will be taken from these and a cash prize of $50 awarded to the namer.

One thing more, there never was a choice property that wasn't limited. This is extremely limited and nothing more like it in the country. Don't hesitate. Seeing is believing. It's well worth your while to see this, this week. It means a big profit to you to buy before the actual opening. Let us show you the beauties of the grandest spot in California.

Promises That Cost Money.

Promises are easy to make when they don't cost anything. We propose to make every promise in the advertisement cost us something, if we don't keep every promise made and you don't find every condition a fact and as we represent it.

The "Promised Land"

naturally would be the place you would want to go. Patterson Irrigated Farms comes the nearest to have the most essentials conducive to successful and profitable farming than any other project in California.

IN BUYING A FARM

you want to know what can I grow successfully and profitably? We get 7 and 8 crops of alfalfa a year, English walnuts, vines, peaches, pears, apricots, cherries, plums, prunes, garden truck; in fact, everything except citrus fruits grow with vigor. The dairy cows live out all the year round; chickens, ducks, turkeys, pigs and bees vigorously grow and prefer to live in the "Promised Land."

Superior Advantages of

Patterson Irrigated Farms are our soil, 40 to 50 feet deep, absolutely no hardpan or alkali; a concrete canal irrigation gravity system supplies you water the year round; all you want when you want it. A "nature-made" drainage of 10-foot slope to the mile insures your farm for generations and makes irrigation a pleasure. Our climate is delightful and healthy; we are located far above sea level; have no lowlands or swamps. We market our products where a million and a half people live; cheap quick river and railroad transportation. We have telephones, electricity, schools, churches (no saloons,) High School, R.F.D., parcel post and many other advantages. The town of Patterson has shopping conveniences of all kinds and has over 1000 people now and growing fast.

$ $ $ $ for $ $ $ $

We give you honest value, dollar for dollar, for every cent invested at Patterson Irrigated Farms. Our land is leveled ready for crop. We bring irrigation water to your land and put in the headgate. We don't give you something for nothing, nobody does, even if they try to make you think they do.

"Opportunity Terms"

of one-fifth cash down, balance in eleven years.

We Promise

to fulfill every condition herein stated, or we will refund your expenses to and from the Patterson Irrigated Farms. LUNDELIUS & ECCLESTON, INC., 342 S. Hill st., Main [illegible] will explain in detail or send you literature. It's up to you to make us keep our promise.

Florida land for sale, $30 per acre, $1 per acre down and 75 cents per acre monthly payments; no interest or taxes for 23 months; over 200 Southern California people have purchased our land. People ask us every day, How do you do it? Here is the answer. Read this message: Fort Meyers, Florida, Feb. 28, 1912. After four days of careful examination of many sections of land, find it all good; needs to be seen to be fully appreciated; great future for this country; hold all in Sec. 18-40-39 until I come. Signed, A. C. Wright., Los Angeles, Calif. Mr. Wright is on the ground inspecting the land for fourteen buyers—his neighbors and friends in Hollywood and Los Angeles. Mr. Wright also owns orange grove in Rialto and when he left to see our tract was as skeptical as any who have never seen, believed all the stories and was bubbling over with prejudice. We will convince you, if you join our excursion March 15, 1913. We pay your R.R. fare, if you purchase forty acres, or if you interest 12 of your friends, we pay R.R. fare so you can go down and select their land. This surely is a fair proposition and should convince you that we have something good. We have messages and letters from others who have purchased. Will offer them for your inspection. Will also give addresses of Los Angeles citizens who have been down to see. Why delay or let prejudice keep you from investigating? Come to our office for literature. FOR SALE—WHO SAID THEY WANTED A hog ranch, a cattle ranch or an orange grove, or any other uncertain proposition, while the following sure investment is open and for sale?

155 acres, located in one of the prettiest and healthiest valleys in State, 75 miles from S. F. Where the well stay well and the sick can get well. 115 acres level, except a 15-acre, beautifully wooded hill, commanding a view of whole valley, and making a great hotel site. From under this hill flow 15 hot sulphur soda and arsenic springs, ranging in temperature from 60 to 180 degrees, known everywhere for their wonderful curative powers for rheumatism or any blood disease. 40 acres located on hills, heavily wooded, afford the fresh water supply for spring grounds. (Two inches of mountain water, newly piped to springs.) Also another smaller supply of one and one-half inches, newly piped. 115 acres are covered with Bermuda grass, now feeding 50 head of stock. The 40 acres in hills (only 800 ft. from springs) would be great for patients, as a summer camp, as whole tract is covered with finest of shade.

These grounds with very rudest of care are now paying 5 per cent. on $30,000, with a very little improvements will pay 10 per cent. on $50,000, and could be made to pay 20 per cent. on $100,000.

Two railroads run through this property, 10 trains daily to and from S. F.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

The OROSI FARMS

is the name of a choice tract in Tulare county where water, soil, drainage and foothill protection are of the best.

We sell our land in 10-acre tracts—as many as you want—or we will sell a 10-acre tract.

You pay 1-4 cash ($700 to $1000 on 10 acres,) and the balance in 1919. This gives you an opportunity to grow crops that will make you a living and pay out on the land.

We give 20 per cent. discount for cash and we give a special discount for cash any time within four years.

We absolutely guarantee water on every lot.

The Orosi Farms land is safe for oranges. The navel crop is shipped by December 15th. Even nursery stock was not hurt by the recent cold snap.

Diversified crops are the farmer's safeguard. The Orosi Farms soil is choice for oranges, but it is also admirably adapted to the growing of olives, peaches, figs, seedless grapes, table and wine grapes, melons, berries, Turkish tobacco, alfalfa, etc., etc. We will be glad to quote specific instances showing that the above crops yield $100 to $300 an acre. With such returns possible our lands cannot long remain at present prices.

Are you in the market for land? If so, send for our folder with map.

SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY—

FOR SALE—

The OROSI FARMS

is the name of a choice tract in Tulare county where water, soil, drainage and foothill protection are of the best.

We sell our land in 20-acre tracts—as many as you want—or we will sell a 10-acre tract.

You pay 1-4 cash ($700 to $1000 on 10 acres,) and the balance in 1919. This gives you an opportunity to grow crops that will make you a living and pay out on the land.

We give 10 per cent. discount for cash and we give a special discount for cash any time within four years.

We absolutely guarantee water on every lot.

The Orosi Farms land is safe for oranges. The navel crop is shipped by December 15th. Even nursery stock was not hurt by the recent cold snap.

Diversified crops are the farmer's safeguard. The Orosi Farms soil is choice for oranges, but it is also admirably adapted to the growing of olives, peaches, figs, seedless grapes, table and wine grapes, melons, berries, Turkish tobacco, alfalfa, etc., etc. We will be glad to quote specific instances showing that the above crops yield $100 to $300 an acre. With such returns possible our lands cannot long remain at present prices.

Are you in the market for land? If so, send for our folder with map.

GOVERNMENT LAND—

STATE LAND—$2.
FEBRUARY SALES OF STATE LAND that I searched out amounted to several thousand dollars. This State land is selling steadily EVERY MONTH year around. One of the bargains a few months ago in Central California was a section of level, rich, moist, well located land which was bought for less than $2 an acre. Payments on this section less than $100 then and very light future payments. Another party bought land near San Francisco Bay for less than one-sixteenth of its present value. Fine bargains have been bought in counties of Los Angeles, Riverside, San Diego, Fresno, IN FACT, MOST ALL OF THE COUNTIES, but extra good bargains can still be purchased. One man who expects to take his full limit of about three sections of three kinds of State land and 320 acres of U. S. land in 4 or 5 ways, said before witness: "Clark, you certainly give plenty for the small amount I pay you." HE BORROWS MONEY ON TRUST DEED FOR FULL COST OF LAND. He has got many thousands of dollars for a small amount. I will cheerfully give you the name and address of a party who has got more than one piece of State land through me that he would not sell for 20 times its cost, although I urged him to make a QUICK SALE and buy more and TURN HIS MONEY often. I do not want to work for you unless you are interested to the amount of $5. If you trust me with a $5 payment to register to you in about one week one list of State land that you can buy, and a letter of instructions on how to see and buy this land now, I will trust you for a $10 payment until after you buy the land and get ready to pay. (Some have land they refuse to sell for $6000 and have not got ready yet to send me the $10 payment. Some make the excuse that it is not my land. I try to make it plain to all that this is State land, not my land. I have none to sell until the fair.)

I am buying and improving land for my children. Will you do the same? Or will your children "say things" about you not buying land for them because you would not buy what you could now, or shall our children rent from the yellow race? YOU WHO HAVE FAITH IN CALIFORNIA WILL BUY WHAT YOU CAN NOW and profit much by increase in value. Some have lately ordered who have read my ads. for years. WILL YOU TRY AN ORDER NOW? I am sending $40 in checks for three ads. Will you send me $5 to have me register you lists of about 100 pieces nearest town you mention? I try to suit everybody. I do suit many. Don't order me to send you lists, all near kindergarten, high school, prairies, timber, stream, springs, street cars, State road, but write me fully with your order what you prefer. It pays me to suit you. My charges are the same anywhere in State. Any who order now or have ordered will receive free particulars, pointers and a list from over one million acres of school land about 60 days before it comes on the market this year at only $2.50 an acre on LONG TIME PAYMENTS. This is all one price. Idaho does not sell for less than $10 an acre. California does not sell school land for more than $2.50 an acre. Can you see a good opportunity when you know that some of this school land was taken over 30 years ago and now cancelled? I will tell you how to be sure to get the piece you select. I have put in my circulars I advertise only in California papers, for Californians who know California, NOT FOR NEWCOMERS, but some newcomers get hold of my lists and follow my directions and usually get better bargains than the natives who do not believe in California enough to buy more land now, and think they know "no State land now" well located, desirable and valuable. Because they have thought so is one reason it is so. Now is your opportunity before a trust manages to grab all in sight as they have in some States. This offer is limited... I may stop advertising as my satisfied customers nearly keep me busy getting land for their friends.

Write me fully with your order. JOSEPH CLARK, Experienced Searcher State Records, office and residence 1511 K st., Sacramento, Cal.

I WANT TO MEET A PERSON WHO CAN AFFORD TO LOSE $15,000.

The chances are overwhelmingly in favor of your making 5 per cent. per annum on the venture instead of losing. But don't take even this remote chance of loss unless you can afford it.

Handle the money yourself and get back your investment before I participate in the profits.

The project is an absolutely new, perfectly safe, and wonderfully attractive amusement device. I have secured the patent rights for Southern California. It is bound to win in large measure. When installed in any of the beach resorts it will easily pay for itself in less than one season. A rich harvest will be reaped for many years.

I have already applied for concessions in the World's Fair in San Francisco, and in the San Diego Fair.

I am a stranger here, but I can give bank references as to my personal standing and integrity in my home in the East.

Both my project and I will bear the closest scrutiny and investigation. Address C, box 467, TIMES BRANCH OFFICE.

LOOKS GOOD FOR ALFALFA.

Pomona With More Than Seven Thousand Acres in Grass Feels Good Over the Outlook.

POMONA, March 1.—Present indications here indicate bumper hay, grain, and alfalfa crops, following the splendid recent rains, and this will mean considerable to this city. According to estimates, there are about 7500 acres of alfalfa growing in Pomona Valley. Last year the amount raised was 42,000 tons, which represented an aggregate value of well toward $525,000. There are also about 5000 acres sowed to barley which is starting well and which will mean good money to the growers. The diversity of products in Pomona Valley is a matter for comment.

NEWS BRIEFS.

The "Colonial" entertainment given by the ladies of the historic section of the local Ebell Club at the Ebell Clubhouse on North Garey avenue yesterday afternoon, was enjoyed by a large number. Many quaint costumes were worn and heirlooms displayed. The programme consisted of music and readings in keeping with the old colonial days.

W. H. Deeter died at the home of his son-in-law, James E. Bell, No. 906 East Third street, this city. He was visiting here and became ill. The deceased was 76 years old. Interment will be made at the former home in Gibbon, Neb.

Because of the soft condition of the soil during the recent rainy days, the road to the summit of the San Jose hills was closed by Superintendent Paige of the city park department, to prevent accidents. The thoroughfare is now reopened and scores of automobile parties are making the ascent to enjoy the fine view of green foothills and snow-topped mountains in this locality.

A Continent.

POLAR LAND SCIENTISTS SAY.

On Which Modern Man Never Set Foot.

Existence Proved by Tides and Currents.

Stefansson Will Seek Proof of the Theory.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—Scientists and polar explorers here are taking more interest in Vilhjalmar Stefansson's proposed four-year exploration of the Arctic than in any other polar project now contemplated. If the tentative offer of the Canadian government of $75,000 to Stefansson, provided he carries the Canadian flag at the head of his expedition and turns over the general management of the project to the Dominion authorities, is accepted, the explorer's Washington friends will be greatly gratified by the new manifestation of interest in his work. He will enter the Arctic this summer, not only with the financial backing of Canada, but also with the good will of the National Geographic Society of Washington and the American Museum of Natural History of New York, which still are prepared to give him $45,000 if the Canadian offer is not accepted. Stefansson has not informed the Geographic Society as to the result of his conference in Ottawa yesterday with Canadian officials.

Rear-Admiral Robert E. Peary, U.S.N., retired, the discoverer of the North Pole, who collected tidal and other data upon which the theory of an Arctic continent is based by Dr. Rollin A. Harris of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, is interested keenly in the work of Stefânsson. The characteristic of Stefansson which Admiral Peary most likes is his willingness to take the advice of older explorers as to conditions to be faced in the arctic.

IMPRESSED BY JOINT THEORY.

Before deciding to enlarge his prospective journey into the arctic, to include an extensive search for the continent supposed to exist north of Beaufort Sea, Mr. Stefansson, when in Washington in November, had extensive conferences with scientists. Those men feel certain there is land in that region on which the foot of modern man never has been set. Dr. Harris and Maj.-Gen. Adolphus W. Greeley, U.S.A., retired, have reached the same conclusion, reasoning independently, as to the probable existence of such a continent. Stefansson was much impressed by the scientific data supplied by them in support of their theory.

Dr. Harris is the tidal mathematician of the Coast and Geodetic Survey He has assembled the most complete data yet collected on the tidal conditions of the Arctic. He has collated all the known observations of Arctic expeditions, including data obtained by Admiral Peary on his last expedition to the North Pole. Before leaving the United States in 1908 Admiral Peary was ordered by the Secretary of the Navy to report for duty to the Coast and Geodetic Survey. Dr. Harris needed additional facts respecting tidal conditions on the Grand Land and Greenland shores of the Arctic Ocean. Admiral Peary was directed by President Roosevelt to make those observations and did so. It was believed they would throw additional light on the theory long held by Dr. Harris and Maj.-Gen. Greeley that there is a big body of land in the unknown area of the Arctic.

"Since Nansen's discovery of the ocean depths along the track of the Fram, it has been assumed generally," said Dr. Harris, "that deep water covers all or nearly all of the unknown Arctic territory situated to the northward of the known land masses. That such is not the case can be proved conclusively. But there is difficulty in showing with certainty whether land or very shallow water is responsible for certain observed phenomena. There are a few well-established facts which show at once the necessity of land or shoals. At Pt. Barrow, the flood stream comes from the west and not from the north, as the hypothesis of an extended and deep polar basin implies. The range of the semi-daily tide at Bennett Island is 2.5 feet, while it is only .4 feet at Pt. Barrow and .5 feet at Flaxman Island.

AGAINST BIG POLAR BASIN IDEA.

"The observed tidal hours and ranges of tide show that the semi-daily tide is not propagated to the Alaskan coast directly across a deep and uninterrupted polar basin. The tides along the northern coasts of Alaska could not, under the hypothesis of an uninterrupted deep basin, differ materially in time from those occurring on the northern coast of Bennett Island. For, while the distance from the Spitzenbergen Islands and Northeastern Greenland to the Alaskan Coast somewhat exceeds that to Bennet Island, the shoals around this island exceed greatly any likely to occurr off the Alaskan Coast. Notwithstanding the shoal around Bennet Island, the observed tidal hour at Rudder Point, its southern extremity, is 6.6, while the tidal hour at Flaxman is 9.5.

"From various indications it will be assumed that the land in question is trapezoidal in form, and that it contains almost 500,000 square miles. One corner has been placed northward of Bennett Island. This appears to be necessitated by the direction and velocity of the Jeannette during the last five months of her drifting. The small range of diurnal tide at Bennett Island indicates the existence of a large tract of land between this island and the Arctic archipelago of America. Another corner has been placed to the northward of Pt. Barrow. This assumption assists in explaining the eastward set of the flood tide at Pt. Barrow—also the westward drifting of ice, well off the Alaskan coast, observed by Mikkelsen and Leffingwell.

"From this corner the coast line is assumed to trend in an easterly direction nearly to Banks Land, thus forming the northern boundary of Beaufort Sea. Such a boundary is indicated by the westward drifting just mentioned, by the age of ice in Beaufort Sea, by the probable course taken by a cask set adrift off Cape Bathurst and picked up on the northern coast of Norway and by the magnitude and range of the diurnal tide at Pt. Barrow and Flaxman Island.

"Another corner has been placed to the unknown land approaches nearest to the northeast of Banks Land. Whether the known lands at Banks Land, Prince Patrick Island or a point further eastward, seems to be an open question. The fact that the time of tide is only a little later at the mouth of the Mackenzie River than in McClure Strait indicates that the tide in the former locality is not greatly influenced by the tide coming from the latter. This may indicate that the polar land approaches nearer to Banks Land than to Prince Patrick Island.

POLAR COAST LINE UNCERTAIN.

"Another corner has been placed northwest of Grant Land," Dr. Harris continued. "This is indicated by the discovery of Crocker Land by Peary; by a shoaling north of the eighty-fifth parallel observed by him, and perhaps by the eastward drift he encountered in 1902 and 1906. The coast line next the pole is somewhat uncertain in position.

"The existence of early tides at Cape Sheridan does not prove the insularity of Greenland, as has been assumed by some scientists. The sledge journeys of Peary, however, dispelled all doubt on that subject.

"The flood tide at Point Barrow, according to Nansen's hypothesis, has to come from the north and not from the west, as observation has established. The fact that the diurnal tide reaches Point Barrow almost an hour earlier than it reaches Flaxman Island cannot be accounted for by Nansen's theory. The diurnal hour at Bennett Island, according to his hypothesis would be 16 and for Cape Columbia 4 hours. The computed and observed times are in fair agreement for Bennett Island, but the discrepancy is significant for Cape Columbia.

"The decided westward drift observed by Mikkelsen and Leffingwell off the northern coast of Alaska alone is strong evidence against Nansen's hypothesis of an unobstructed polar basin. The westerly direction taken by the Jeannette, especially in the last five months of her drifting, does not suggest unobstructed deep water to the northward of Eastern Siberia. The time required by casks deposited off Point Barrow and off Cape Bathhurst to reach their destinatrons on the northeastern coast of Iceland and the northern coast of Norway, about five and one-half and eight and one-quarter years, respectively, although not disproving, certainly do not favor the hypothesis in question."

CLIMATE REDUCES DEATH RATE.

Soldiers' Home Located in Southern California Makes Better Mortuary Report than Any Other Branch.

SOLDIERS' HOME, March 1.—While the harvest of death goes steadily on thinning the ranks of old heroes at this place, it is—when age is considered — scarcely remarkable that the percentage of mortality here when compared with that of other branches of the home, is in favor of this southland home.

The largest branch, that at Dayton, O., the membership of which is but slightly in excess of this branch, reported for the month of January fifty-one deaths, while the total recorded at this branch was but thirty-nine; "several of which number," says Chief Surgeon-major Haydon, "journeyed to this place in a condition already verging on death, only to pass away within from twenty-four to forty-eight hours after arrival at the hospital."

Advice Wanted.

SIX PLANS FOR PROPOSED BORE.

CITY ENGINEER ASKS ADVICE OF WORKS BOARD.

Latter Body in Turn Refers Subject to City Council—Questions Raised Must Be Answered Before Definite Progress Can Be Made. Propositions Told.

In considering tentative plans for the proposed First-street tunnel, the City Engineer has six different propositions before him. He desires the advice of the Board of Public Works, and has submitted these plans to that commission, which in turn has sent them to the City Council for advice.

The questions raised by the City Engineer must be answered before definite progress can be made, as they do not relate to engineering features, but to the policy to be followed in dealing with the street railway and also the provision that shall be made for the accommodation of traffic between Broadway and Hill street on First.

The City Engineer says conditions surrounding the east portal are such that any one of four plans may be adopted, while at the west portal either of two could be used.

The first plan shows the east portal placed at the east line of Hill street, provisions being made for railway tracks and a driveway on both sides of the approach between Broadway and Hill street. This plan will not permit adjacent property owners to have direct access to the tunnel approach and will necessitate acquiring a strip nineteen feet wide on both sides of First street, between Broadway and Hill. It will require cutting off or removing the fronts of all buildings which stand within nineteen feet of the present property line.

The second proposition provides for a driveway on each side of the approach, but eliminates the railway tracks, it being assumed that cars can use Second street. This plan will not permit adjacent property owners to have direct access to the approach and will require the acquisition of a strip ten feet wide along both sides of First street from Broadway to Hill. It would only be necessary in this case to place the fronts of buildings on an arcade.

Both the railway tracks and the driveways are eliminated in the third plan. This does not require any additional land and will permit the lower stories of all buildings between Broadway and Hill street to be placed at the tunnel grade and open directly into the tunnel approach, but it will shut off all traffic in First street between Broadway and Hill, except to pedestrians, who could reach the Hill-street level by stairway.

The fourth plan shows the portal at the west line of Hill street, the railway being carried down on a concrete or steel structure from Hill to Broadway, the driveways to Hill street eliminated and an approach to the tunnel consisting of a 22-foot roadway and a 10-foot walk on both sides of the railway structure. If this plan is adopted the city will have to acquire an easement for 10-foot sidewalk on each side of First between Broadway and Hill and the fronts of all projecting buildings will have to be supported by columns placed along the present property lines, with the sidewalks placed behind the columns under the fronts of the buildings. This plan will permit adjacent property to have a direct outlet to the tunnel approach. It will be necessary in this case to carry Hill street over First street, at their intersection on a special structure of either steel or concrete. It is believed no other feasible plan can be devised for the east portal.

Considering the west portal, we have the following:

The fifth plan shows the west portal placed forty-four feet west of Figueroa street, and provision is made on each side of the approach for a railway track and driveway. This plan does not permit adjacent property owners to have direct access to the tunnel approach, and if adopted will require the acquisition of a nineteen-foot strip on each side of First street between Figueroa and Fremont avenue. Many of the residents in the vicinity of the proposed west portal have expressed a desire to have short tunnels constructed under Figueroa street, connecting with the First-street tunnel, but the City Engineer believes the public would be better pleased to have the west fifty-four feet of Figueroa street between Second and Diamond, excavated to conform to the grade of the floor of the tunnel and the blocks bounded by Figueroa street, Fremont avenue, Second and Diamond, lowered to conform to the tunnel grade also. It is said all property owners in these blocks are willing to have this done without cost to the city.

The sixth plan shows the west portal placed thirty feet east of the east line of Figueroa street, the west fifty-four feet of Figueroa cut down to conform to the tunnel grade; the railway carried down on a concrete structure from Figueroa to Fremont and a twenty-two-foot approach, and ten-foot walk on each side of the railway structure. This plan would require an additional ten-foot strip on both sides of the approach. It is said the property owners are willing to donate this to the city if this plan is adopted.

Giles bought from Richard Ryse the residence just completed on the northwest corner of Van Ness avenue and Second street. BAN ON ADVERTISEMENTS.

Aqueduct and Exposition Park Programmes to Be Lacking in Commercialism—Great Expectations.

An absolute embargo on commercialising the programmes for the Los Angeles Aqueduct and Exposition Park celebrations was announced yesterday by the Celebration Committee, following a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce. The programmes will carry no advertising, although furnished free to the public. This decision was reached after the chairman of the various subcommittees had gone on record against programme advertising as a nuisance both to those who advertise and those who read the programmes.

Secretary Wiggins, manager of the industrial, civic and military parade, arranged for the Los Angeles end of the aqueduct completion celebration, reported that the parade will be considerably larger than the famous industrial parade of 1908, which was four miles long, required three hours to pass a given point, and consisted of 300 floats, 700 horse-drawn vehicles, fifty Los Angeles-made automobiles, twelve brass bands, 3000 children and displayed products valued at more than $250,000.

Secretary Zeehandelaar of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association declared the association's Made-in-Los Angeles show, which is to be held the same week as the aqueduct celebration, will be the greatest trade exhibit ever held in this city and that the enthusiasm is increasing with the passage of time.

Budgets carrying approximately $2000 for celebration incidentals and the entertainment of distinguished visitors were presented by the various committee chairmen and referred to the Finance Committee for immediate action.

WOULD TAME A RIVER.

Anaheim Board of Trade Seeks Plan to Keep Raging Santa Ana Within Its Banks.

ANAHEIM, March 1.—Active steps are being taken at the present time by the Anaheim Board of Trade Committee in regard to forming a protection district in northern Orange county for the purpose of keeping the Santa Ana River within its bounds.

V. U. Simpson, chairman of the committee having the matter in charge, has presented the petition for approval to the Orange County Supervisors and also a map of the proposed district. Roughly the line follows the northern bank of the river from a point in the Santa Ana Canyon north of Olive to the Newbert protection district and thence down to near the ocean. The line extends along the base of the hills north of Fullerton and west to near Northam, where it strikes the Los Angeles boundary line and follows this to within four miles of the ocean and at this point it turns in a southeasterly direction and joins the other boundary near Sunset Beach. The route of the line has been gone over by City Surveyor Stewart and members of the Board of Trade and all disputed points verified.

RANGE OF SOIL.

To show that the soil production is larger than that of any other portion in the Southland will be one of the aims of a three-days' farmers' institute to be held in Anaheim in the near future. The Board of Trade has just extended to J. B. Neff, conductor of the farmers' institutes in Southern California, an invitation to hold one of his meetings at this point. Mr. Neff stated yesterday that he would be most happy to comply with the request and that he would arrange to have several noted speakers in attendance who are connected with the State University.

The display of products which will at that time be made promises to eclipse anything along this line that has been attempted at a similar meeting in the State. These exhibits will not be made from this vicinity alone but from other points, including Fullerton, Buena Park, Olive, Placentia, Villa Park, Los Alamitos, Garden Grove and the Peatlands.

VOTE SECRETARY OUT OF OFFICE.

CALLS THE ROLL AT HIS OWN EXECUTION.

He Refuses to Resign and Civil Service Commission Declares Position Vacant—Competitive Examination to Be Held Within Three Weeks to Select Successor.

The Civil Service Commission is without a secretary. At a meeting yesterday afternoon all five of the commissioners voted to declare the office vacant, and William D. Spalding, who had to call the roll at his own official execution, arose from the table shorn of the office which he has filled for almost two years.

The session was a painful one for all participating. Spalding made a stand for the purpose of protecting his reputation from unjust attacks or reflections, which he says he felt would be made by the proposed action of the board, and members of the commission declared that they felt impelled to act, in view of previous understandings with their secretary, for the purpose of giving the commission's work greater efficiency.

Spalding declared the demand for his resignation was practically a discharge on two day's notice, while the commissioners declared that he was aware of their attitude six months ago, and that they had only postponed action until after the discussion over recent investigation of the entire civil service bureau had subsided, in order that no aspersions might be cast on Spalding.

At a special meeting Thursday, Commissioner Stephens moved that Spalding be requested to hand in his resignation by Saturday. This motion was carried.

Stephens said yesterday he took this stand because the subject had been under discussion at almost every meeting for the past six months, and he felt the commission should make a definite decision.

After that meeting, President Haynes notified Spalding of what had transpired in secret session, and later Spalding sent to Haynes a letter in which he declared he felt the action unwarranted and would refuse to resign without the members of the commission making public their reasons for demanding his removal. Hence yesterday's called meeting.

Haynes and Cochran said at this meeting that when the former secretary, W. A. Spalding, father of William D. Spalding, asked for a leave of absence, he requested that his son be given the position; but that they agreed to place the son in the position temporarily with the understanding that when they could get a man with more experience, or wished him to resign, he would do so without objection.

The statement was made that the board felt young Spalding had not sufficient experience to manage the civil service work in a city like Los Angeles, and that committee work was delayed because of his interpretation of office rules. Express statements were made by the members of the commission that there was no charge or imputation against the character or reputation of the secretary.

Spalding asserted that while there had been discussions as to alleged friction in office work, he had met the commission at stated times for investigation, and that three of the members had told him they were satisfied with his conduct of the office.

"I couldn't possibly resign on two days' notice," said Spalding to the commission. "It would invite unjust criticism and indicate that there was something back of the surface charges. I value my reputation too much to do this. If you will allow me thirty days I will gladly tender my resignation to take effect then."

When Spalding refused to recede from this attitude Stephens moved, seconded by Bellows, that the office be declared vacant, and all the commissioners voted for the motion. The meeting was adjourned and Spalding retired.

Spalding will take up the practice of law. It is general comment at the City Hall that members of the Civil Service Commission desire to secure John J. Hamilton who was secretary of the late Board of Freeholders, as secretary of the commission, but the announcement has been made that the commission intends to hold a competitive examination for candidates. As this will not be done within three weeks, Hamilton may be given the position of temporary secretary.

HOUSE AND LOT SALES.

Bryan & Bradford report recent sales as follows: Southeast corner of Union avenue and Washington street to Mrs. Cora Freeze $17,500, purchaser to improve with large apartment building; three lots in the Fair Oaks tract, Pasadena, corner Olive drive and Layton street, $5500; lots in the I. N. Van Nuys tract, to W. D. Wolcott, $1500; R. Corbin, $1500; A. McCleary, $5300; house at No. 141 Robinson street, to Mrs. McMahon, $5600; house at No. 1807 Ninth avenue, to J. H. Devaux, $5700; lot, Wilshire Heights, to Anna M. Bixby, $7250; lot, Wilshire Heights, to Stafford Bixby, $4100.

STARVING AMIDST PLENTY.

Seven People Found Destitute Within a Few Blocks of the Center of Ontario—News Briefs.

ONTARIO, March 1.—City officials and local charitable institutions received a rude shock when a family of seven, mostly women and small children, were found literally starving to death within seven blocks of the very center of the city.

The discovery of the pitiful condition of the family was made by D. D. MacDonald, who, upon finding a decrepit old Mexican woman accompanied by a small child sitting in the gutter on a business street this morning, questioned her in Spanish and learned that she had had nothing substantial to eat for several weeks. She spoke also of a large family and MacDonald took the woman and child in his touring car and hunted up an officer.

The woman directed them to her home on East Grove street, where a family of one man and six women and children were found in a pitiful condition. Most of the children were suffering so from hunger that they had taken to bed, and one young woman held in her arms a 3-day-old infant.

The only thing eatable that could be found in the house was a portion of a sack of flour. The old woman sobbed out a story of how her son-in-law had deserted them in time of need, while her husband was found to be suffering from an old fracture of the leg which had never been properly attended to, and unable to work.

MacDonald and the officers at once sent in a load of provisions and their case has been referred to the charitable organizations of the city, who were greatly shocked to learn of a family starving in the midst of plenty.

PRIEST THIRTY YEARS.

The Rev. Father F. X. Becker, priest of St. George's Roman Catholic Church, this city, was the recipient of many hearty congratulations yesterday at his home, No. 311 West D street, it being the occasion of the thirtieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

Father Becker celebrated the happy occasion very quietly at home, but received a number of visitors, who brought with them sincere congratulations and tokens of affection. Chief among the congratulatory messages from a distance was that of the Rev. Father Richard A. Gleason, president of the Los Angeles College of Jesuits.

SOCIAL HYGIENICS.

Under the direction of the County Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association a campaign in social hygienics has been planned and in connection with this Dr. Lyman Beecher Sperry, an expert on sexual hygiene, and a lecturer of national reputation, will arrive in the county Sunday for a week's engagement, which he will open with a meeting for men and boys over the age of 15 at Westminster Presbyterian Church here at 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon.

On Monday he will address grammar school boys between the ages of 12 and 15 upon the subject "The Making of an Athlete," and will give a short talk to High School boys on the same day. On Wednesday, Dr. Sperry will address the Parent-Teacher associations of the city on the subject, "New Conditions and Duties of Parents and Teachers."

The President-elect has a larger family than has heretofore occupied the White House, and an amendment has been added to the appropriation bill by Congress, providing $9000 for raising the roof of the executive mansion to provide several more sleeping rooms in the attic. The appropriation is in addition to an extraordinary allowance of $15,000, also carried in the sundry civil bill, to be used in redecorating the interior of the White House.

LOS ANGELES CHARTER CHANGES.

Impelling Reasons for the Amendments of the Citizens' Committee of One Thousand, Marked on the Ballot 11 to 18—Vote for a Representative Form of Government.

BY JOSEPH H. CALL.

THAT the reign of corruption in San Francisco under Eugene Schmitz and Abe Ruef was consummated under a so-called "commission system" of government, similar to that imitated later in Los Angeles, is a remarkable fact, but one not generally understood.

The charter of San Francisco, adopted by the city in 1898, confirmed by the Legislature, January 25, 1899 (Laws of 1899, page 241,) provided for a board of eighteen commissioners or supervisors, elected at large by the whole city, in which every form of local representation was denied, and conferred upon the Mayor the absolute power to appoint all executive boards and most executive officers.

Ruef and Schmitz were notorious "reformers" and the charter they operated under was calculated to establish and perpetuate the entire political power of the city in a single boss who could dictate nominations of Supervisors or commissioners and control appointments through the Mayor.

What can be accomplished under such a system is a history in this State and is written in the official reports of the courts in criminal prosecutions and graft cases, which arose under the Ruef and Schmitz regime.

San Francisco was the first large city in the United States, so far as I know, where such a system was established and where the people were denied local representation upon the Council.

The charter revisionists thought best to follow the San Francisco system in Los Angeles, and they succeeded four years ago in establishing in Los Angeles the Schmitz and Ruef system of government, which consists in having a small Council or governing body elected at large from the whole city, and in conferring upon the Mayor the power to appoint administrative boards and executive officers.

IMITATION CONCEALED.

The fact that the Los Angeles reformers were imitating the San Francisco system was studiously concealed from the people, while the claim was pressed upon the voters that republican government could be most successfully carried on by denying local representation upon the Council and taking from voters their chief political power.

What has been accomplished in Los Angeles during the past four years under the San Francisco "system" is well known, but a few of the achievements may be briefly mentioned:

The "system" maintains 400 closely-printed pages of penal ordinances under which citizens of Los Angeles can be fined and imprisoned for the most ordinary and innocent acts of life.

The great harbor at San Pedro and Wilmington was acquired by the city of Los Angeles more than three and one-half years ago and the city then came into control and possession of 19,000 feet of protected water front, capable of being made into 60,000 feet by construction of slips.

It was promised by the city, and understood by all the people, that the great railroad monopoly by which freight rates to the East were fixed in combination and by which water competition was suppressed was to be immediately broken by the construction of municipal docks and a railroad or highway to the water front.

Nearly four years of time and $3,000,000 of bond money voted by the people have not operated to give us any wharf where ships can dock, nor any railroad or macadamized road to the water front, nor are we likely to have any for years to come, unless there is a radical change in our methods and in our governing body.

The railroad combination still exists unbroken, independent ship lines cannot get freight into Los Angeles in competition with the railroads, and Los Angeles is losing millions of dollars a year in excess freight rates owing to this monopoly.

OUR EXCESSIVE TAXES.

We have seen our City Council—genuinely able and conscientious men, but out of touch with local conditions — levy excessive taxes and repeated special assessments not desired by the people, and most of which taxes and assessments would not have been levied under a representative Council elected from districts.

In four years the San Francisco system increased taxes in this city more than 50 per cent. and created a great multitude of boards and salaried officers.

In Los Angeles under this system, without local representation, there has developed in four years the Blue Law system of penal ordinances under which citizens can be imprisoned for the most usual and innocent acts of life; also the Exposition Park assessment, covering 38,000 pieces of property, and the high-line aqueduct, costing this city many millions and calculated mainly to benefit outside property as far east as San Dimas.

Under the San Francisco system we have seen the City Council of Los Angeles in all solemnity submit a new charter to the city to be voted on, which authorized the purchase of all of the railroads, power companies and electric lines in the State of California, and authorized bonds of the city of Los Angeles to be issued to pay for them, and containing many other astonishing and novel propositions in government, which at large expense was overwhelmingly defeated by the voters of this city.

The best and most economically-governed cities of the world in the half a million to a million class are such cities as Glasgow, which has seventy-eight Councilmen, Edinburgh, which has forty-one members, Burmingham, which has seventy-two members; Liverpool, which has sixty-four members; Leeds, which has sixty-four members, and Manchester—the best-governed of them all—which has 104 members; these members are all elected by districts, and these cities are governed under a republican representative system.

THE EIGHT AMENDMENTS.

The Citizens' Committee has prepared and submitted eight charter amendments which are numbered upon the ballot as numbers eleven to eighteen, inclusive, and the main purpose of these amendments is to abolish the San Francisco system of government in Los Angeles and to restore a republican and representative form of government.

Charter Amendment No. 17 provides for a City Council of twenty-one members, of whom six are elected at large, and fifteen by districts, each district being of uniform population as nearly as possible.

Charter Amendment No. 16 establishes a harbor district around the harbor, to be controlled by a board of harbor commissioners of three members, elected by the citizens of the city, and not appointed by the Mayor, to have salaries of $3600 per year each, with power to design and construct a harbor and a municipal railroad, and to operate both for the public good.

In order to remove conflict of jurisdiction, the harbor commissioners have been given the power in the harbor district now possessed by the Board of Public Works.

The board is given power to fix rates and licenses in the harbor district subject to correction by the City Council within sixty days.

As to leases of water front, the present charter authorizes leases of tidelands for thirty years and of water front for fifteen years, but it has been found that no one will lease water front upon the harbor and construct adequate docks under leases expiring in fifteen years because the time is not sufficient to enable the lessee to pay for the docks which go to the city when the leases terminate. We therefore propose to allow leases to be made for forty years of a portion of the water front, and to make leases at a public letting to the highest bidder.

The city of Los Angeles has litigated the water front and tidelands upon the harbor for four years, but so far has recovered nothing, and the courts have upheld the power to lease tidelands and water front.

Of the actual frnotage on the harbor which the city owns, and which is not held by third parties and not litigated, there are 2700 feet upon the inner harbor at Wilmington available only for light draft vessels; on the outer harbor are 10,000 feet on the Huntington fill, known as "Municipal Dock No. 1," 1000 feet reserved to the city upon the Miner fill and 5000 feet upon the 146-acre tract owned by the city.

This makes 19,000 feet altogether of water front on the government harbor lines which the city owns and of this 19,000 feet all but 2700 feet is on the outer harbor.

MUNICIPAL DOCK.

Our harbor amendment No. 16, which we submit, reserves Municipal Dock No. 1 or the Huntington fill, of 10,000 feet, or which will contain 10,000 feet when the proposed slip is constructed. The municipal dock at Wilmington of about 1600 feet is reserved in perpetuity to the city under the provisions of Section 2, subdivision 41 of the present charter, which we have not changed, it being a reserved dock or wharf of the city.

Besides the Huntington fill, our charter amendment reserves one-half of the residue, that is, reserves every alternate 2000 feet of frontage and authorizes the other alternate frontage to be leased.

To recapitulate: The water front reserved by No. 16 under the charter as now proposed to be amended, is as follows:

Wilmington dock	1,600 feet
Huntington fill or Municipal Dock No. 1	10,000 feet
One-half of residue	3,700 feet
Total reserved	15,300 feet

Total subject to lease under No. 16, 3700 feet, which will make 15,000 feet of deep water wharfage by building slips.

The city may recover some additional water front, and if so, one-half can be leased and one-half will be reserved.

The railroads and corporations which control, hold more than three-fourths of the entire water front upon the outer harbor and inner harbor, and the city holds less than one-fourth.

We have thought it advisable not to reserve all of the property owned by the city, because it is not contemplated to actually build for several years more than 10,000 feet of dockage, to be at Huntington fill. We are not in favor of closing up the harbor, but of leasing that part which is not to be built or improved by the city.

The City Council seeks to defeat the Citizens' Committee Amendment No. 16, relating to the harbor, by proposing an alternative charter amendment which they have designated as "No. 9," and in this amendment it is proposed to continue the San Francisco system of having the Mayor appoint Harbor Commissioners, and they propose that the salaries of the Harbor Commissioners shall be such as the Council sees fit to pay them, and furthermore, they propose by this amendment to plug up and to reserve in perpetuity all of the water front upon the outer and inners harbors so that none of it can be leased.

If under the present system of electing the Council at large and appointing Harbor Commissioners and all other boards by the Mayor, the harbor has been plugged up for four years, is it not reasonable to assume that under a similar system it will be plugged up for the next four years?

There are only 19,000 feet of water front owned by the city all told. Under the Council's amendment No. 9, the Wilmington dock remains reserved. The amendment then provides that there shall also be reserved 10,000 feet of water front and continuous tidelands and then orders a reservation of the Huntington Dock or Municipal Dock No. 1, making an aggregate of 21,600 feet reserved in perpetuity, whereas the city as stated, holds all told only 19,000 feet upon both the outer and inner harbors.

The proposition of the Council is perfectly plain—to absolutely prevent Palatial Berkeley Square Home of Insurance Man to Be One of Finest in Los Angeles.

One of the finest houses projected in Los Angeles during the past year, the palatial home of Lee A. Phillips, vice-president of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, is nearing completion in the exclusive Berkeley Square district. The dwelling, which will be one of the residence show places of the city, will be occupied by the owner next fall. Phillips and his family expect to leave Los Angeles on July 1 for a tour of Europe and will enter the new home immediately upon their return.

The home at present occupied by the insurance man, a beautiful house at No. 4 Berkeley Square, was sold by Phillips to a local capitalist about two months ago through the agency of Harold S. Cook & Co., the deal being reported exclusively in The Times. The consideration in the sale was given at $80,000.

The new Phillips place was planned by the architectural firm of Hunt & Burns, under whose supervision it is being constructed. It is considerably larger than the place soon to be vacated, containing a total of twenty-two rooms. The house is 131x88 feet in size. The lower story is of brick, with ruffled brick facing and the upper floor of heavy timber and plaster exterior. The interior is being richly finished in hardwoods and the plans call for a number of fine fireplaces. The grounds are large and sightly and are being elaborately landscaped.

SOUTHWEST STREET OPENING TO BE PEACEFUL.

Railway Men, Property Owners and City Get Together on Santa Barbara-Avenue-Widening Plan—Expensive Condemnation Suits Are Avoided as Result.

The acceptance last Wednesday by the City Council of maps and deeds for the opening and widening of Santa Barbara avenue to a ninety-foot boulevard marked the conclusion of an interesting and unusual chapter in street condemnation proceedings. Through the efforts of L. E. Shepherd, president of the Southwest Land Company, the opening and dedication of the avenue to the city of Los Angeles was secured without any expense to the taxpayers. At the same time a condemnation suit begun by the city in 1910 against thousands of property owners, and until now pending, was dismissed.

The property involved in the condemnation proceedings under the assessment district originally formed to pay for the opening of Santa Barbara avenue from Grand avenue to the western city boundary, consisted of a strip four miles long and half a mile wide, running from the west city boundary to a point east of San Pedro street.

This territory, had the condemnation proceedings prevailed, would have been called upon to raise the estimated sum of $1,250,000, as the land to be taken was owned largely by the Los Angeles Railway Company, in succession of interest to the old Los Angeles and Redondo right of way. The company owned in perpetuity rights to a strip of land from forty to ninety feet wide over all that portion of the proposed boulevard from Vermont avenue to the west city boundary.

The condemnation suit begun by the city to dispossess the railway company of this strip was the beginning of costly litigation now ended, the dismissal of this suit being a part of the agreement.

Shepherd, himself interested as a property owner, early saw the magnitude of the task involved in the condemnation proceedings, and cast about for a better method of securing the desired results. He began over a year ago, by getting the co-operation of the railway company, the legal department of the city of Los Angeles, the Board of Public Works, the City Engineer's office, and some of the more heavily interested property owners. After a year of endeavor Shepherd secured the necessary deeds, and the signature to the map, whereby the strip desired was dedicated to the city.

It is stated that thirteen separate signatures were required in deeding one small parcel of land, one of the owners being in the navy, another in Washington, D. C., several in the northern part of the State. This slow and tedious work was necessary in many cases before the requisite signatures were secured. Many property owners were induced unselfishly to deed over strips for which they would have received large sums under condemnation proceedings.

COMPANIES TO COMBINE.

Seven-Ton Motor Truck Will Be Leader Manufactured by Consolidated Concerns at Torrance.

The option by which the new Pacific Metal Products Company, which is building an auto truck factory at Torrance, will take over the F. L. Moore Motor Truck Company, will be taken up shortly after March 1. Under the plans of the Union Tool Company officers, which company is behind the Pacific Metal Products concern, the capital stock of the consolidation will be $1,250,000.

More than 400 men will be employed. The company will produce over 1000 motor trucks a year, according to the officials of the concern. Seven-ton trucks will be made a leader.

The men who are bringing about the consolidation are Edward Double, president and managing director of the Union Tool Company, and F. L. Moore and Irvin W. Benton of the Moore company.

Some weeks ago the Pacific Metal Products Company began the erection of a two-story steel, concrete and glass factory at Torrance, but work has been stopped on the new factory, as the needs of the consolidated companies require a much larger plant. In the plant now planned practically every part of the motor trucks will be constructed under the roofs of the company, instead of having the Union Tool Company do a large part of the machine work.

IN NEW OFFICES.

The Pacific Home Builders have moved to Nos. 333-337 Hill street, offices occupied many years by the Los Angeles Investment Company and the Globe Savings Bank. The offices have been reconstructed, refitted and refurnished to consolidate the many departments of the Pacific Home Builders.

Crescenta-Canyada Districts Coming to Fore.

Transportation Assured and Water Developed.

Great Future in Sight for Verdugo Canyon.

Decades of neglect have ended [illegible] the Verdugo Canyon district north of Glendale. This section, one of the most beautiful in Los Angeles county, is now well launched on a period of development founded on an apparently assured water supply and the certainty that transportation facilities will soon be provided.

There was a boom in these lands once before, but it differed from the present movement in some highly important particulars. About thirty years ago real estate operators noticed the splendid situation of La Crescenta, La Canada and Verdugo Valleys, about twelve miles [illegible] north of Los Angeles, between San Fernando and Pasadena, and some large tracts, cut up into ten and twenty-acre farms, were sold at as high as $300 to $400 an acre.

Before water was developed or transportation provided, however, the great collapse of real estate values in the vicinity of Los Angeles that occurred during the 'eighties killed all activities in the three valleys. Some farming was done, and a few families with large holdings lived amid idyllic surroundings on large estates, but the tremendous progress of the remainder of the county was little felt back of the Verdugo hills. Three years ago land in the district could be bought in any quantity for $100 an acre and less.

There was a tradition that water could not be developed north of Verdugo Canyon in paying quantities. Drilled wells had not been very successful. Robert A. Walton of Los Angeles, one of the present-day developers of the district, decided to determine what foundation existed for this tradition. Instead of drilling he sunk a well 4x6 feet in size. Water, he states, was struck at twenty-three feet, and in such quantities that only by the installation of large pumps that were kept working night and day were workmen enabled to go deeper.

At seventy-nine feet 250 feet of tunnels seven feet high and five feet wide were run out. The results are declared to be most encouraging.

RIVERSIDE IS LAUDED IN STATE BLUE BOOK.

Facts and Figures Concerning One of the Richest Counties.

Secretary of State Presents Interesting Information and Gives Number of Orange, Lemon and Deciduous Fruit Trees, Cultivated Acreage, Etc.—Ranks Near Top of List in Citrus Industry—Comments.

SACRAMENTO, Feb. 28.—Riverside county ranked in 1910 among the fifty-eight counties of California:

Third in number of bearing orange trees, 1,021,957.

Third in orange product 2,006,902 boxes.

Fourth in value of hay and forage products, $1,624,675.

Fourth in olive product, 1,281,970 pounds.

Fourth in honey product, 902,106 pounds.

Fifth in lemon product, 804,683 boxes.

Sixth in value of fruit and nut product, $2,393,371.

Seventh in acreage in barley, 56,946.

Ninth in value of all crops, $5,133,576.

The above are a few of the things credited to Riverside county by figures compiled by Secretary of State Jordan for publication in the State Blue Book. This county holds a particular interest because it embraces varied geographical and topographical features, climate, scenery, soil, agricultural, horticultural and mineral resources.

With a land area of 4,633,600 acres, Riverside county in 1910 had 520,806 acres in farms, and the value of all farm property was $46,203,795. This showed an increase in ten years of $24,559,764, or 112.5 per cent. Domestic animals on farms had a value of $1,987,237 and those not on farms $398,921. The receipts from the sale of animals for the year amounted to $328,623, while the number of cattle, horses, mules, sheep and hogs was 45,383.

The milk product amounted to 1,643,799 gallons, and the value of the dairy product was $239,917. The poultry raised numbered 95,767, and the egg product amounted to 438,099 dozen. The value of the poultry and egg product was $182,490. The butter product for the year ending September 30, 1911, was 105,933 pounds. There were 18,900 colonies of bees, and the honey product was 902,106 pounds and the value of the honey product $62,337. The value of the wool product was $2600.

All crops are given a total value of $5,133,576. The cereal crop was valued at $895,051; the hay and forage crop, $1,624,675; vegetables, $133,199; fruit and nuts, $2,393,371. There were 73,236 acres planted in cereals; 372 acres in corn; 3767 acres in oats; 11,817 acres in wheat; 56,946 acres in barley; 38,420 acres in hay and forage; 12,904 acres in alfalfa.

In a horticultural way, Riverside had 220,723 bearing orchard fruit trees; 1,224,217 bearing tropical fruit trees; and 24,940 bearing nut trees. There were 1,021,957 bearing orange trees; 115,020 bearing lemon trees; 80,572 bearing olive trees; 2054 bearing fig trees; 1,570,794 bearing grapevines; 10,577 bearing apple trees; 72,933 bearing peach and nectarine trees; 18,447 bearing pear trees; 34,357 bearing plum and prune trees; 53,069 bearing apricot trees.

The total orchard fruit product was 301,493 bushels. The grape product amounted to 12,133,389 pounds; small fruit product, 123,772 quarts; nut product, 230,581 pounds; peach product, 77,138 bushels; pear product, 13,424 bushels; plum product, 54,873 bushels; apricot product, 148,159 bushels; fig product, 73,796 pounds; orange product, 2,006,902 boxes; lemon product 804,683 boxes; olive product, 1,281,970 pounds; almond product, 168,570 pounds; walnut product, 64,491 pounds.

The mineral product in 1910 amounted to $507,408.

Secretary Jordan tells of the lofty mountains from which cool streams descend to supply surface or underground water with which to irrigate the great fertile valleys along their slopes. On the western side is the principal population, and over the broad mesas many thousand acres are compactly planted to oranges and lemons; and among these are orchards of olive, apricot, peach and plum, and vineyards of wine and raisin grapes. Every plant known to the temperate and semi-tropic zones.

In Southern California water is essential to successful cultivation, and this county claims the oldest water rights, and an abundant supply, the distribution of which is managed by an almost faultless system, and the rights to which are owned by the people themselves, and which as a rule are appurtenant to the land itself. But the county offers not only in its fruit growing industry an opportunity for the safe investment of capital, but also an opening for the farmer, the stock and chicken raiser, miner and business man. There are good schools, numerous churches and public libraries, commendable public buildings, good roads and streets, and all else that stands for civic progress.

Riverside, the county seat, is cited as the "City Beautiful" because of the general plan of municipal ornamentation which has been followed. It claims to have more miles of oiled macadam roads than any other community of like size. It claims to have more money invested in school buildings; to have planted more trees for municipal beautification; one of the finest mountain automobile drives in the world. It boasts an excellent railway system, a bountiful supply of water, unsurpassed climate.

West Riverside, across the Santa Ana River, is an enterprising settlement, where are still some of the old mission adobe buildings built when the Indians used to come out of the San Bernardino Mountains and from the Mojave Desert, and make raids on the cattle of the Mexican residents. Arlington is a near-by town, and Victoria avenue and Magnolia avenue, connecting Arlington with Riverside, are among the most beautiful country drives to be found anywhere.

Mention is made of other sections, among them Highgrove, a station on three transcontinental railways and standing in the center of a productive area; Corona, the second city in the county, famed for its lemon groves; Elsinore, 1300 feet above sea level and famed for its hot springs; Hemet, near the center of one of the famed valleys of the Southland; San Jacinto, one of the oldest towns in Southern California, and one of the few towns in the south producing lime of commerce for shipment; and the Perris Valley, Lakeview, Allessandro, Ethanac and Winchester; Beaumont, at the summit of San Gorgonio Pass; Banning, at the gateway of Southern California; Coachella Valley, and the settlements of Indio, Coachella, Thermal and Mecca.

The Blue Book article is replete with interesting information. It will stand probably as one of the most complete articles on Riverside county that has ever been contained within a State publication. Commenting on it Secretary Jordan says:

"After reading of Riverside, one cannot help feeling that here is a county whose progress in recent years has been little short of marvelous. This county can take pride in the fact, too, that it stands on its merits. No partiality has been shown in preparing the Riverside article; I have stuck to facts throughout. These facts are taken from reliable authorities, the same authorities used in preparing similar articles on every county in the State. My aim has been, not to favor a particular county, but to tell of the greatness of all, producing a completed series of county articles, which I hope will prove a worthy indication of the wonderful resources, opportunities and progress of the entire State of California. It has been a pleasure to write of Riverside county, and a pleasure to know that this county has contributed a full quota to the completed county series."

RAIN APPRECIATED.

Will Result in Large Crops of Fruit, Vegetables and Beets, Say Van Nuys Growers.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

VAN NUYS, March 1.—Van Nuys received a generous share of the record-breaking rainfall that visited Southern California the past week. The precipitation for the storm was seven inches. Most of the land around the town was plowed and in the best possible condition to absorb the moisture. Although the water was high along the washes, little damage was done. The rains assure a great crop of fruit, vegetables, melons and sugar beets.

The American Beet Sugar Company has about 7500 acres planted in the Van Nuys field this season. The seeding is almost completed and thinners are already at work.

Two new residences were started in Van Nuys the past week. G. A. Lemay, who purchased ten lots a few weeks ago has bought fourteen more, and will erect residences for himself and for his son-in-law. Work was commenced on one on East Broadway Thursday. J. W. Charlton of Santa Ana started a home on East G street.

Preparations are under way for the annual celebration of Poppy Day at Van Nuys early in April. It is planned to make this the greatest celebration ever held in the San Fernando Valley.

LIBRARY ASSURED.

Huntington Beach Soon to Join Long List of Municipalities Boasting Carnegie Gift Buildings.

HUNTINGTON BEACH, March 1.—Huntington Beach is to have a new Carnegie library. All the conditions put forth by the Carnegie Corporation, which has charge of the placing of these libraries around the country, have been met by the Council at the beach city, and this body has but to formally accept when the $10,000 to build the building will be forthcoming. Plans have already been made and a site at the corner of Eighth street and Walnut avenue has been secured.

Now that the final survey for the Coast boulevard from Bay City to Balboa has been made, actual construction of this scenic road along the Orange county coast will, it is expected, begin within a short time. Plans for the bridge to span Anaheim Landing have been asked for by the Board of Supervisors. The road will follow closely along the right of way of the Pacific Electric through Bay City, Sunset Beach, Huntington Beach, Newport to Balboa. From here there will be a ferry across to Balboa Island, thence across a new bridge to the mainland, where it will connect with the new county road now being built through Laguna Beach and Arch Rock to San Juan Capistrano.

OUT FOR THEMSELVES.

J. E. Okell and W. B. Sorer, formerly superintendents under H. Gordon Badger, of the subdivision department of Robert Marsh & Co., have opened an office in Santa Monica under the name of Okell & Sorer. They will transact a general real estate and investment business and also will handle the Santa Monica office of Robert Marsh & Co.

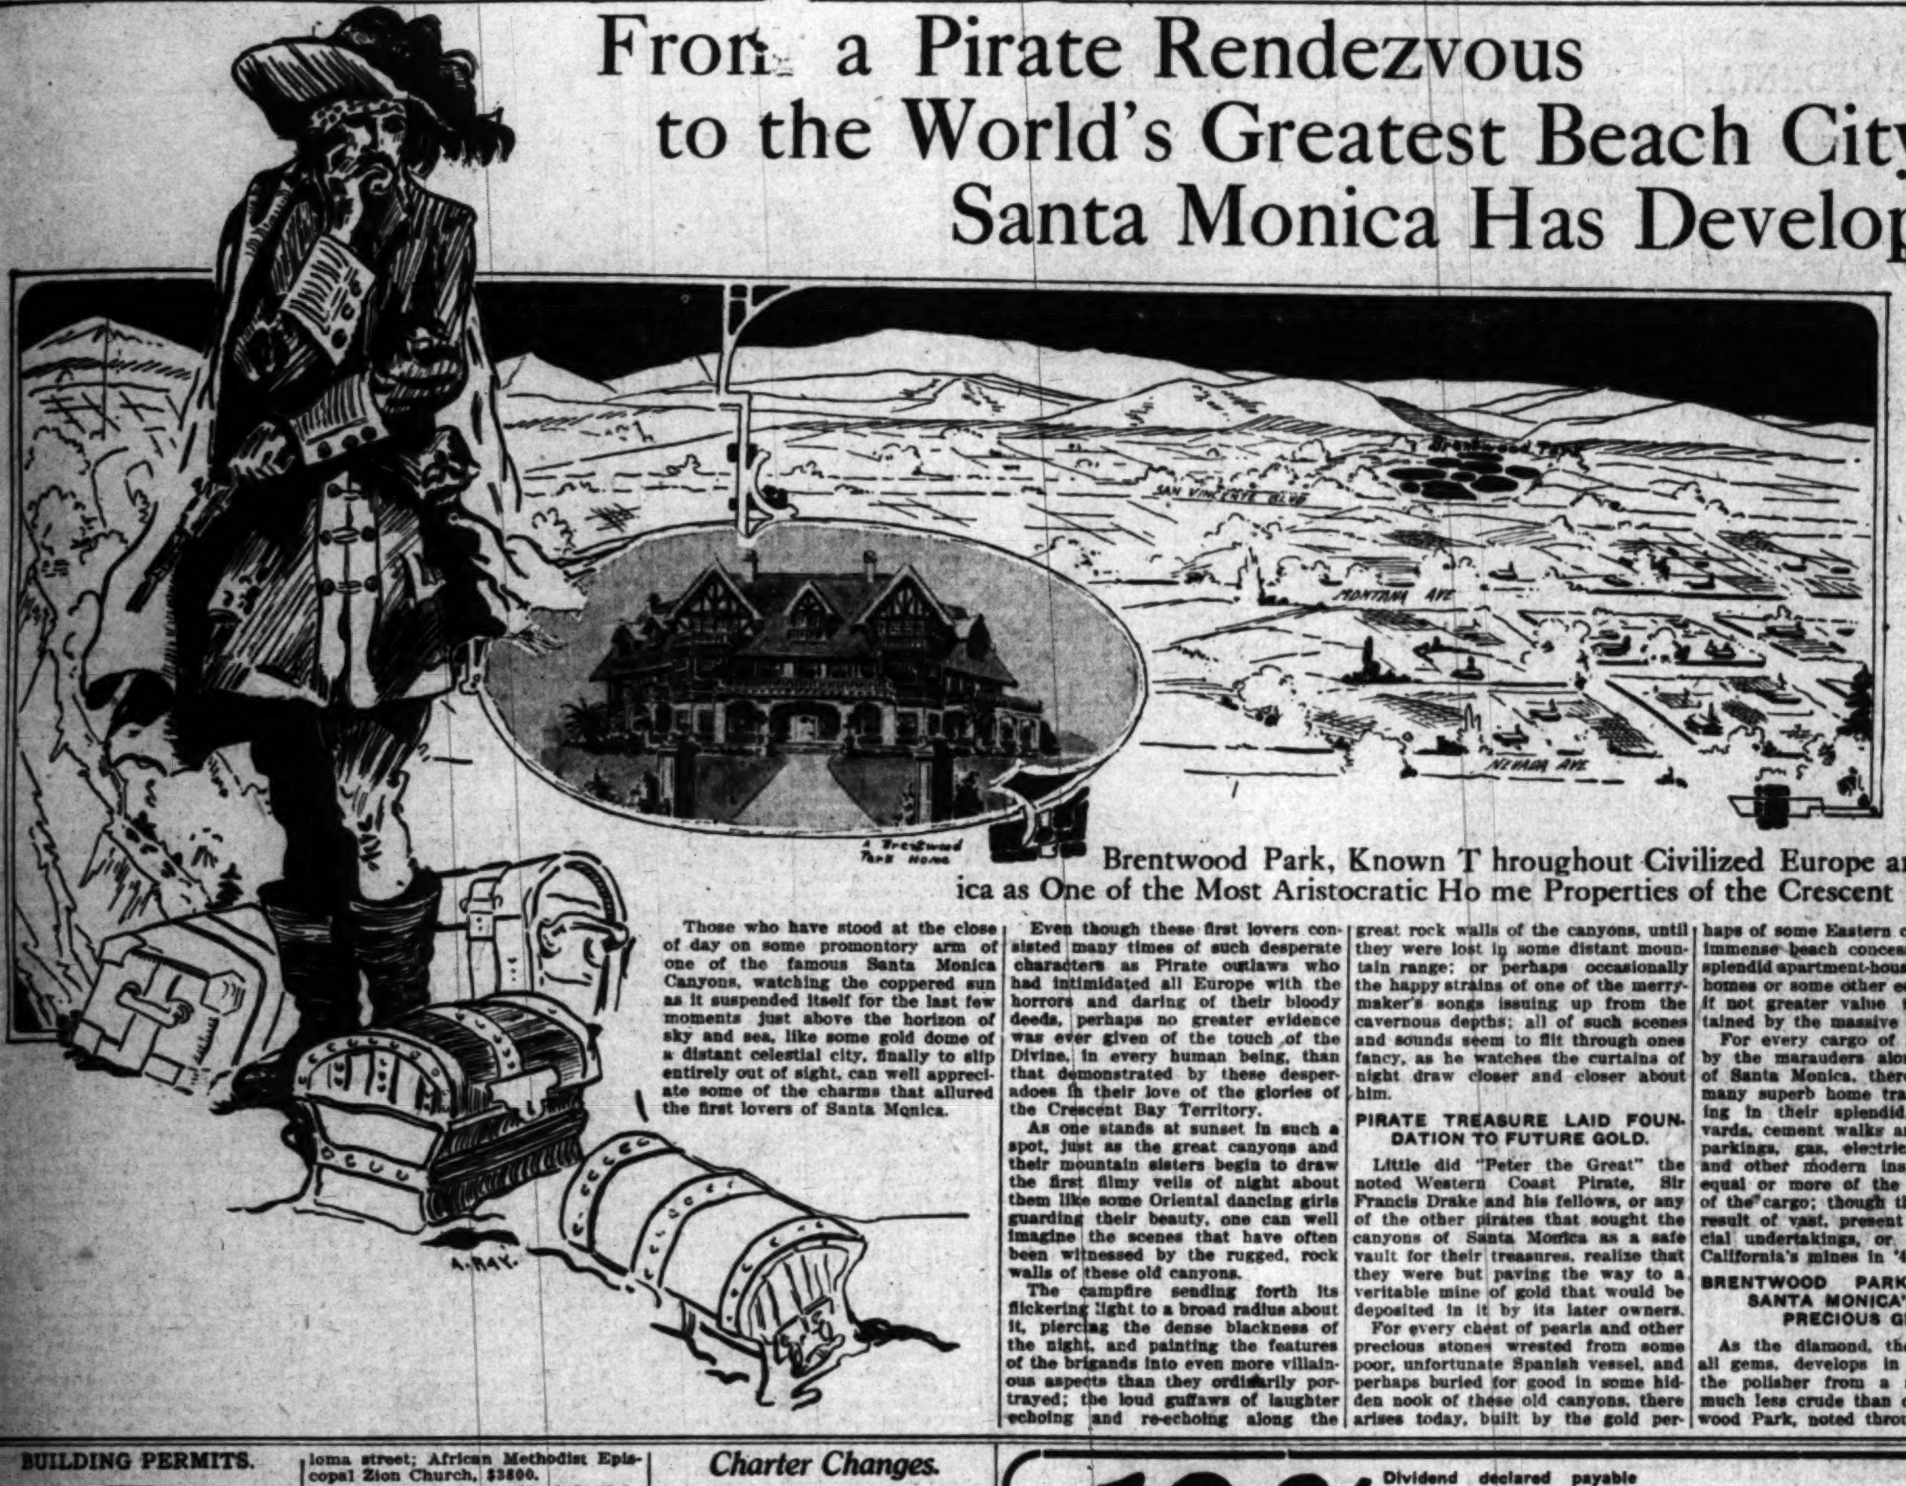
From a Pirate Rendezvous to the World's Greatest Beach City Santa Monica Has Developed.



Brentwood Park, Known Throughout Civilized Europe and America as One of the Most Aristocratic Home Properties of the Crescent Bay City.

Those who have stood at the close of day on some promontory arm of one of the famous Santa Monica Canyons, watching the coppered sun as it suspended itself for the last few moments just above the horizon of sky and sea, like some gold dome of a distant celestial city, finally to slip entirely out of sight, can well appreciate some of the charms that allured the first lovers of Santa Monica.

Even though these first lovers consisted many times of such desperate characters as Pirate outlaws who had intimidated all Europe with the horrors and daring of their bloody deeds, perhaps no greater evidence was ever given of the touch of the Divine, in every human being, than that demonstrated by these desperadoes in their love of the glories of the Crescent Bay Territory.

As one stands at sunset in such a spot, just as the great canyons and their mountain sisters begin to draw the first filmy veils of night about them like some Oriental dancing girls guarding their beauty, one can well imagine the scenes that have often been witnessed by the rugged, rock walls of these old canyons.

The campfire sending forth its flickering light to a broad radius about it, piercing the dense blackness of the night, and painting the features of the brigands into even more villainous aspects than they ordinarily portrayed; the loud guffaws of laughter echoing and re-echoing along the great rock walls of the canyons, until they were lost in some distant mountain range; or perhaps occasionally the happy strains of one of the merrymaker's songs issuing up from the cavernous depths; all of such scenes and sounds seem to flit through ones fancy, as he watches the curtains of night draw closer and closer about him.

PIRATE TREASURE LAID FOUNDATION TO FUTURE GOLD.

Little did "Peter the Great" the noted Western Coast Pirate, Sir Francis Drake and his fellows, or any of the other pirates that sought the canyons of Santa Monica as a safe vault for their treasures, realize that they were but paving the way to a veritable mine of gold that would be deposited in it by its later owners.

For every chest of pearls and other precious stones wrested from some poor, unfortunate Spanish vessel, and perhaps buried for good in some hidden nook of these old canyons, there arises today, built by the gold perhaps of some Eastern capitalist, some immense beach concession, a row of splendid apartment-houses, magnificent homes or some other edifices of equal if not greater value than that contained by the massive boxes.

For every cargo of gold captured by the marauders along the shores of Santa Monica, there exists today many superb home tracts, representing in their splendid, oiled boulevards, cement walks and picturesque parkings, gas, electricity, telephone and other modern installations, the equal or more of the entire wealth of the cargo; though this gold is the result of vast, present day, commercial undertakings, or the output of California's mines in '49.

BRENTWOOD PARK ONE OF SANTA MONICA'S MOST PRECIOUS GEMS.

As the diamond, the monarch of all gems, develops in the hands of the polisher from a substance not much less crude than coal, so Brentwood Park, noted throughout Europe as a homeplace for aristocracy, has arisen to this eminence from one of the most picturesque wilds that probably ever existed. It still retains just enough of this wild beauty, in the beating sea and the masterful, old canyons and mountains to afford its unparalleled setting.

The polishers who developed Brentwood Park into the picturesque park of kingly homeplaces that it is today, are principally represented in its subdividers, among whom the most important are its present owners and salesmen, the Braly-Janss Company, located at No. 320 Pacific Electric Building, Los Angeles, also having a tract office at Brentwood Park.

Brentwood Park is such a home environment as one might expect to find only surrounding royalty, on such a regal plan is its whole plan carried out.

In the center is a magnificent winding boulevard, known as Grand Boulevard, curving serpentine fashion to the highest portion of the tract where it comes in contact with the superb mount, now being developed into one of the greatest show places in America. Grand Boulevard is in itself fifty feet in breadth, while it is bordered on each side by superb parkings of green sward planted to magnolia trees, which run eighteen feet in breadth. On each side of the parkings, are splendid sidewalks ten feet in width, which are further bordered by plots of flowering shrubs, also ten feet wide.

The boulevards of Brentwood Park vary between seventy-five and 180 feet. At each intersection of these streets, a circle is formed, which is planted to the wildest profusion of magnificent trees and shrubbery, much of which has been imported from all parts of the world.

Between the blocks are ovals of 180 feet, which are also planted to a perfectly bewildering entanglement of beautiful trees and shrubs.

In the center of this superb park, one giant plot occupies six acres of land and is planted to shrubs of many varieties, flowers and trees. A Japanese water garden is also to be incorporated here.

The plots of ground on which the palatial homes are built are of irregular sizes and shapes, which gives to the resident all that feeling of freedom from restraint, that is felt by many, on the usual type of square and oblong lots; and it admits of no end of decoration and picturesque home beauty.

Brentwood Park has gathered to it some of the most prominent types of residents to be found throughout California, most of whom are men and women of culture and refinement who have traveled largely, choosing Brentwood Park as their homeplace after much comparison, abroad and in the United States.

third parties from leasing or improving any portion of the water front.

THE PARTY IDEA.

The Socialist or City Charter Amendment No. 8, which provides for apportioning the City Council among parties according to the party vote cast, is wrong in principle, unjust to the voters and is prohibited by the Constitution of this State.

Article 20, section 13, of the Constitution provides that a plurality shall elect. This charter amendment No. 8 provides that members of the Council shall be elected by a minority vote.

OTHER "CITIZENS" AMENDMENT.

Besides Citizens' Committee Amendment No. 16, providing for an elective harbor board, and No. 17, providing for a republican representative Council of twenty-one, the remaining amendments of the Citizens' Committee also deserve mention:

No. 11 proposes to correct the present charter by allowing the unused property upon the aqueduct and the other places where no longer required by the city, to be sold upon time and not for cash alone. The present charter requires such sales to be for cash, and it is believed that better prices and fairer terms can be secured by giving time to the purchasers.

No. 12 provides for the creation of a firemen's relief and insurance fund, in order that old and disabled firemen who have served the city for years may be provided for in their old age, or in case of sickness or death, that their widows and children may be taken care of for a limited time.

No. 13 provides for such a relief and insurance fund for policemen, and no reasonable man can vote against either of these relief funds.

No. 14 prohibits the city from maintaining a municipal newspaper. It is generally agreed that a useless expense is being incurred of some $50,000 a year in maintaining the present municipal paper.

No. 15 makes some amendments concerning the park commissioners, by allowing the keeping of restaurants, boathouses, etc., and by allowing the park commissioners to fix the salaries of employees in the park department.

No. 18 increases the salary of the Mayor to $6000 per year, of the City Attorney to $6000 per year, fixes the salary of Councilmen at $1200 per year, of City Auditor at $3600 per year and of the City Assessor at $3600 per year.

Do not accept the statement of the San Francisco advocates that good government consists in denying to the people local representation in the governing body, or that good government consist in carrying out in Los Angeles the Abe Ruef and Eugene Schmitz "system" of city government.

VOTE FOR CHARTER AMENDMENTS NOS. 11 TO 18, AND AGAINST ALL OTHERS.

valley. The flow of a second well is now being utilized to supply water to the new townsite of Montrose at the head of Verdugo Canyon.

The tradition that water could not be developed in large quantities was practically knocked in the head several months ago, but it was less than a fortnight ago that transportation facilities were assured for the valley. To bring this about it was necessary for interested land holders to secure a right of way from Verdugo Park through Montrose and La Crescenta, to raise a bonus of $30,000, and to bring about the transfer of the Glendale and Eagle Rock Railway Company to a new syndicate.

RAILWAY ASSURED.

All this has been done and the new syndicate has contracted to have the extension from Verdugo Park completed to Montrose by May 15, and to La Crescenta by August 1. The service of the present "stub" line has been poor, owing to lack of power, but will be improved with the completion of the extension, as it will then have ample current from the Southern California Edison Company. This company has already run a line from Pasadena to the new well at La Crescenta, using the right of way of the proposed new electric line. As both companies will use the same poles this part of the traction company's construction work is already complete. Along with car service, both power and light are thus made available to the residents of the valleys.

There is one other big improvement for which the boosters of the district are still working—the State Highway. The State Highway Commission was taken over the proposed route through the Crescenta-Canada country recently and some of the members are said to have expressed the opinion that the scenery was the finest they had viewed along the route of the great boulevard. The people north of the Verdugo hills are working to have the new road extended from the "Big Olive Grove" near San Fernando almost due east to join Michigan avenue, which traverses the La Crescenta and La Canada valleys and enters Pasadena through the Devil's Gate. This route has been surveyed and those interested are confident that it will be adopted.

Whatever the final decision of the State commission with reference to the route of the highway this side of San Fernando, however, the developers of the Crescenta-Canada section are determined to extend Michigan avenue as a splendid boulevard through the gap at Monte Vista to connect with the State roadway itself. All the roads of the district are being laid out with this end in view and all tap either Michigan avenue or Honolulu boulevard, the latter an eighty-foot highway literally hacked out of the thick brush skirting the base of the Verdugo hills and connecting with the regular county road through Verdugo Canyon and Devil's Gap as well as with the proposed transvalley boulevard.

VERDUGO CANON.

At least 2000 acres of land, in addition to the 500 acres occupied by the new townsite of Montrose, can be supplied with water by the wells already developed in the district, according to the Holmes-Walton Company, which has led in the reclamation work and which is back of the new townsite enterprise. This company has already shown its faith in the section by laying two miles of twelve-inch pipe from its wells to Montrose and by installing costly improvements in the new town.

La Crescenta and La Canada already boast some improvement, the result of the initiative of those who have stuck by the district since the early boom days. Many private owners are busily engaged in bringing large estates near these places to a high state of development. The whole district is awake and full of animation, and one and all of the valley dwellers believe that a new era of permanent prosperity is at hand.

Verdugo Canyon, the beautiful, winding valley connecting Glendale with the Crescenta-Canada district, is sharing with both communities the impulse of progress that has sprung into being since the announcement of the railway plans for the section. Already it is apparent that the sightly lands lying between Verdugo Park and the county highway will soon be an integral part of the high-class residential development contiguous to Glendale and Casa Verdugo. Verdugo Park itself has been deeded to Glendale and is being developed by that city, and no other place in Southern California boasts a more beautiful recreation place. The recent acquisition of all the lands in question by a syndicate of Los Angeles capitalists makes certain the future of the whole of Verdugo Canyon as a high-class urban district.

THE FIELD OF ART IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

THE NEED OF A PERMANENT GALLERY, AS AN ADDITION TO OUR CONSTRUCTIVE ENTERPRISES.

BY MABEL URMY SEARES.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, revisited after a decade or more of hearsay knowledge only, presents widespread evidence of a growth which, though a logical result of natural conditions is, from a logical standpoint, almost overwhelming in its amazing development.

The early construction of gigantic hostelries and casinos, the planting of California poppies along suburban car lines, the exploitation of the missions, as well as the filling of shops with amateurish art work, all have their origin in this impulse to cater to that holiday spirit which underlies so much of Southern California's prosperity. This impulse was first shown in an effort, almost nervous in its eagerness, to make good the exuberant descriptions embodied in the invitations once sent broadcast over the eastern portions of the country. Slowly the truth has dawned upon us that such things as California has to offer need no embellishment. The nervous strain caused by the opening of great tracts of land before the population had begun to increase rapidly, has disappeared from the social atmosphere. Great, prosperous corporations now transact the business of life. Quietly but effectively they smooth away the rough places and make the country comfortable to live in. Solidly-built hotels of architectural value are taking the place of older temporary structures; and the serious problems of transportation, food, shelter, education and commerce engage the best minds of the community. Nevertheless, upon the surface of this well-favored and now permanently-settled corner of the State there still remains, like paper bags left by a careless picnic party, the litter of the times that now are past. The multiplied, and many-mannered signs of the dealer in town lots greet one on every side, and in the shops one still must wade through much debris of early childish art ere underneath it all he finds the artist's earnest effort to depict a vision he alone has seen.

Up to the present time the people have been busy planting and watering the desert places, planning and providing for new suburbs, and building shelters for what time they were not out under the blue sky rejoicing in the long succession of sunny winter days. Art galleries were not needed when through long rows of fruit-laden orange trees one looked for miles across the valley to the snow-capped peaks, or later in the season, viewed the still unrobed fields of poppies stretching in glorious golden acreage up to the near, blue wall of mountains, ever-changing, intimate and dear.

When the tourist, now left much to his own devices, admired the golden fruit or still more golden flowers, the busy planter cut a slab of orange wood, polished it a little, then passed it to the unemployed to represent upon it as best they might, the round and juicy fruit, the subtle glitter of the poppy's most elusive beauty. The souvenir was made. The traveler with his bags and baskets full of fading flowers and abalone shells went on his way rejoicing, to come again next year and bring his sisters, cousins, aunts and all his household goods and chattels.

And so the population grew—too fast for art to flourish. For art is long. Though patient, kind and generous to those who serve her in a humble, striving spirit, she will not "paint a picture while you wait," nor will she grant to those who try to bargain the fine aroma of her dainty presence.

We must seek deeper for her then, past all the strife for power and money, in some quiet place away from the rush and jar of traffic.

GREAT ART RESOURCES.

It may be that like many an old Italian master, the art of Southern California will find much of its early training in the workshop of the goldsmith. In artistic craftsmanship and in the arts which border on industrial training is the first point of departure for original expression; and never had a people a more advantageous situation, greater wealth of example, and, for fundamental study, never a more unique position. For the Orient lies west of us and the middle West, "back East." Stores of cunning workmanship from China and Japan are open to our commerce, and better still, the tawdry things may be left behind; and under a beneficient sky the truer, simpler elements of art may be sought and practiced. From the Indian country come the gay blankets, painted pottery, and thoughtfully woven baskets of a primal people to find an echo in the art shops of a conquering nation where Indian heads more awe-inspiring than ever graced a native are drawn on gay, fringed leather, and where gew-gaws, painted handbags, plaques and pillow-covers masquerade as arts and crafts to shame the white man. In their crude coloring alone these elemental efforts are companions to the craftsmanship of savage nations; original design is foreign to them; balance, harmony and rhythm unknown quantities in their equation.

Sad are these frayed and broken edges of our bright mosaic, sadder still is the effect of their example upon the oriental shops around them. How has the ancient and honerable art of old Japan trailed her embroidered kimono in the dust of our commercialism. Japanese bazaars abound along the lines of tourist travel, but nowhere else do they display, mixed in with ancient articles of good design, such loads of pseudo oriental china, half Japanese, half western in its decoration. The tiny saki bowls, the jade, the teak-wood chairs and tables, all the articles the orientals use themselves have disappeared from these booths and in their place the continuous performance of the auctioneer palms off the gayest of the gay "kimono wrappers," plaques and vases made for the foreign trade and brought to swell the cheapening tide of color on this occidental shore. Yet here the canny Japanese, so quick to see his chance to cater to the public taste, drives constantly his bargains. Here, too, the Turkish trade is thriving, and many an oriental room and "Moorish cozy corner" is hidden behind the walls of downtown hotels or helps to make gorgeous the rich interiors of houses on the fashionable streets.

This likeness to the cities of Asia is emphasized now and then by glimpses through the street trees and palm gardens of Byzantine-like architecture. Sometimes it is a tower with Tartar dome, and then again a row of Moorish arches rising in horseshoe shape upon their groups of slender columns, which catches the eye and sets it out of focus for the graceful groups of western homes, the spreading bungalows and Early English, Swiss, or Renaissance designs which, blending in harmonious whole throughout the densely populated districts, make the fairest portion of this sunset picture.

The home built by the loving thought and study of those who dwell within is the true refuge of the best in art; and there, when tired of all the glitter and the glare, the fortunate householder may rest and enjoy those favorite bits of perfect work that he has gathered in his travels through the fields of art and taken to himself to hang upon his walls. But many are the sojourners here who have no home within our borders. Many are the days when they would rest, or when the rain drives them somewhere under roof. The moving picture shows do not appeal to all, and when they do, an hour or two suffices. For outside, as well as in, these pleasure houses also gleam and glitter, and the eyes are tired and ask for something restful and serene. One cannot walk the streets or picnic all the time; the body makes its protest and the mind demands a tilt with other minds, an interesting book, a piece of sculpture, or a picture into which, led by imagination, it may wander freely, seeing things the artist saw and hinted at, and sometimes seeing even more. When now and then the rain, so needed by the country, comes down in torrents to the wayfarer's dismay, he must perforce seek his hotel and calling down anathemas upon the weather, read a magazine or listen to the phonograph or pianola played by the kindly hotel clerk to pass the dreary day. For though the trolley does not stop, the picnic places are being washed by the downpour, the canvas reading rooms are damp and stuffy, a museum or a gallery of masters is wanting, and the public library, tucked away in a department store, is almost useless.

FOR THE GALLERY.

There is a need in this country for the art gallery; for the historic picture there is a place. Time and again in the history of painting has the divine afflatus prompted the artist to express his love of country or the hero-worship of his boyhood's dream in a great picture that will speak to many hearts. It calls for years of sacrifice in the study of figure, composition, texture, tone, masses of flat color, and the simple line. But, when technique has been attained and the great historical picture painted, it will not lie hidden in the studio, but will find a place before the public, who will respond in some fashion, if not to the more subtle features of its art. Southern California with its Spanish past, its mission story and the sacrifices of its early settlers has not yet aroused that deeper feeling, or else the trained and heaven-gifted son or daughter has not yet appeared among her artists.

It is the out-of-doors that calls! Even the artists have succumbed to its allurements. They, too, have come from colder climates to live in the open, breathe the fresh air, and put it and the sunshine into their records of what California stands for to the nation and the world. After a night of rain, the sun comes up next morning bright and shining. Out the people go again in train or motor, racing through the streets, flying along the roads between the soft brown hills beneath the blue, blue sky. From the sparkling ocean to the far-away blue mountains with their gravity cars and grave-faced burros, in one continuous stream the pleasure parties seem a never-ending whirl of trolley-trips and motor rides, of coaching parties, picnics, jaunts, and jubilees. They trail along the pike, then tear across the valley; they stop to gather poppies while the trolley waits; they come in troops and then are gone, and Silence slips behind them like the quick cessation of cicada's whir.

But sometimes, down the canyon or arroyo's bank, under a liveoak or a sycamore, one comes upon a fellow nature-lover calmly sitting on the ground watching the color on the distant mountains change and glow, catching the warm scent of the breeze that blows across the lovely intervening fields of purple sage, and noting with half-shut eyes some stray bee light upon a near-by flower stalk and open the tiny blossom's purple door by swinging all his lazy weight upon it while he adds its drop of honey to his store. Here in the solitary place, with all the sunny stretch of orange orchard, villa tract, suburb and city spreading out before him, one well may pause to look for inspiration, for some more permanent form of art.

What shall he paint then, if he, this nature-lover, be an artist born?

INSPIRATION.

The bee has left the near-by flower and staggering with his load has flown across the purple sage field to his hive. The artist sees him go with slight regret. For though he may inspire a charming book by Maeterlinck the making of a picture lies not with the bee. Across the purple fields the artist looks. Beneath the warm and quivering atmosphere their radiance greets him, and the mountains answering with deep violets and fainter blues suggest a harmony of color. And yet a mountain wall is not a picture. On its heights he sees the white glint of observatory roof; below are canyons, trails, and long white gashes cut in the underbrush by watchful guards to counterward against the fearsome mountain fire. Across these strike the mountain roads, winding back and forth and leaving in their wake masses of tumbling rock and sliding soil adown the mountain-side. To paint all this is surely not his mission. No one loves the mountains more than he, but no one else should feel their limitations and his own more wisely.

So, finding for the moment in this great wide view of mountain, plain, and sunlit mesa-land no picture for his modest canvas, warmed by the sun and happy in the scene, he lets his drowsy thoughts go off beyond the hill-tops and the desert to the studios of Europe, or the East from whence he came.

For few if any of the artists now painting in Southern California are native to the State. Devoted to their foster mother many of them are, with passionate appreciation of her beauties. Yet many have come with thoughts of temporary staying, and like their public are transient and unsettled. This fact and its recognition by the people gives a bread and butter, money-getting atmosphere to exhibitions. An enterprising dealer offered, not so long ago, a bargain sale of paintings! And the populace is often urged to look to handicraft displays, and even to collections of paintings from the studios, for Christmas gifts. After the Yukon-Pacific Exposition at Seattle city papers with commendable pride published under the caption, "We win," a list of the awards accredited to the southern section of the country. No more characteristic epitome of the prize products of the region could be put into the hands of one interested in making an intensive study of its artistic and industrial status. Heading the list of grand prizes stood the name of Alexander Stirling Calder, whose very presence in a city is a guarantee of its high artistic standard. Glancing down the column one learned the names of Southern California's makers of excellent pressed brick and tile, of companies whose quarries send out beautifully grained marbles, onyx, quartz and granite. Then followed rapidly in unclassified confusion the prizes given for fruits and photographs, for chili peppers, olive oil, and raisins. Mixed in with other commercial products, preceded by cigars and close pressed by inlaid eucalyptus wood, electric irons and onions, were found the names of prize-winning china-painters, sculptors, and oil-painting artists. Truly an enlightening list to offer to the stranger. Yet was it, or was it not an indication of unassimilated plenty and unstratified conditions—a lack of good perspective in the minds of those just now so absorbed in the making of a new [illegible] prosperous society?

NO ABIDING HOME.

Art has no civic center, no abiding home, no place upon a pedestal in the City of the Angels. But in the group of trained men and women who for various individual reasons have drifted into Southern California, she has the nucleus of a well-founded and a bounteous artistic development. They bring with them from the cities of the East and North, where schools, museums and galleries of art have been established longer, a wealth of art knowledge and inspiration, unequaled in any other community of like age and standing. The variety and diversity of their training, the schools of art and craftsmanship from which they come and those to which they now devote their strength and talent, all promise much for the generation of artists and appreciative amateurs that is being influenced by them.

In the business block which private enterprize has opened for the use of art and music, beyond the many studios where excellent design and painting of keramics are taught and practiced, one finds rooms filled with the easels of art students, and nearby the larger halls for exhibitions. Here exhibition has followed exhibition in quick succession. First comes the work of the Art Students' League, supported by older members of the fraternity. Large scope in motive and in sketching ground is covered, from Venetian sails to old Chinatown in San Francisco, and sound draughtsmanship and training are shown in things like Harry Lewis Bailey's dogs and horses. Hope lies this way in mastery of technique and figure before the lure of landscape tempts the student to add to the many canvases whereon one sees the paint before he sees the picture. Study and hard work are the requisites for the making of a great art center. Fragments of classic art like those which inspired Italian masters may not be found here; but the elements of art's highest standard are not lacking. In this exhibition they appeared in the loaned landscapes of Benjamin Brown and in the fine figure work and portraits by John Hubbard Rich, whose delicacy of line and composition is suggestive of certain pictures by Thomas Wilmer Dewing. These, with the half-hidden bas-reliefs, left to the gallery by Alexander Calder, form artistic touchstones one may use with confidence when, overwhelmed by many mediocre paintings, he fears the loss of any power to judge in things artistic.

Following the Art Students, a Painter's Club may give an exhibition, and later a group of representative men will show the season's vintage on these same sequestered walls. In all the exhibitions sunshine is the dominant note. Seldom do we see it falling through a window on a strong well-studied group or figure. Mannheim may show a study, regal in color and attractive in composition, and in with Wagner and Mrs. Jahn present portraits; but studio work is at a disadvantage when the call of the plein-air is so insistent. The exhibition rooms are full of landscapes. The problem of the brilliant light seems irresistibly attractive to the majority of painters. The air, so clear and crystalline it seems almost forgotten, is no longer the soft, misty envelope of nature. Only by its sparkle and vibration as a medium for the passage of sunlight is its presence made known to the observer. Wachtel, with his fine October trees and stretches of plain and valley; Wendt, making groups of oaks and sycamores and the arroyo in full sunlight into a flat wall decoration; Puthuff, showing the light on distant groves and on the nearer fields of poppies; all seem dauntless in their daring search for power to paint the sunlight.

But not all are dazzled by this subtle, gay enchantress. Long stretches of blue evening shadow sweep across the yellow desert, and great masses of deep, oak foliage fill the foreground in Marion Wachtel's exquisite water-colors. Between two of Borg's Bocklin-like paintings of cypress trees and sunlit palacio in Guatemala hangs a "Gray Day," painted at Wilmington by Liddell. Storm clouds and wind fairies appeal to the imagination in the work of Detpel Sammann and of Frank Elwin Evans, who dares to limit his sunshine to a brilliant spot, and C. A. Fries of San Diego exhibits quiet, appealing little pictures of a single, graceful eucalyptus, that are low in tone, yet show a keen sense of composition and value.

Among the studios, too, one catches glympses of these softer, more imaginative subjects painted for the love of painting. At home upon a pleasant hill, or in a corner of the picturesque arroyo, the artists live and work, sending out not only pictures for the exhibitions, but influence that works for higher standards of good taste in architecture and in craftsmanship. Towering high so that it may be noticed beyond the Rockies, the work done by Julia Bracken Wendt in sculpture demands attention; and full of subtle harmony and great promise are the examples of Maud Daggett's power and talent.

The strong and difficult marine has not yet been essayed by many of the painters, but Donovan has touched now and again its note of subtle color and Brown has given to the world a storm cloud descending on the dark and sullen ocean, and delightful bits of blue Pacific waters balanced and made into a picture by a group of rich, dark eucalypti rising in slender elegance from yellow seaside hills. Looking at Benjamin Brown's great picture of wind-swept trees upon the lower slopes of Tamalpais, one sees the cool fog-laden breeze come drifting over the grassy hilltops and hears the boom of surf beyond the rocks that guard the Golden Gate. Whether he paints the moonlight on the marshes, sandy beach, the mountains or the ruins of a mission, or sets the breeze to blowing through spring fields or sunlit sycamores of autumn, he fills his frames with pictures that one longs to own and live with. For the work of Benjamin Brown is universal in its scope and genius. Paint and canvas are alike forgotten when in his best work he leads the imagination of the beholder out into the space which, with his intellect and art, he has created.

What artists have to give is greater than their power to make a souvenir of nature; greater even than ability to educate a school of artists and art lovers. It is that delicate sense of the picturesque, that vision of the beautiful which comes to them because they are gifted to see it and trained to interpret it for others. It is this which forms the artist's chief value to a community. Just as a Kipling may write "Lest We Forget," and remind a whole nation of its duty, so an Alexander Calder may make of bronze or stone a beautiful group so true in "the grand line," so full of lovely, graceful forms that all will look, and looking let sink deep into their souls the thought of Wealth bestriding Poverty, the dominant spirit of commercialism beating down the wings and breaking the heart of Artistic Genius. No more beautiful piece of work was ever done in Southern California, and it should never have been permitted to go with the sculptor when he left the State, but should now return in bronze or marble to decorate the city of its birth and become an inspiration to all who see it.

NEW GLENDALE TRACT.

The Edwards & Wildey Company will place another Glendale tract upon the market this week. It is to be known as Glendale Park, and adjoins Kenilworth tract on the west. The company reports the following sales in the Kenilworth tract: California Bungalow Company, to Ernst W. Kimmel, bungalow, No. 1611 Burchett street, $2750; James A. Kearney to Thomas J. Quinn No. 1620 West First street, $3500; Mrs. Henry Stephenson, southwest corner, Kenilworth avenue and Sycamore, $800; Phillip Ferrara, lot on Alexander street, near Pacific avenue, $600; California Bungalow Company, lots on Burchett street, near Kenilworth avenue, $1150; Mrs. Virginia S. I Wish to Introduce Mr. Potter

I have selected WILLIAM HOXWORTH POTTER for the Presidency of the LOS ANGELES BUILDING COMPANY. He has accepted the office. I am going to say some pretty flattering things in Mr. Potter's favor. His record deserves it. Mr. Potter formerly resided at Northwood, North Dakota, where he was engaged in the banking business for a number of years. Closing out his interests in North Dakota to enter into the CONTRACT and BUILDING BUSINESS in Los Angeles.

He became associated with one of the oldest Home Building Companies in Los Angeles, accepting the position as General Superintendent and Manager of the Purchasing Department. Prior to his accepting the Presidency of the LOS ANGELES BUILDING COMPANY, Mr. Potter has had exclusive charge of the extensive building operations of the CITY BUILDERS INVESTMENT COMPANY.

In building circles today, Mr. Potter is recognized as an expert in economical building. His practical work along these lines gives satisfaction to the home seekers. Mr. Potter's connection with the LOS ANGELES BUILDING COMPANY can hardly be measured in dollars and cents.

I am carefully selecting my associates, the Officers and Directors who will manage the affairs of the LOS ANGELES BUILDING COMPANY. The public's money taken for these shares shall be handled by the most capable men that I can find.

I shall announce tomorrow another addition to the Board. This week I shall complete the filling of the Board of Directors, which is of such vital importance to me and to you. I know I am getting the right men for the right places.

FINANCING OUR COMPANY

I wish to state that over 75% of the first allotment of our shares at 5 cents has been subscribed for. The balance will easily be taken up within the next few days.

5c I OFFER (while they last) LOS ANGELES BUILDING CO. Shares at 5 Cents 5c

FIVE CENTS BUYS our 7% CUMULATIVE, PARTICIPATING, PREFERRED STOCK which includes 10% bonus of Common Stock. This, I have termed as my CHARTER MEMBER PRE-ORGANIZATION OFFER.

It's a big opportunity, because within the next few days these shares will be advanced to par, 10 cents, which means 100% profit to you on the advance in shares. Then again, you are buying this 7% PREFERRED STOCK at 50% below par, this means that your money will earn 14%.

Your buying stock on this basis means that you are subscriber to shares on exactly the same basis as every other shareholder.

Most Building Companies allow their organizers to buy stock at 50 per cent. below par, or more, requiring of the public to pay par for their shares. When I organized the Los Angeles Building Company, I decided to do differently and to give the public the same opportunity.

It would have been a simple matter for me to go among 25 or 50 of my friends and induce each of them to subscribe for a substantial block of the Pre-Organization stock of the Los Angeles Building Company, at 5 cents per share and give them a 10 per cent. bonus of Common, with the understanding that I will immediately place the stock on the market at 10 cents a share without the bonus. This would mean 100 per cent. profit immediately to the organizers in addition to 10 per cent. bonus, and their stock would draw 14 per cent. on the investment. This, you will understand, is the customary way of organizing a Company. As a matter of fact it is permissible and honest, but I like to do things differently. My object in presenting this Pre-Organization Charter Membership Stock to the public in this manner is to advertise the Los Angeles Building Company as much as possible, and I believe that the public will appreciate the method that I used in organizing this Company, and patronize us, not only by being shareholders, but by allowing us to build their homes for them. I have started with just four people, men of means. I have let my friends come to me—I have given the public the same opportunity as my friends.

I predict a great success for the Los Angeles Building Company—Second to none.

To the small investor who invests his savings in these shares, I want to say that this Company will set aside a Sinking Fund so that any investor placing $500 with us, or even a lesser amount, can in case of necessity realise on their shares, either by direct sale or obtain a loan on their shares.

I am receiving subscriptions by every mail, from people who have never seen our literature or investigated our Company. They are relying on the statements that I am making in the advertising. I certainly appreciate the confidence that these people are putting in my statements. I want to state emphatically to these people, that I positively guarantee such subscriptions—That I give every one who subscribes a reasonable time to make a thorough investigation. After such investigation has been made, if there is the least doubt in their minds, I will gladly refund the amount of their subscription.

Cash or payment basis. I am accepting orders on the cash basis or the monthly payment plan. On the monthly payment plan, 10 per cent. down and 5 per cent. a month.

1,000 shares,	$ 5.00	down and	$ 2.50	a month.
2,000 shares,	10.00	down and	5.00	a month.
5,000 shares,	50.00	down and	12.50	a month.
10,000 shares,	100.00	down and	25.00	a month.

I have made these terms so easy that anyone can take advantage of them. Put a $5.00 bill in an envelope today and send it in by registered mail and I will accept it on account of 1000-share order. It will be the best investment that you ever made in all your life.

Your money goes into building, mortar, lumber, cement, shingles, etc. No money is spent in land speculation. We build on improved city lots only. We deal in fixed values absolutely and will always know exactly what a house will sell for when it is completed and what our profit will be.

The depository for your funds is the City and County Bank of Los Angeles.

Attractive plaster house.

Two Palisades Homes.

Typical improvements in new J. J. Davis subdivision.

HIGH ABOVE THE SEA.

Among the attractive residences now under construction in the new 180-acre Palisades subdivision of J. J. Davis, just north of Santa Monica, are two handsome and substantial homes being erected by Davis himself. One of the places is situated at Ninth and Carlyle streets and the other on Ninth street, near Margareta street, in the new tract. Both are of the plaster and tile type and of large size, and both are suggestive of Spanish architecture. These improvements were started by Davis immediately following the completion of the street and boulevard system and the installation of utilities in the subdivision a few months ago.

PLAN CYANIDE PLANT.

Relief Company Will Improve Facilities for Handling Ore Yielding High Grade Gold.

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Feb. 28.—A cyanide plant of fifty tons daily capacity is to be placed upon the property of the Relief Gold Mining Company, twenty-eight miles northwest of Phoenix. On the dump, below the company's little mill, about 8000 tons of tailings are available, assaying $2.50 a ton.

The average mill returns for the ore have been $6.50 a ton, this being saved by simple plate amalgamation. The gold from the Relief is noted for its purity, bringing $20.20 an ounce. The mine is upon the side of a desert butte, into which inclined shafts have been driven only a few hundred feet. The ore is mainly free in character, found in red and yellow oxides.

An attempt is being made by the company to secure funds for sinking a decent working shaft and for the erection of a modern mill. In charge of operations is George Hamlin, one of the pioneer miners of the section.

Joint action between the Supervisors of Pinal county and the management of the Magma mine at Superior is to result soon in a good road from Superior to Florence station. Until the completion of the proposed railroad to Queen Creek station it is proposed to ship the Magma ores by large auto trucks.

C. H. Patrick of Phoenix has located near Winkelman a large deposit of chalk of excellent quality, and has made several shipments already to Los Angeles. This same deposit was reported ten years ago by Prof. W. P. Blake, in charge of the mineral department of the University of Arizona.

BUY PASADENA TRACT.

The Hibernian Home Builders have made a considerable addition to their holdings, by the purchase of fifteen lots in the Washington Square tract, Pasadena. This property is situated in the northeast section of the Crown city, on high ground from which a fine view of Mt. Lowe and Mt. Wilson is to be had. All improvements are in. Several houses will be erected at once, by the new owners.

Put Your Savings in the "Magic Money Circle"

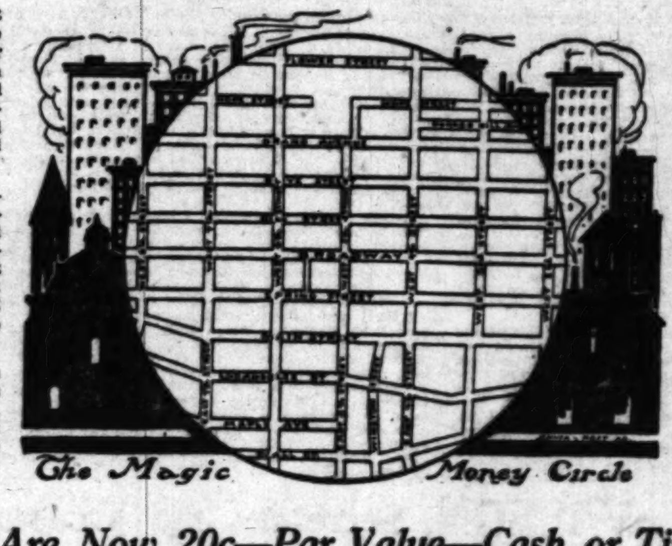
Study the map below. The development in this circle has been greater than all the rest of the city combined. Rising values in this circle are responsible for the great fortunes which have been accumulated in the past 20 years. Have you shared in this prosperity? The chances are you haven't been fortunate enough to get in on this "inside proposition." With your small means you've never had an opportunity. But at last comes your chance to participate in the fabulous profits derived from operations in close-in realty. This new company is founded on a new idea—offers the man or woman of moderate means, of moderate earning power, a chance to put their money where it will earn handsome dividends. Any authority will tell you that close-in property is the safest, soundest and most lucrative investment in the whole wide world. We want you to investigate this proposition. Read below—let the facts speak for themselves.

Downtown Realty Has Made Immense Fortunes for Shrewd, Far-Sighted Men. Now It's Your Turn---Your Savings in This Company Will Earn Big Profits

The Income Investment Company, whose shares are now offered at 20c each—par value—is organized to deal in ground floor leases and buildings on close-in property, to conduct a general real estate, mortgage loan, and renting business.

In a short time we shall begin the erection on a downtown site of a store and hotel building, tenants already secured,—a proposition that will net this company 17% on a 99 year lease carrying a ten year option to purchase at present value.

We have many other deals of this kind in hand — this company is no experiment, but a strong concern, built on solid lines, managed by men who know their business.



The possibilities for fortune making in Los Angeles downtown property are greater today than ever before. The city is growing faster—a population of 1,000,000 in 1920 is absolutely assured. This means that the business district must extend far beyond its present limits. More office buildings must be erected, more hotels, rooming houses, apartment houses, etc., must be provided to accommodate the great increase in population.

The Income Investment Co. intends to take first place in meeting this demand. We intend to make a record even greater than the greatest of all the home building companies.

Our Shares Are Now 20c—Par Value—Cash or Time Payments

In this small space we cannot tell you all the plans and purposes of this concern. If you will give us an opportunity to talk things over we know that we can prove to you that here at last is your one great chance to share the wonderful profits that are made in "the magic money circle."

Call us on the phone, let us send a representative or come to the office yourself—any way you prefer—just so long as we get together on this important matter.

STRIKE PROBLEM ALARMS RUSSIA.

Political Agitators Make Use of Workingmen.

Increase in Labor Troubles Shown Last Year.

Police Active in Efforts to Eliminate Cause.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, March 1.—Americans interested in the labor problem in the United States have gathered here some interesting data about Russia in connection with their study of the general European situation. It appears that Russian workmen are falling back into the condition of political and industrial discontent characteristic of the revolutionary years of 1905, 1906 and 1907. Official figures of the Board of Factory Inspection show there were 1918 factory strikes in Russia last year, involving 683,000 workmen and causing a loss of over [illegible] working days, as against 464 strikes affecting 105,000 workmen in 1911 and 222 strikes affecting only 47,000 workmen in 1910. To find a year to compare with 1912 for industrial demoralization it is necessary to return to the strike statistics of 1907, the last of the revolutionary years when 740,000 men were out during the year.

STRIKES ARE POLITICAL.

About two-thirds of the strikes last year were declared for purely political purposes, according to the official report. They show the increasingly successful activity of political agitation of the social-democratic and social-revolutionary schools. These concentrate their efforts largely on the workmen in the large centers like St. Petersburg, Moscow and Warsaw. The bases of these political strikes were the shooting down of workmen in the Lena gold fields, Siberia, for which a general strike of Russian workmen was ordered as a protest; May day demonstrations of the solidarity of labor; protests against elections to the Fourth Duma under the law of 1906, which the radical parties refuse to regard as legal; protests against the introduction of the workmen's sickness and casualty law adopted last year, and a demonstration against the infliction of the death penalty on mutinous sailors of the Black Sea fleet.

GROWTH OF STRIKES.

This rapid growth in the strike movement in 1912, when six times as many workmen were out as in 1911 and almost fifteen times as many as in 1910, is being kept up in the current year, which started out with a widespread strike in memory of the victims of "Red Sunday" in St. Petersburg, January 22, 1905. Fifty-five thousand workmen, according to the police figures, or some 80,000, according to private accounts, laid down their tools January 22 in St. Petersburg alone as a protest against the shooting of the followers of Father Gapon by the troops eight years earlier, an event which the world abroad has almost forgotten and which in Russia is rarely heard of except on the annual recurrence of the date.

POLICE ARE ACTIVE.

The Russian police are active in their efforts to check the agitation among the workmen, and arrests of agitators and workmen's committees are taking place as in the heyday of the revolution. Repressive measures against Russian newspapers have also been vigorously revived, and fines and imprisonments of editors of radical papers, of suppression of offensive periodicals, are matters of frequent occurrence.

WAGES IN IRELAND.

The Poorest Paid Workers in the United Kingdom Are in the Linen-Producing Sections.

[The Square Deal:] A committee recently appointed to investigate the manufacture of shirts in the most noted linen producing sections of Ireland have, upon trips through the country, discovered that some of the poorest paid workers in the United Kingdom are in that industry. The persons employed are mostly what are known as "outworkers," that is, the work is done at home and outside the factory.

According to the evidence given to the committee the outworkers in the Belfast district are "widows and spinsters depending upon the work for their livelihood, or married women whose husbands are out of work, and women whose husbands are laborers earning small pay. What sort of a "livelihood" the workers get is shown by the testimony of several specific instances placed before the committee. Fancy sewing (drawn thread work,) and embroidery (flowering, sprigging,) which the committee describes as "highly skilled industries," demanded in the cases investigated, the magnificent pay of from 2 to 4 cents an hour.

Even as low as the pay itself is, the poorer workers in the country do not always get it all. Shopkeepers who act as agents for firms giving out the work sometimes pay the workers in goods, which are frequently overpriced. Incidentally, one of the evils of the system, the committee reports, is that very young children work at these industries late into the night, and are unduly burdened in carrying parcels to and from the Belfast factories.

"You will notice," said one witness before the committee, "that they usually carry the bundles on one shoulder and a number of them have one shoulder down and the other up."

"Strike Book" in Court.

[The Square Deal:] The "strike book" of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America turned up recently as a surprise to the defendants at the trial of the suit of Lewis Bossert & Son in Brooklyn to enjoin the brotherhood from ordering strikes on jobs in which their non-union products are used. John Wolfe, one of the defendants, had testified that he had no recollection as a member of the joint district council whether any record of strikes had been kept. Then he was shown the book which purports to be in his own handwriting as secretary.

There are many entries referring to the Bossert firm extending over three Tentacles.

"CATHOLICS, SHUN I.W.W." BRITISH CARDINAL ORDERS.

BY PAUD LAMBETH.

[BY CABLE AND FEDERAL (WIRELESS) LINE OVERLAND TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, March 1.—[Special Dispatch.] "This campaign is promoted, inspired and directed solely by those who neither accept nor practice the teachings of christianity, while many of them do not recognize in any way God or his law. The idea of a universal strike is contrary to every principle of justice or humanity."

This is part of a stirring address assailing syndicalism—one of the numerous tentacles of Socialism—just uttered by Cardinal Bowine, Archbishop of Westminster, and head of the Catholic heirarchy in England, warning Catholics to have nothing to do with the English allies of the Industrial Workers of the World in the United States.

The Cardinal's speech is regarded as one of the most forcible arguments against "labor agitation run mad" ever uttered in this country. He confined himself to the moral and religious aspect of the syndicalist movement, which, he said, is based upon the glaring fallacy which underlies all attempts at social reform which ignored the teachings of Christianity. Syndicalism, to be effective, must embrace every form of public service, even to the police, the army and the navy. Such proposals, in his opinion, struck at the root or those conceptions of public order and of national safety and patriotism which were deep down in the hearts of the vast majority of mankind, and for that reason alone he regarded syndicalism as a Utopia in no way consonant with common-sense or the teachings of economic history. It seemed to ignore, among other things, the 'rights of private ownership which the church had ever defended as being entirely in harmony with the law of God.

Encroaching.

FRANCE MAY ENACT LAW TO TAX FOREIGN LABOR.

[BY CABLE AND A. P. TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, March 1.—Shall a tax be placed upon the employment of foreigners in France? This is the important question submitted to Parliament by Frenchmen who see a grave menace in the rapidly increasing foreign labor. Statistics show that foreigners are encroaching upon agricultural France on all her frontiers. The Belgians come from the north, the Germans from the east, the Italians cross the Alps and the Spaniards the Pyranees to find easier conditions in the riches of this country. In the departments of all these frontiers the foreign born form an average of 10 per cent. of the inhabitants.

MAY TAX AMERICANS.

Americans as well as all other foreigners doing business in France may be the object of legislation, the purpose of which is to relieve Frenchmen from one kind of competition at home. M. M. Lerolle, Gallois and other members of the Chamber of Deputies have proposed a law forbidding any company or firm which has one or several foreign managers or directors from employing more than 10 per cent. of its staff from foreigners. Should this bill be passed it would affect some fifty American companies organized under French law as French companies, but really owned and managed by American companies doing business in France, such as the oil, agricultural, machine and insurance companies.

Labor's Unrest.

STRIKES ON AND OFF AND STRIKES COMING.

THE strike of the rubber-workers at Akron, O., is in its third week, and is becoming more serious every day. The manufacturers are likely to close down their plants for ninety days or more. The Mayor has wisely forbidden street gatherings and parades.

A national calamity was averted when the fifty-four eastern railroads yielded their point and agreed to arbitration of their firemen's claims, under the Erdman Act. The question before the three arbitrators is principally one of wages. The firemen ask increases depending upon the size of the locomotives fired, which would give them a wage varying from $2.55 to $4 a hundred miles' run. They ask also for two firemen on the heavier locomotives. The railroads already had expressed a willingness to raise wages, but not to the maximum demanded. To grant this, they assert, would cost the railroads $12,000,000 a year and increase their pay rolls 42 per cent. The firemen contend that the pay-roll increase would be but 15 per cent. The railroad managers claim that the most fundamental defect of the Erdman Act is that the interests of the public are not guarded by it. The arbitrators are three in number; one for the men, one for the railroads and the third to be chosen by the other two, or appointed, if they cannot agree, by the United States Commissioner of Labor and the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission. The decision of the three arbitrators, unanimous or by majority, is final and binding on all parties. In accepting arbitration under the Erdman Act the railroad managers said: "The managers feel that the public will not tolerate a strike. In this case a great victory has been wone for both employers and employed in that the principle, the advisability, of arbitration of labor disputes, rather than of strikes, is established, and particularly with 35,000 men and $12,000,000 a year more wages involved. The result also shows how strongly the railroads feel their duty to the public.

In passing it may be noted as strange that Gompers, the supposed leader of American union labor, has not shouted on the housetops, "I averted this strike." The fact is that in all the years of his mismanagement of union labor Gompers has not averted anything, not even his fat salary and fat expense account, even at times when thousands of his constituents have been out of work and starving.

The 1912 annual report of the American Federation of Labor (Gompers & Co.) shows that in the thirty-two years, 1881 to 1912, inclusive and exclusive of the $236,000 McNamara grab, federated union labor has paid into the federation (Gompers & Co.) treasury the enormous sum of $2,638,042, beginning with $174 in the year 1881. What has federated union labor really got in return for that vast contribution of its wages money, every dollar of which should more properly have been spent for the benefit of the federated union laborers' wives and families?

Here are the contributions of the past ten years:

1905	207,417
1906	217,815
1907	174,330
1908	207,655
1909	232,377
1910	193,470
1912	207,373

During all the thirty-two years of the A. F. of L. (Gompers & Co.) and despite its handling of $2,638,042 of union labor's wages money strikes have occurred by union labor being persistently taught by Gompers and his associates that organization in opposition to capital was its only salvation. Even at this writing Gompers, through his man Friday, Morrison, is teaching the same false doctrine in the strikes he is trying to organize in the various steel corporation plants. True, two of them in wire mills have completely failed, but, never mind, practically says and acts Gompers through his tool, Morrison, "Let's go at it again in another plant." And all the time deluded federated union labor is sending its good wages money to' Washington to keep this labor harmful pot boiling.

The A. F. of L. (Gompers & Co.,) contributions for "strike benefits" in the past three federation years were:

1912	67,455
Total	$78,131

During those three years the A. F. of L. (Gompers & Co.,) received $583,031 of union labor's wages money, or $504,900 more than it paid out for "strike benefits." What has federated union labor got for that $504,900?

Strikes here, strikes there, strikes everywhere, a condition that will exist forever unless Congress passes a law which shall insist that all disputes between capital and labor, after proper and prescribed attempts to settle the same amicably, shall be submitted to a prescribed board of arbitration of five members, two to be selected by each of the sides, and they, or the Federal government if they cannot agree, to select the fifth member. Either side refusing to accept the board's unanimous or majority decision to be penalized. In other words, a rigid Federal law of compulsory arbitration. Such a law is just in the public interest as all strikes vitally affect the non-participating public.

Now that the threatened railway firemen's strike is averted by agreement to arbitrate, the railroad managers warn the public of another and similar demand for increased wages by the conductors and trainmen on the same fifty-four eastern roads. Where is this railway wages striking going to stop? If it goes on capital will cease investing itself in railroads (it only earns 4.5 per cent. there now,) new lines will not be built, present lines will run down and railroad employment will decrease. In other words, labor's exacting demands will kill labor's "goose of the golden eggs."

Twelve thousand garment workers are on strike in Philadelphia for more wages, shorter hours and improved working conditions. All kinds of clothing workers are out.

The carmen's (1100) strike in Kansas City, which has lasted since September, 1911, is called off. Five hundred striking coal miners of West Virginia went to the capital of the State—Charleston—on February 13 for the purpose of killing Gov. Glasscock. Mother Jones and others are held for conspiracy to murder and for the murder of a mine bookkeeper. They are to be tried under martial law and it may go hard with them. If proven guilty they should be severely punished, as it is their agitation which is keeping the Kanawha mining region in a state of armed rebellion.

The ten thousand men and women boys' clothing strikers in New York go back to work for a wage increase of from $1 per week to 10 per cent., a fifty-four hour working week, and no discrimination in the re-employment of the workers. They do not get "recognition of the union." New New York still has 60,000 other garment workers on strike since January 1. They refused the settlement agreed upon with their leaders for increased wages, because it provided for a fifty-two hour instead of a fifty-hour working week. By this foolishness they are losing, not only their old wages, but also the increased wages agreed upon.

Forty thousand coal miners in Western Pennsylvania have refused to strike in sympathy with the West Virginia striking coal miners. The convention of District No. 5 of the United Mine Workers of America, so, officially, decided by vote, after strong urging to the contrary.

Eighty-two thousand miners in Illinois, through the Illinois State Miners' Convention, by adopted resolution went on record February 19 as favoring a general strike whenever war is declared by or against the United States. The Socialists captured the convention as this is a Socialist plank, the same as recently adopted by the Socialists of Europe.

The mines are open as usual at Mineville, N. Y. The strike is over and nothing whatever gained by the strikers who were led into it and the wages lost by the I.W.W. and the organizer of the American Federation of Labor, who is under arrest for slandering a nurse. A few men are still out but they are the ones the company refuses to take back. They lose their jobs. The A. F. of L. (Gompers & Co.,) through its affiliated Akron Central Labor Union, is supporting the striking rubber workers of that city, though they are led by the anarchistic and Socialist I.W.W. That alliance, an unholy one, is in direct opposition to anti-I.W.W. incidents of the November convention at Rochester, N. Y., when I.W.W. Haywood had to fly for his life from the convention hall and hide behind the skirts of a laundry woman.

A New One.

SUFFERS FROM LEGISLATION.

ORDINANCE PREVENTS ENDING STREET RAILROAD STRIKE.

Men Went Out Because the Company Attempted to Add a New York Man to the Substitute List and Business of the City Is Almost at a Standstill.

[The Square Deal:] During one of the agitations over a strike on the street railroad at Yonkers, N. Y., a year ago, the Council of the city passed an ordinance under its rights to protect the life of its citizens, which provided that no person could operate a street car within the limits of the municipality who had not had at least fifteen days' local experience. This effectually prevented the use of strike breakers as it would be illegal to use men who had not run the cars in the city for at least two weeks. This was considered at the time a great victory for the unions and as later events have conclusively proven, it was.

In order that they might have a number of men ready and legally able to work, the company established a list of substitutes. They were taken out and taught the art of running the cars and in this way the company kept itself fortified against sickness and probable lay-offs from other causes. This substitute list contained the names of all those eligible to work under the ordinance. Last fall some of the union men made a call on the general manager and insisted that when this waiting list was used, the names of Yonkers men who were on it should be given precedence. The general manager agreed verbally that none but Yonkers men should be placed on the list and the union apparently was satisfied.

Something like a month later, the president of the road sent an outsider, a man from New York City, to be explicit, with orders to take him out, teach him the locality and place him on the waiting list. Here the union rebelled. Their members refused to take the man out and cited the agreement with the general manager, also accusing the newcomer of being a spy. The president said he had never heard of any agreement of the kind and ordered the man to be taken out. The strike vote and order resulted and the men walked out on New Year's eve.

Since that time the controversies between the company and the men have been most bitter. Not a wheel has turned, the company not daring to bring in strike breakers by reason of the ordinance which forbade their presence. The president's answer to all complaints was: "I will not deal with the union. Repeal your ordinance and I will have the cars running in twenty-four hours. There may be trouble, but it will not last long and we will take care of it."

The State cannot compel the company to take the men back for the reason it would be forcing the personal right to contract. The ordinance on the fifteen-day experience blocks the whole proceedings.

Back of this ordinance the strikers assert they are absolutely safe. They claim that as long as strike breakers are an impossibility, they are sure to win. The cars have not moved and the tracks are even rusted for want of use. Two attempts to have the Council meet and repeal the ordinance failed, by reason of the lack of a quorum. It has been asserted that the strikers had been able to keep some of the Councilmen away and thus prevent a quorum.

Meantime, business has come almost to a standstill, it being estimated that the city is losing just about $150,000 a day; that is in the impaired efficiency to the factories, whose employees are unable to get to work promptly; in the increased cost to the commuters, who are at the tender mercies of taxicab men, hack men and temporary bus men, and the merchants, great and small, whose profitable customers cut down, their shopping to the minimum to save the long tramps or the expensive rides.

The strikers number about 300 and are nearly all members of the Amalgamated Association of Electric and Street Railway Employees of America.

Wages Paid by U. S. Steel.

[The Mediator:] Chairman Gary of the United States Steel Corporation made a Christmas Eve announcement that the wages of the organization's 200,000 workmen would shortly be substantially increased.

The announcement is particularly interesting in view of the fact that most of the men who will be benefited by the advance are common laborers.

The announcement of the wage increase was purely voluntary on the part of the Financial Committee of the big organization, and did not come as the result of union pressure.

United States Steel last year paid out in wages $161,500,000, so that even an increase of 3 per cent. all around would amount to an additional outlay of nearly $5,000,000. This increase would about equal the surplus the company will show in current year.

United States Steel's increase in costs resulting from increased wages, welfare work, taxes, bonuses, etc., amounts to at least $40,000,000 a year since organization, and this is in face of increased freight rates and lower prices for steel.

In 1902 the average wage per employee was $717 per year, in 1911 it was $819. The corporation is paying in wages $25,000,000 per year more than had wages remained unchanged.

By averaging the wages paid in this industry in England, Germany, Italy and Austria, for sixty hours weekly work against our fifty-four hours, it is found that the European wages average only 33⅓ per cent. of the American wages. Aggregated the workers named are paid $242.50 weekly against $78.74 in Europe, and that for six hours more work each week. That is striking testimony to the superiority of American wages.

That condition does not exist in the United States. In addition the apprentice system prevails in Europe, in which the wages are very nominal. Similar work is done here by men for a fixed wage.

Eight Hours for Women All Over.

Senator a Follette's bill for eight hours for working women in the District of Columbia has been reported favorably by the committee. Senator Keynon of Iowa has followed it, willing to give women an eight-hour working day in all mills, factories and manufacturing plants in the country whose products are shipped in interstate commerce. That bill should receive approval and passage.

Agreement.

WILL ARBITRATE FIREMEN'S PAY.

FIREMEN WON THEIR DEMAND BY THREAT TO STRIKE.

Asked First for a Seventy-seven Per Cent. Increase, but Have Finally Reduced the Demand to Thirty-five Per Cent., Meaning an Increase of Nine Millions.

To prevent a strike and an entire disorganization of business the fifty-four eastern railroads of which the firemen had demanded increased wages, have consented to arbitration under the so-called Erdman act. The railways made the firemen three propositions. First, they offered them advances in wages relatively the same as those awarded to the enginemen by the board of eminent citizens that arbitrated the enginemen's case. Second, they offered to submit the controversy to arbitration by a board similar to that which arbitrated the enginemen's case. Third, they offered to submit the matter to arbitration by a board composed of two representatives of labor, two representatives of the railways and two disinterested persons. These propositions the firemen rejected. They offered the railways the alternative of arbitrtaion under the Erdman Act or a strike.

The Erdman Act was admittedly never designed to cover large and complicated interests in labor controversy. It was devised on the simplest lines to accommodate disputes between single corporations and their employes. Two arbitrators, one partisan on each side, and one supposed to be impartial, constitute a board of three, the great power of course being in the hands of the third. Under this method the award is due in thirty days.

The railroads have offered their men a minimum wage of $2.40 a day in passenger service. The present minimum is $1.75, though this minimum is paid on but few roads. In through freight service the railroads have offered a minimum of $2.75 per day. They have also offered increases of 10 and 15 cents per day on certain freight engines. All firemen working on freight engines now receive at least $2.45 a day. The Boston and Albany now pays $3 a day; the Baltimore and Ohio, $2.75, $3 and $3.10; the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, $2.90; the New York, New Haven and Hartford pays $2.60 and $2.80 per day; and the Pennsylvania Railroad and the New York Central pay $2.85 and $3. These are through freight rates.

According to the recent arbitration commission in the engineers' case, the average wages of firemen in the district affected by the present strike vote are $2.83 per day. Ten years ago the average was about $2.05, so that the average wages of the firemen who are now threatening to strike have been increased more than 35 per cent. in the past ten years.

The controversy between the firemen and the railroads began last July, when the Firemen's Brotherhood asked for an increase of 77 per cent. on their wages ($20,800,000.) This absurd demand was afterward diminished to 56 per cent., and that ratio was subsequently reduced to 35 per cent. ($9,600,000.) On this basis the firemen now stand, and it will be for the third man on the board of arbitration to say what proportion of this demand shall be paid by the railroads.

Thomas Thorkildsen Home.

Magnificent country estate back of Beverly Hills, Thomas Franklin Power, architect.

CROWNS SIGHTLY KNOLL.

New Beverly Hills Mansion One of the Show Places of Southland. Suggests English Types.

Crowning a sightly knoll directly back of Beverly Hills, the new $100,000 home of Thomas Thorkildsen is one of the most strikingly beautiful places built in Southern California during the past twelve months. The house, which was recently occupied by the owner, was planned by Thomas Franklin Power, under whose supervision the final touches are now being made to the elaborate landscaping scheme.

Architecturally the house suggests the English country estates, and the grounds are being laid out along similar lines. The dwelling has a total width of 191 feet and an average depth of sixty-two feet. It contains twenty-two rooms. The first story is of brick, with plastered exterior walls, and the second story of plaster and heavy half-timber effect. All the main rooms open onto brick-paved porches and terraces.

The interior is of a magnificance in keeping with the exterior, and is finished entirely in hardwoods. The reception hall, thirty-four feet in width, is in mahogany and follows the Elizabethan period. One of its features is a wide, winding stairway lighted by leaded-glass windows. The living-room, forty-six feet in length, is lighted at either end by large bay windows, and contains a Gothic fireplace extending from the floor to the ceiling.

The dining-room is finished in ivory enamel and contains an unusually large and attractive buffet. One of the handsomest of the main rooms is a salon, 41x20 feet in size, finished in gray and gold. In the basement is a large billiard-room in oak and tile, together with a bowling alley.

BUSY ON RANCH.

Immediately following the purchase of the La Puente Rancho by the Torrance Marshall interests, announcement of which was made a week ago, General Manager H. H. Sinclair has begun the work of preparing this 1700 acre tract for subdivision. A camp of sixty men has been established by the engineers in preparing the rancho for citrus planting. Ninety thousand dollars will be expended on the water system, while fifteen miles of roads will be constructed. A well 826 feet in depth already is on the property and engineers are now surveying for two reservoirs. The most interesting feature of the work so far carried out is the construction on the 700-foot level of the Whittier Hills of a great drainage canal for storm water.

ACTIVITY REPORTED.

The Consolidated Los Angeles Home Builders has purchased thirty-six lots in Chesterfield Square and is arranging to begin the construction of eighteen houses in the tract. Seventy-eight other bungalows are being erected. Much of the building activity in the subdivision is in the section north of Fifty-fourth street. The houses being erected on the different streets in Chesterfield Square are as follows: Virginia street, ten; St. Andrew's place, twenty-nine; Gramercy place, sixteen; Wilton place, fifteen; Cimarron, eight. Paving work in the tract is being delayed by the rain.

PLAN SECOND BIG PIPE LINE

General Company Is to Buil Branch to Mohave.

Step Is Taken to Finis United Deal.

First Doheny Tank Steamer Is in Service.

In addition to its 153-mile pipe line from Midway to Los Angeles harbor, the construction of which is nearly finished, the plans of the General Pipe Line Company are now for the building of a branch line from Lebec in the Tejon Pass to Mohave, mainly, it is understood, to render the distribution of oil to certain portions of the interior Southwest simpler. This new line will be about fifty-eight miles in length and all down grade.

It is said that a deal is pending between the Santa Fe Railroad and the General Petroleum Company, by which a portion of the former's oil will be transported via this pipe line, to avoid the difficulties which are involved in shipping by rail over the hard grades.

The recent trip of Eugene De Sabla and Capt. John Barneson to the East is understood to have been for the purpose of financing this project, which is regarded as of considerable importance to the San Joaquin Valley fields.

Closing Up Deal.

According to the terms of the contract of the deal for the United Oil Company by the Oil Producers and Refiners, Ltd., it has been learned that the latter was to take over the property to the extent of paying operating costs and deriving profits yesterday. The United Oil Company retains possession until all the money has been paid, however. According to the recently-issued statement to the stockholders this falls due some time in May.

PLAN SECOND BIG PIPE LINE.

General Company Is to Build Branch to Mohave.

Step Is Taken to Finish United Deal.

First Doheny Tank Steamer Is in Service.

In addition to its 153-mile pipe line from Midway to Los Angeles harbor, the construction of which is nearly finished, the plans of the General Pipe Line Company are now for the building of a branch line from Lebec in the Tejon Pass to Mohave, mainly, it is understood, to render the distribution of oil to certain portions of the interior Southwest simpler. It is said that a deal is pending between the Santa Fe Railroad and the General Petroleum Company, by which a portion of the former's oil will be transported via this pipe line, to avoid the difficulties which are involved in shipping by rail over the hard grades.

The recent trip of Eugene De Sabla and Capt. John Barneson to the East is understood to have been for the purpose of financing this project, which is regarded as of considerable importance to the San Joaquin Valley fields.

Closing Up Deal.

According to the terms of the contract of the deal for the United Oil Company by the Oil Producers and Refiners, Ltd., it has been learned that the latter was to take over the property to the extent of paying operating costs and deriving profits yesterday. The United Oil Company retains possession until all the money has been paid, however. According to the recently-issued statement to the stockholders this falls due some time in May.

"Tanker" in Service.

The "Herbert G. Wiley," the first of the Mexican Petroleum Company's tank steamers, has been placed in service, following its completion in England, and will ply between the Mexican and American ports, mainly on the Gulf of Mexico. Its capacity is 35,000 barrels. Construction work on other ships of the company is rushed.

With the completion of these the company will be in a position, it is stated, to handle all the oil at present produced and more besides.

Reports are that several other Mexican companies are rushing work to provide the oil transportation facilities, which have been so much needed.

Notes and Personals.

Only a few miles of pipe remain to be laid on the General pipe line from the Midway field to Los Angeles harbor. The test of the great $3,500,000 line will probably be made soon.

Coincident with reports of its taking over considerable property in La Habra Valley comes the announcement that the Monte Cristo Oil Company has passed its regular monthly dividend of 2½ cents a share. It is known that the concern has acquired one holding in the valley and that it proposed to take over more, attracted by recent developments.

The Edmonds Midway Oil after considerable trouble with its No. 1 well, mainly because of sand, has brought it in again with a production of about 300 barrels a day. The company has also resumed drilling No. 2, which is down about 3250 feet.

Following his retirement as president of the Central Oil Company, W. W. Neuer has also resigned from the directorate, his place being filled by his stepson, R. E. Heath, who has been superintendent of the company's property. The reason given for Mr. Neuer's retirement from active duties is failing health. I. A. Lothian is now at the company's helm, having been elected president at the annual meeting.

It is reported that Lord Willoughby—who with Andrew Weir, is said to represent the English interests of the General Petroleum Company—has been visiting in the vicinity of the city.

Reports are that the Shell-Royal Dutch interests have organized a subsidiary, known as "La Corona," to operate their properties in the Mexican fields.

Order Default.

Default was ordered yesterday in the suit of the California National Supply Company against A. L. Kreiss for $334.10, as an unsatisfied judgment out of the Superior Court of Los Angeles in favor of the company against the Six Acres Oil Company. Kreiss refusing on garnishment to make payment to be applied to the judgment, though ever since August 23, last, having in his possession in excess of $350 of the companies' money.

Coalinga.

TO CLOSE BIG OIL DEAL SOON.

OVER A MILLION IS INVOLVED IN TRANSACTION.

Sale of Three Companies to Hammon Interests Is Practically Completed Final Details of Deal Are Considered—Default Ordered in Supply Company Suit.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

COALINGA, Feb. 28.—The sale of the Empire, Republic and De Luxe oil properties in the Coalinga field to the Hammon interests has been practically completed, and the new owners will probably take charge of the properties Saturday. The purchase price for the three companies is approximately $1,125,000, half in cash and half in 6 per cent. guaranteed bonds of the purchasing company, redeemable at par. The three companies are known as the Guiberson companies, and the closing of the deal follows closely upon the heels of the transfer of the Silver Tip property a few weeks ago under similar terms.

The balance of the money due for the properties was placed in the bank in San Francisco on February 15, and only the detail work of the transfer remain to be completed. A meeting of the board of directors of the three companies will be held tomorrow in San Francisco, and S. A. Guiberson, Jr., will leave tonight for that city to assist in concluding the arrangements for the transfer. He stated today that the Hammon people will likely take over the management Saturday, March 1. Representatives of the Hammon concern have been taking an inventory and tending to the details of the transfer.

The Empire has one producing well and two wells drilled almost to the oil sand. The Republic has one well which has been shut down for some time. The properties are located in the eastside field, where oil of twenty gravity is secured, and the wells may be depended upon generally, for a good production. On the Standard property, adjoining, a well recently brought in is producing at the rate of 500 barrels per day. The De Luxe has two wells which are now about shut down. They yield a sixteen gravity oil.

It is not known what the development policy of the purchasing company will be, but it is believed that the wells will be put in good condition. The ready market for the lighter oil of the Empire and Republic leads to the belief that the Hammon people will do considerable development upon these properties. It is doubtful, however, if there will be further development on the heavy oil properties until the price of fuel oil is considerably advanced.

OIL LEASES IN DEMAND.

Many Deals for Property in Fullerton Field Are Reported—Monte Cristo Seems Active.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

FULLERTON, Feb. 27.—There is a heavier demand for oil leases in the Fullerton district than at any previous time. It seems as if nearly every walnut and orange grower near the foothills in both Fullerton and Placentia, as well as in La Habra Valley, has been approached during the past few weeks by representatives of oil companies who offer to pay big bonuses as well as heavy royalties.

In the Placentia district Miss L. Armstrong has leased twenty acres to the Monte Cristo Oil Company for a $5000 bonus and one-sixth royalty. It is also reported that the same company has leased the Roberts tract of forty acres on section 19, east of the Oresby and Walker-Brand leases.

The McFadden estate has also been leased to the Monte Cristo for a $3000 bonus and one-sixth royalty, according to report. The company is to begin drilling in ninety days, and if oil is struck in the first well, others will be put down, it is said.

It is also reported that leases have been taken on the Ortega place, L. P. Drake, Benjamin Kraemer and the L. Anderson tracts.

Thomas Strain is said to have been offered a bonus of $350,000 and a heavy royalty for the oil rights on his place in Placentia before he commenced drilling his own well. Strain refused to accept this liberal offer. His well is now down nearly 1800 feet.

Mrs. Young, whose property adjoins the Thomas Strain ranch, has leased her holdings for a liberal bonus and a one-fourth royalty.

The Largest and Most Beautiful Natural Sunken Garden in the World.

According to a legend of San Jacinto its valley was once upon a time the bed of a big lake of laughing water, where lived the Great God of the Redmen. Time went well for many, many years. Seasons came and seasons went. His tribe multiplied, but the land grew not. This great and good spirit with eyes and ears opened looked and listened. The continuous taunt of the laughing waters made him angry. He knew why they laughed, and with one mighty swoop made a stroke which broke his tail, but drained the lake, exposing the cause of all the mirth—FOR THIS LAKE'S BOTTOM WAS CERTAINLY PRETTY TO LOOK UPON. FERTILE AND PRODUCTIVE, BECAUSE IT IS, WHAT IT WAS, AND EVERYBODY IS NOW LAUGHING FOR THE SAME REASON THE WATER DID.

SOME PROOF.

Mr. W. S. Wood of Glendale says it's the best buy in the country, and nips a dandy 160 acres, which he has under extensive development, and is going to make one of the show places of the valley.

Mr. C. W. Sears, an experienced alfalfa grower, says he has spent $3000 investigating lands from Oregon clear down the line, and that San Jacinto lands are the best to be found anywhere at anything like the price. His purchase consists of a beautiful tract in the Willow Plume District. He is already at work converting his place into a beauty spot as well as a money-getter.

IF YOU ARE LOOKING FOR A CLASSY RANCH, YOU SHOULD BY ALL MEANS SEE THIS FERTILE LITTLE VALLEY. THERE IS NO GUESSWORK ABOUT MAKING MONEY HERE AND LOTS OF IT.

Dividends Paid and to Be Paid

Quarterly Dividend, Feb. 28, 3½% on Par, Will Be Paid March 15.
Quarterly Dividend, December 1, 1912, 3% on Par PAID.
Quarterly Dividend, September 1, 1912, 2¼% on Par PAID.

These dividends are the result of the earning power of Gibraltar in subdividing great acreage and selling as orchard homes; the propagating and growing of millions of olive nursery stock and hundreds of thousands of other trees; and the buying and selling of city real estate. The Gibraltar Tract at Bloomington is selling steadily in tracts of 5, 10 and 20 acres. The special terms (10 years if desired)—$20 down and $5 per month, per acre, including principal and interest, appeals particularly to the man of small means.

Some of the Growing Assets—

The economy effected through the growing of trees, from propagating plant and seed-bed; the purchase of land in large tracts at wholesale prices; subdividing the same, planting it to trees, and the selling of the complete orchard home, under one organization, with one selling cost, makes the big profits for Gibraltar's shareholders.

Gibraltar owns:

A great chain of nurseries; the three largest olive propagating plants in the world; is propagating and growing over 11,000,000 olive trees; a great tract of 1897 acres at Bloomington. Negotiations are under way for the purchase of other great tracts, and a decided, profitable future is in store for Gibraltar's shareholders.

Today Gibraltar's Progressive, Profit-making Shares are selling at 18c. It is of the utmost importance to you to investigate—to write for our literature or call at the office. You feel it is your duty to save—maybe you have found it hard—at any rate your investment in Gibraltar will place your dollar in the channels of profitable re-investment and return large and continuous profits.

in the history of the selling of citrus and olive groves. The accessibility of this land, with every modern and suburban and ranch convenience, makes it particularly desirable for the man of moderate means, giving him the opportunity of coming into immediate possession of an orchard home that will return an independent income.

These Terms Mark a New Era in Land Development

A four-acre, full-bearing olive grove at Bloomington produced $3200 in 1911, when olives sold at $100 ton, have begun bearing and paid expenses fourth year.

A ten-year grove of Navels and Valencias cleared $1000 an acre for several years.

Six acres (owned by a woman, near Bloomington) yielded 2600 boxes in one year, netting $2000.

20-acres lemons sold in 1912 for $11,000. First crop paid for the property.

Prizes Won By Bloomington

Particular adaptation of Bloomington soil for citrus fruits is shown by the consistent winning of the Bloomington exhibits at each successive orange show. At the National Orange Show last year

Bloomington won the Grand Sweepstakes for Oranges. This year she secured Second Grand Sweepstakes for both Oranges and Lemons, coming within 8 points of possible 300 points of again taking sweepstakes; won first on Grapefruit; first for largest display of Washington Navel oranges and had largest rack exhibit in the show.

Gibraltar's booth in Industrial Section won first prize. It displayed products from Bloomington and olive and nursery stock from seed-bed and propagating plant to the orchard home. The Gibraltar Acres directly adjoin the wealth producing groves at Bloomington.

Gibraltar Acres are on the main line of the Southern Pacific.

Gibraltar Acres are only 7 miles from San Bernardino; 7 miles from Riverside; 4 miles from Colton and 52 miles from Los Angeles.

Gibraltar Acres are close to schools, churches, stores, trolley line, (another electric line building;) two large packing houses, one on and one near the tract; olive picking works and oil mill (adjoining) and all modern ranch and suburban conveniences.

Trims Carnegie.

It appeared that the Consolidated company made an agreement with the Minnesota company whereby the latter company was to purchase no more iron mines, leasing its mines from the Consolidated. A similar agreement was made between the Consolidated and the Carnegie company. It then developed, according to Mr. Gayley's testimony, that the Carnegie company in 1900 violated its agreement and purchased properties containing 75,000,000 tons of ore.

MINISTER AS AGENT.

This, said the witness, resulted in a meeting in New York between himself and another official of the Carnegie company and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and the Rev. Frederick T. Gates, Mr. Rockefeller's ore agent.

"Did Mr. Gates demand of the Oliver Mining Company that there should be turned over to the Consolidated company without condition 75,000,000 tons of ore acquired by the Oliver Iron Company in contravention of the agreement between the two companies?" asked Jacob M. Dickinson, attorney for the government.

"Mr. Gates did make such a demand at the time, but we explained that under the agreement Mr. Rockefeller was not supplying us with all the ore lands we needed."

"Did your contention prevail?"

"Well, we turned the properties over to them, which may be construed as an admission that their claim was correct," smiled Mr. Gayley. "They agreed to make a new deal, however, under which we were to receive larger tonnages."

CALLS IT GAME OF BLUFF.

Judge Dickinson read from a letter written by Gayley to the directors of the Carnegie company in reference to the meeting.

"It is difficult to play a game of bluff when the other party holds the cards and you know it," the letter read. "Nevertheless, we have retained 60,000,000 of the 75,000,000 tons."

The 60,000,000 tons, Mr. Gayley explained, were obtained by agreeing to lease the lands from the Consolidated company.

Another passage from the minutes expressed the fear that to turn the properties over to the Consolidated company would be the same as turning them over to the Federal Steel Company. Judge Dickinson tried to bring out from the witness that "Rockefeller's people" had an interest in the Federal's subsidiary, the Minnesota company, but Mr. Gayley professed ignorance of such a thing.

Other passages from the minutes referred to properties bought "for fear they will be taken up by the Federal." The witness was able to throw little light on these transactions.

The hearing was adjourned to next Wednesday, when Mr. Gayley will continue his testimony.

A MATHEMATICAL WONDER.

Tamil Youth of Sixteen Years Does Wonderful Problems With Ease Though He Knows Little English.

[Minneapolis Journal:] A Tamil boy, 16 years old, has for some time past been astonishing the inhabitants of India and Cochin China by his wonderful calculating feats, and has now submitted to a test at the hands of the Ceylon branch of the Royal Asiatic Society here.

He knows little English except the names of the numerals and mathematical expressions. He is abnormal not only in mind, but also in body, for he has six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot. His own account of himself is that his wonderful powers are the direct gift of the god Subraman, and he says that when he was 8 years old he was taken to the Kartingay festival at Tiruparankundram and that in the night he dreamed that the god came to him and wrote the word "mathematics" on his tongue and in the morning he had twelve fingers and twelve toes instead of ten. At the same time he found himself possessed suddenly of great calculating powers.

Among some of the tests given him at two recent public demonstrations, all of which are answered correctly, were the square root of 853,776, the answer of which—924—was given in an instant; the cube root of 274,625—65, which was given just as quickly. When asked the result of [illegible] multiplied by 231, in about two [illegible] onds came the answer. In the [illegible] of one sum set him the examiner [illegible] the wrong sum set down in [illegible] but the correct answer was given [illegible] the boy.

Problems in compound [illegible] discount, exchange and other [illegible] metical rules were set him and [illegible] answered all tests correctly, [illegible] only mental calculations and in [illegible] siderably less time than the [illegible] could have been worked out [illegible] paper. "A fat man," he said, "could [illegible] help laughing one day at the [illegible] appearance of a very bowlegged [illegible] —one of those arch-looking [illegible] you know.

Beautiful Santa Monica, the Queen of the Bay Cities, is just on the threshold of a great movement which will place it before the world as Southern California's most beautiful all-the-year-round watering place.

Even now, it is the Mecca for countless thousands, and its permanent population totals are mounting higher and higher. Throughout the city and its environs building activity is great.

Santa Monica is growing outward along its finest boulevard—San Vicente, a continuation of Wilshire Boulevard of Los Angeles. Now, consider this fact! Gillette's Regent Square, the "newest of the new" offerings along this boulevard, will feel the prosperity wave first because it is closest in. Its location guarantees early buyers handsome profits.

Let the fact sink deep that this Wilshire-San Vicente Boulevard section has the greatest possibilities for the future. Then decide that your purchase must be in the newest and most modern of the subdivisions being offered along this thoroughfare.

Very interesting and satisfactory terms can be arranged. Completely eliminated, however, is the speculator who wants to buy up and hold a large block of lots on the small first payment plan. Speculation of this nature retards development and prevents real home-lovers from enjoying a legitimate opportunity.

Perfect climatic conditions are characteristic of this district. Proper drainage. Exhilarating ozone. Cool sea breezes in summer. No extremes. A balmy climate, surpassing the Mediterranean's best.

Large Lots. All modern improvements. Street work of highest quality. Water, gas, electricity and sewers. Frequent cars. No unsightly features.

Make appointment now for advance inspection auto trip. Absolutely no charge for a delightful ride, which takes you through the Wilshire-San Vicente-Santa Monica section. Ask for beautifully illustrated booklet giving views and map of Gillette's Regent Square.

CASSATT-ADV-

THE SPEAKER'S BRIEF POWERS.

Authority Limited by Rules Adopted by House.

Many Distinguished Men Occupied the Office.

Rarely Ever Speak from the Floor in Debate.

[Youth's Companion:] "The title of 'Speaker' is a palpable misnomer, if the word is to be used in the ordinary sense, for most emphatically it is not his chief duty to make speeches, but to maintain order and decorum, to conduct the business of the House, and in a general way to supervise things in that large and tumultuous assembly. He is expected to deliver a short inaugural address and a short speech at the close of each session, the only speech making which custom makes binding on him," says Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, describing the duties of the presiding officer of this branch of the national Legislature.

The Speaker has the same right as any other member to speak from the floor. In the earlier days it seems to have been the rule rather than the exception. It was Henry Clay's habit to participate in debate whenever the spirit moved him, which was quite frequently. Mr. Crisp spoke from the floor only once. That was on the Wilson tariff bill. Neither Mr. Reed nor Mr. Henderson participated in debate, and Mr. Cannon did so only a few times. On several occasions he delivered eulogies on deceased members.

So far Mr. Clark has spoken only thrice from the floor during his term as Speaker—once, closing the debate on President Taft's veto of our wool and woolen goods bill, and once on the life, character and services of Senator John Warwick Daniel of Virginia; and in justification of the course pursued by the Democratic House.

It being a most insignificant portion of the duties of the presiding officer of the House of Representatives to make speeches, how came he by the misfit title of Speaker? It is not a difficult matter to find the reason for the misnomer. The presiding officer of the House of Commons is called 'Speaker' because originally he spoke for the House to the King and the Lords on ceremonial occasions. We simply borrowed the title from the English without rhyme or reason—as we borrowed so many other features of our government from them.

"Prior to the inauguration of President Taft the government had existed 120 years under the Constitution, and the twenty-five Presidents had served an average of four and four-fifths years, ranging from Gen. William Henry Harrison's thirty days to two full terms for Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Grant and Cleveland.

"In the 120 years preceding my election," says Mr. Clark, "there were thirty-five regurally elected Speakers, not counting Theodore M. Pomeroy of New York, who was elected for one day. His election came about in this way. On March 3, 1869, Mr. Speaker Colfax resigned. So far as I have been able to ascertain, no sufficient reason was ever given for his action. The fact that he was to be sworn in March 4 as Vice-President does not satisfy the inquiring mind. At any rate, he did resign, and Mr. Pomeroy was elected.

"Of course many men have been elected Speaker pro tempore and the Speaker sometimes designates some member to act as Speaker for one day without the consent of the House, or for ten days with the consent of the House. He can do this in one of two ways: (1) By announcing the designation in open House; (2) by a letter to the clerk of the House. But I am speaking of my thirty-five regularly elected predecessors, not including Mr. Pomeroy. The average service of the thirty-five is 3 3-7 years.

"Henry Clay was elected six times, resigned twice and served something over ten years. Mr. Speaker Cannon comes next in length of service, four full terms, aggregating eight years. Mr. Speaker Stevenson of Virginia was elected for four full terms, but resigned about the middle of the fourth term to go as Minister to the Court of St. James.

"Five Presidents—the elder Harrison, Taylor, Lincoln, Garfield and McKinley—have died in office, but only one Speaker—Michael C. Kerr of Indiana.

"Three men, and only three, have been elected to the Speakership on their first day of service in the House—Frederick A. Muhlenberg, William Pennington and Henry Clay. Muhlenberg was elected on the first day of the First Congress. He had served in the Continental Congress. Clay had served a short time in the Senate. Pennington was elected after a deadlock lasting two months, chiefly because he had no political record to worry him.

"It is a peculiar and interesting fact that no man was ever elected Speaker chiefly because of his knowledge of parliamentary law. A man is elected by reason of the possession of other qualities. The quality of leadership is usually the thing that enables a man to win the glittering prize. It goes without saying that some of the Speakers have been skilled parliamentarians."

It is only on rare occasions that a parliamentary question of great import or difficulty is presented to the Speaker. These are argued in extenso. While the Speaker is listening to the debate the parliamentary clerk is collecting the precedents, if any there be, which he places before the Speaker, who gives his decision with or without giving reasons for the same.

"If it is a new question he usually renders an opinion more or less elaborate, as that opinion blazes the way on that question for himself and his successors. No Speaker is bound to follow precedents. Indeed, a rule, though wrong, may have been followed so long that it would be revolutionary and unwise to reverse it. It is a matter of common knowledge that any member may appeal from the decision of the Speaker to the House itself, the appeal being debatable unless debate is cut off by a motion to table the appeal.

"Mr. Speaker Reed, Mr. Speaker Henderson and Mr. Speaker Cannon were fortunate in having as their parliamentary clerk Asher C. Hinds, now a Representative in Congress from Maine," says Mr. Clark. "Had he not been elected to Congress I would unhesitatingly have reappointed him, notwithstanding he is a Republican, as I have implicit faith in his integrity, and all men in Washington recognize his ability as a parliamentarian. I am equally fortunate in having secured the services of Judge Charles R. Crisp of Georgia, who was parliamentary clerk for his father, Mr. Speaker Crisp. Judge Crisp, I might add, is now a member-elect of the Sixty-third Congress. Running for Congress appears to be inevitable with parliamentary clerks."

What is the status of the Speaker under our system of government? It is generally considered as occupying a place second only to the Presidency itself.

"The power of the Speaker grew to abnormal proportions under what was popularly denominated 'the Cannon system,' but which, to do Mr. Speaker Cannon only simple justice, was not a Cannon system, but one which he found ready for his hand. The power of the Speaker has been gradually growing for 120 years. In fact, it grew nearly exactly in proportion as the membership increased in number. Finally it became so preponderating as to be intolerable.

"Consequently in the Sixty-first Congress a modus vivendi was formed between the Democrats and enough insurgent Republicans to constitute a majority, and we overturned the old order of things. The three greatest sources of the Speaker's abnormal power were: First, his appointment of committees; second, his chairmanship of the Committee on Rules, which committee consisted of two Democrats and two Republicans besides himself, an arrangement which practically made him the Committee on Rules, and third, the authority to recognize or to refuse to recognize a member to ask for unanimous consent for the House to consider a bill or resolution.

"This gave him more power than any one man ought to possess in a republic. In the Sixty-first Congress we established a 'unanimous consent calendar,' so that any member by giving three days' notice in writing to the clerk of the House can have placed on that calendar any bill or resolution that has been reported from a committee. Mr. Speaker Cannon declared that to be a great relief to the Speaker, and I have found it to be true.

"On March 19, 1910, the House after a terrific parliamentary struggle enlarged the Committee on Rules to ten members, made it elective by the House and took the Speaker off it.

"I have always considered the character of that battle royal one of the strongest proofs of our capacity for self-government. For three days and nights we fought under intense excitement and amid dramatic scenes, but, to the credit of the House, there was scarcely an unparliamentary word uttered.

"Incidentally it may be remarked not impertinently that the five-minute rule is the most successful condenser of oratory ever invented by man. It may also be stated that Mr. Reed was the strongest maker of short speeches I ever heard. He was a masterful great man—one of the most brilliant and forceful of all the Speakers that have ever presided over the House of Representatives.

"At the beginning of the present Congress the Democrats still further reformed the rules by making the committees elective by the House itself instead of having them appointed by the Speaker.

"It was vigorously asserted that if the Speaker was deprived of the power to appoint the committees and was not permitted to be chairman of the Committee on Rules he could not maintain order, decorum could not be preserved, business could not be transacted and chaos would return—all of which turned out to be untrue, for order has been maintained, decorum is preserved, business has been expedited and chaos is conspicuous by its absence.

"That these changes have diminished the power of the Speaker there can be no question, but they have restored to the members the power of which th Speaker has been deprived; and these are precisely the results which the coalition that I had started out to accomplish.

The Speaker still has abundant power left him. He cannot play the autocrat, which is a good thing, as th American people do not take kindly to autocrats, even if they are benevolent autocrats."

Mines and Mining in the Great Southwest

EMPLOY OVER EIGHT HUNDRED.

Distribution of Workmen in the Camp.

Consolidated Leads With Over Six Hundred.

Grant's Youngest Son Pays Visit to District.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GOLDFIELD (Nev.) Feb. 23.—More than 830 men are employed in the mines and mills of the Goldfield mining district. The writer has just made a careful canvass of the camp, and, while there may be some emissions, the result was as follows: Goldfield Consolidated, 621; Goldfield Merger, 60; Jumbo Extension, 22; Florence Goldfield, 10; C. O. D. Consolidated, 10; Goldfield Oro, 10; Sandstorm Kendall, 9; New Jersey Mines Company, 9; Nevada Eagle, 7; Silver Pick, 7; Lone Star, 6; Blue Bull, 6; Vernal, 5; Diamondfield Black Butte, 5; Goldfield Mining and Ore Reduction Company, 5; Belmont, 4; Western Ore Purchasing Company, 20; others employed on leases, 11; total 833.

The above list is the result of a canvass of the district, and gives the number of men on the payroll of each company, but does not include a number of men who are in charge of work at various points, some of whom might be classed as miners. In the case of the Consolidated the list includes the men employed in the company's reduction plant, but this department and others connected with ore treatment, including the railroad, chemical laboratories and sampling plant, employ fewer than one hundred men, leaving a total of actual miners employed by the big company of considerably more than 500.

The Western Ore Purchasing Company has on an average twenty men employed in its local sampler. No other reduction plants are now operating in the district, but the Nevada Goldfield mill, recently acquired by the French Western Exploration and Reduction Company, is in good operating condition and may be placed in commission at any time.

In the foregoing list are a number of companies that may be expected to add to their present working forces materially within the next few months. The force of the Consolidated is upon a fairly well established basis, and is not unlikely to undergo any considerable change in point of numbers unless, with the further opening of the deep levels in the Grizzly Bear and Clermont mines, an augmented force shall be found necessary at these points.

On the Goldfield Merger it is likely that the force of workmen will be increased, rather than reduced, in the near future, as the work is now largely of a preliminary character, involving the sinking of the St. Ives shaft to great depth. Preparations are made by the Jumbo Extension Mines Company to install a larger compressor in order to permit of the use of additional drills in development, and stoping ore, and this will mean the employment of a larger force of men.

There is now the fullest confidence on the part of persons interested in the Florence Goldfield that this property will resume operations under full swing at an early date and that the company will provide facilities for treating its ore and will proceed to open up the mine on deep levels. The annual meeting of the company will be held in Goldfield within a few days when it is regarded as probable that a definite policy will be outlined by the directors as to future operations.

One of the companies that is certain to employ a considerable number of men during the present year is the Goldfield Oro, which is preparing for the development of its property upon an elaborate scale, and is amply financed for carrying its plans to fruition. The comparatively small force employed is adequate for present needs, as the work is now confined to enlarging the main shaft by raising from the bottom, a depth of 350 feet.

The general condition of the mines in the Goldfield district continues to show a marked improvement and a number of the properties which have not been classed among the producers in the past are now nearing the productive stage; some of them, in fact, give good promise of becoming really great mines. The preparatory work that has been in progress on some of these properties, involving the sinking of deep shafts, and the opening up of the vein at great depth, is necessarily slow. To those persons, however, who are familiar with mining methods on the scale in vogue in the Goldfield district, there is every cause for gratification at the manner in which this ground is developed, and in the prospects for the making of other bonanza mines.

A strong point in favor of the district is found in the type of men who are backing with their money the larger undertakings of the camp. A list of these men includes names that are among the most prominent in the mining world, such as former Senator William A. Clark, F. M. (Borax) Smith, George Wingfield, Charles E. Knox, Slyde Heller, C. B. Zabriskie, Thomas Kearns, David Keith and others equally prominent. The deepest development work ever undertaken in the Goldfield district is that in progress in the Grizzly Bear mine of the Goldfield Consolidated, at a depth of 1400 feet, and there is every indication of success.

An indication of the class of men who are now becoming interested in Goldfield is the fact that, unheralded and unsung, Jesse Dent Grant, youngest son of the famous Civil War general and former President of the United States, has been in camp for the past three or four weeks. He is simply looking around, but the fact that he came to Goldfield after spending some time in Arizona and other western mining States, shows the interest that prominent men are taking in this camp.

A new town is established in Southern Nevada, which will be the center of an important industry, conducted upon a scale of great magnitude. The name of the town is Carrara, situated nine miles south of Beatty, and the industry is the production of marble, of which, in varying quality, vast deposits have been blocked out by extensive prospecting with diamond drills. The work has been in progress for the past three years. All of the product of the company will be shipped to Los Angeles, which will be the actual headquarters of the industry.

From 200 to 300 men will be employed at the quarries and for other work. Experienced laborers from the marble quarries of Vermont and Colorado have been secured by the new company. Park V. Perkins is vice-president and general manager of the American Carrara Marble Company, as the company is known.

The Goldfield Mining and Ore Reduction Company is working on the Third Chance property, adjoining the Atlanta and Merger claims, under lease, and is driving for a strong vein that has been developed near this point. Operations are under the direction of Marvin Arnold, one of the pioneer mining men of this district.

Bisbee.

CALUMET TO GET MORE HOLDINGS.

PLAN TO ABSORB SAGINAW MINES IS ANNOUNCED.

Old Resident of Bisbee Returns With Lease on Coast Properties. Fire's Damage to Democrata Smelter Is Repaired—Cobriza Company Ships Copper Matte.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

BISBEE (Ariz.) Feb. 24.—After long-continued negotiation, announcement at last has been made of the absorption by the Calumet and Arizona of the Saginaw holdings in this district, contingent only upon a formal ratification by the stockholders. This will be the principal business brought before a stockholders' meeting in Bisbee, March 10.

James Letson, an old resident of Bisbee, but latterly of Los Angeles, has returned from the Coast bringing with him a least on the Higgins property, on which work will probably be resumed within a month. He is making a survey of the mine, to determine the best spots for development.

Churn drilling on the Copper King claims has been changed across the canyon, to the locality of the old Copper Queen Hospital. No reports of development have been made public, but it is said that results thus far have been satisfactory.

The Calumet and Arizona is doing some deep development work with good results on the 1350-foot level within the Irish Mag property, this being the greatest depth ever reached in that mine.

The concrete lining of the Junction shaft now is up 300 feet from the 1500-foot level. The rate at which the work is carried on is considered rapid.

The Democrata Company at Cananea is turning out twenty tons of copper daily, having repaired the damage lately done by fire to its new smelter building.

High-grade copper matte is shipped by the Cobriza Mining Company from its new 150-ton smelter, seventeen miles west of La Noria, Sonora. The plant was started February 14 and is operating to the fullest satisfaction of the management. F. C. Emory, president of the company, is in local charge. The mine has been developed for seven years, and within that time 10,000 feet of work has been done, to a depth of 520 feet.

KNAPP'S WEALTH-PRODUCING IDEA.

How an Educated Man, Failing to Sell 1,000,000 Acres of Land for a Syndicate, Developed a Theory Which He Gave to the National Government and which, in Its Application, Is Paying Off Mortgages and Building Barns and Houses.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.—A lean, gray, man, riding a pony through the red dust of Texas, stopped at a field and hailed the owner, who was picking cotton. The gray man was W. F. Proctor of Tyler. The name of the field owner is not essential.

"Friend," said Proctor, "I want to help you improve your condition."

"Pumps, churns, or lightning rods?" asked the field owner, sarcastically.

"Neither," Proctor answered good-naturedly. "I'd like to know if you will plant an acre of cotton—only one acre, you understand—according to my instructions. I am an agent of the Agricultural Department in Washington. It seems to me, as I look at your field, that you might double your crop with a little extra labor."

"Stranger," the farmer replied, shooting his words, as is customary with those who deal and work in the open, "I was born on the southeast side of a cotton stalk. That's where I live at present. No man from Washington, D. C., can learn me anything about cotton."

"Nevertheless," Proctor said, getting off his pony, "and, notwithstanding, I can tell you more in two minutes than you can absorb in two months. You don't know how to pick cotton, let alone the other and more important branches of the business. I see your two sons are helping you this morning. I'll agree to pick two rows against you and the boys and prove my assertion."

Now it happened that W. F. Proctor, slim, long-armed, and strong-backed, was famous in and around Tyler as a picker. The challenge was accepted and the contest was on the next minute. Proctor fairly ate up his rows and won the race by fifteen yards or more. Then he picked back on the two rows of the farmer and his boys and met them, steaming with perspiration and looking astonished and humiliated.

"Brother," the farmer exclaimed, throwing his hat on the ground, "I don't know your name and don't care a durn, but I'll believe anything you tell me hereafter."

The acre was planted the next season. Proctor proved his case again. Since then the Texas planter has followed the new methods and increased his yield of cotton almost 300 pounds to the acre. There are hundreds of men like Mr. Proctor, some on ponies, and some in buggies, carrying Seamon A. Knapp's great idea to the agriculturists of America. It is called co-operative demonstration work among the farmers, and is one of the mighty forces which are adding to the wealth of the cotton and helping land owners pay their debts, build better houses, and buy new machinery and automobiles.

In some States the Knapp idea has increased the yield of cotton 684 pounds to the acre and doubled the harvest of corn. It can be applied to wheat, hay and live stock and to grains, fruits and vegetables. Indeed, it is for the whole country, although it has been tested so far in the South alone, because it was there that it was most needed. Seaman A. Knapp originated no agricultural theories; he made no agricultural discoveries. His idea had to do altogether with the teaching of other men's methods.

Bulletins and books, he said, would never reach the farmer, or, if reaching him, would fail to convince and convert. The farmer, he declared, had to be shown and not preached at with pen and paper. So he went into the wilderness, and did his proselyting with the new religion concerning a plow and harrow instead of with a tract. A speculation in Louisiana prairie land—private entirely and commercial in a sense—gave him the idea and invested it with romance. Bradford Knapp, his son, disciple and successor, chief of the agents whom the national government has employed to carry the idea into the valleys and across the plains of the South and Southwest, told me the story as well as he could, because he figures in it himself.

NATIVES SCARED THEM AWAY.

"A syndicate of men," he said, "bought 1,000,000 acres of flat land in Louisiana. My father, who had taught Greek, Latin and mathematics in the State of New York, and agriculture at the Iowa University, was engaged to manage the sale of the land to northern farmers. The railroads brought the farmers down cheaply enough, but the natives, [illegible] as wolves, wearing overalls with [illegible] made of twine, said the prairie wouldn't grow anything but a very poor quality of stunted grass, [illegible] to the ground for corn. So the farmers went back to the North. The enterprise was on the edge of collapse when my father hit upon the plan of planting part of the land to crops. He would show the homeseekers coming our way that the prairies of Louisiana would actually produce. The strangers would believe what they saw, while the natives might stand around and laugh. So began, many years ago, my father's first demonstration work.

"I was then about 15 years old and went into the experiments with great enthusiasm, putting out several acres in sweet potatoes and gathering a really wonderful crop. Twenty of the largest sweet potatoes filled a barrel. Tourists came, agents of the railroads came, reporters came, and I would proudly count them in and out. But the land, finally, at my father's suggestion, was set apart for the growing of rice. The syndicate bought it for [illegible] an acre. It is now worth [illegible].

"I think it is admitted that my father established the rice industry in the United States. He had known James Wilson of the Agricultural Department while both were farmers in Iowa, and so he was sent by the national government to Japan and China on public business, chiefly to study the cultivation of rice. In the meantime the boll-weevil had crossed the Mexican border, was destroying the cotton crops of Texas and slowly moving east and east across the State toward Arkansas and Louisiana. Hundreds of farmers quit planting cotton.

KNAPP WENT TO TEXAS.

"Experts in the Agricultural Department thought out a scheme for checking the cotton worm. An earlier maturing plant, they said, would reduce the damage by cutting short the season in which it could operate. But the farmers were discouraged, and they were not impressed by what they heard from Washington. 'Prove it to them,' my father said. 'Any man will believe his own eyes.' He received, you see, his experience in Louisiana. Presently he was ordered to Texas. From cotton he went into corn; his work broadened. Circumventing the boll-weevil was nationally important, but so were the methods of protecting and increasing other crops."

Bradford Knapp.

By this time Bradford Knapp had grown up and been given degrees at Iowa Agricultural College, Vanderbilt University, and the University of Michigan. The Knapps owned a number of Louisiana farms in 1893, on which there were mortgages. During the panic of that year they were sold out by their creditors. "It was a slick performance," Bradley Knapp said to me, "so slick that we couldn't defend our interests. 'I'll study law,' I told my father, 'and see if I can learn how the trick was done.'" Bradley Knapp practiced law a year or two in Iowa and then became his father's assistant. When Seaman A. Knapp died, a multi-millionaire, not in property but in service done for the public, his son succeeded him in office.

"We have about 1000 agents," he said, in explaining the work that his father established. "They are picked men and are chosen to fit the communities in which they are to labor. Some of them are graduates of agricultural colleges, and all of them thoroughly understand the business of farming. There are many large cotton plantations along the western border of Mississippi, the managers of which often get $2000 annually as wages. Obviously the agent who goes among them must be a precise and technical man. If we were to send him into the interior of the State, however, to deal with the redneck and hillbillies, as the inhabitants are called, he would be ridiculed because he wore a 'biled' shirt.

SOME AGENTS GET $1800.

"Then we must choose men of discretion, who understand rural ways and character, and who will not let their enthusiasm for some particular soil product lead the farmers into impracticable undertakings. There are county, district, and State agents. I am the colonel, as they dub me, and with the help of my staff, direct the work of the men in the field. Agents receive from $75 a month to $1800 a year—the States and the national government often co-operating in supplying money to pay the salaries. An agent, after he is appointed, goes to six or a dozen farmers in his county and says: 'The people in Washington believe they can put some money in your pocket. They want to know if you will mark off an acre of your land and plow, plant and cultivate it exactly as you are instructed?'

"Several of the farmers may accept the proposition. One or two may threaten to drive the agent off the premises. We shall say, for illustration, that Mr. Jones agrees to set aside an acre and follow orders, and that he is to plant corn. He has been plowing a three-inch furrow all his life, using one horse or a mule. We have him plow eight inches deep, which he reluctantly does, after borrowing three more horses in the neighborhood. Next, we have him harrow the land to make it fine. He objects, never having used a harrow and looking on it as another of the absurdities hatched in Washington, D. C., with sneering emphasis on the letters 'D. C.' Then he plants the seed, and after the corn is in the ground we tell him to harrow the land again. This is the critical stage of the negotiations. Jones may swear and threaten to fight. The least he does is to call the agent a fool, or to think he is one, which amounts to the same thing.

MORE SHOCKS FOR JONES.

"The cultivation of the corn follows. Jones has always plowed his corn, employing the same implement which he originally used in turning over the earth, and coming to the end of each row with a bunch of young roots on his colter-brace as big as my hat. By this time he has lost considerable of his pugnacity or controversial inclination and moodily obeys orders. Washington, D. C., is making a monkey of him, he says to himself, but it will never happen again. When he cultivates his corn the last time, which is in June, we have him plant cowpeas between the rows. 'More doggoned nonsense,' he exclaims, but the peas go in.

"We insist that when a crop is ripe that it shall be harvested forthwith, so that the stalks of dying wheat, cotton, corn, or potatoes do not keep on drawing water from the ground and robbing the next season of the moisture that should remain stored in the earth. Well, in due time Jones cuts and husks his acre of corn. If he lives in Texas—I am now quoting averages and not the yield of any one particular farm—he will get 22 1-3 bushels of corn, as against 8¼ bushels from the rest of his land. If he lives in Oklahoma he will have multiplied his crop by two. Jones is convinced, but the battle is not over.

"We instruct him to plow the cowpeas under. 'I'll not do it,' he yells. 'Then vines is the only feed I have for my mule.' Maybe he is as good as his word. Perhaps, after a contest with himself, he carries out orders. If he does, we have him plant that particular acre to cotton the following year, telling him what to do at each stage in the processes of production. If he lives in Mississippi his harvest is increased by 535 pounds, which at 10 cents a pound amounts to $53.50. If he lives in Georgia, the increase is 775 pounds. No more missionary work is necessary with Jones. 'I've been farming for a quarter of a century,' he will tell his neighbors, 'but I find that I am only one year old.'

THE ROAD TO INDEPENDENCE.

"Now, still talking about Jones, the increased cost to him in the cultivation of the acre has been so trifling that it has no place in the mathematics of his achievement. We then proceed to show him that he needs more power—more horses and mules. The average number of horses and mules on the farms of Missouri is 4 3-10, and on the farms of Iowa it is 6 1-10, while in five States South, namely, South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, the average is only one and a fraction. The averages as to cows are about the same.

"We tell Jones that he will always be poor and in debt unless he produces his own food. Plant corn, raise hogs, keep poultry, get a couple of cows, start a garden and set out fruit trees, we say. 'Be sure that you have enough to eat. After you have provided for your own food supply and fodder enough for your live stock then put in the crops which you mean to sell. Do as we say, and you will be independent for the first time in your life.'

"Certainty of production is the one great object at the base of our methods. There will be lean and fat years, naturally, but no seasons when all the crops will be total failures. The quantity of farm staples is being increased therefore, the cost of production is being decreased, the farmer is making more money than ever, and yet conditions are being created that will have a tendency to lower prices to the consumer. While our demonstrations have been made in the South, our principles are applicable to the West, and our work, I feel sure, will be extended until it takes in the entire country. It is the practical and visible teaching, you see, of the truths contained in books and bulletins."

LONG LEASES FOR RENTERS.

"Are too many farms being worked by renters?" I asked.

"I shall answer that question by saying that tenantry is becoming an American problem. The pioneers who settled the prairies are growing old, their lands have made them rich—by their own standards—their children have gone into towns and cities, and they move into the nearest villages themselves and rent their farms to strangers. A man with a lease running from year to year will not, in the very nature of things, take very good care of the land he is cultivating. If we must have a tenant class, then we should have long leases as is the case in England and Scotland."

"Is there any co-operation among farmers in the selling of their products and in buying their supplies and machinery?"

"A great deal in selling, but scarcely any as yet in buying. Co-operation is a growing question. It is not Socialism, as the farmers look at it, but brings about a more direct and better relation between producers and consumers. There are many co-operative grain elevators and creameries in the Northwest. A co-operative cotton-gin is being successfully operated in the South. But all co-operative enterprises must be unselfishly conducted if they are to last. Corporations are run on the principles of high finance; co-operation should be run on the principles of low and just finance. Shareholders in the cotton-gin I spoke of are paid 6 per cent. interest and no more. The net earnings are distributed as dividends to the farmers who bring their cotton to the gin. Profits are apportioned not on the basis of capital invested, but on the volume of business actually done. That is genuine co-operation. When profits are paid to shareholders, the enterprise is corporative and not co-operative."

"Would the establishment of rural banks help the agricultural classes?"

"Surely, and such banks are bound to come. In the Middle West farmers can borrow money at 6 per cent. Beyond the Mississippi the rate increases the farther one goes toward the Pacific Coast. At the South, the price of money reaches its highest point. The farmers there are poor. Cotton is their only crop. They buy their corn meal, their pork, and even their hay. In January, ordinarily, a farmer will make his 'arrangement,' as it is called, with the village merchant. The bargain requires the merchant to supply the farmer, who is nearly always a tenant, with food and clothing during the year, with machinery, if any is required, and possibly with an additional mule.

MONEY BRINGS 40 PER CENT.

"A mortgage on the farmer's prospective crop and, likely as not, on his live stock, implements, and the furniture in his house, safeguards the storekeeper against loss. The profits which the merchant makes on all the things he sells in the way I have described average 40 per cent. and that, as a matter of fact, is the rate of interest on what may be called the farmer's loan. If the farmer will listen to us concerning his crops he will soon be enabled to pay cash for all that he buys. Still, rural banks would be helpful to agriculture in all parts of the country. Many a man now rushes his wheat, corn, or cotton to market because he has to get money with which to pay his debts that are due. If he could borrow at a reasonable rate of interest and wait before he sells his crop, he would be doing business on lines that are economically sound, and he, as well as the manufacturer, should be given the privilege of doing business in that fashion.

"What is your explanation about the dear cost of living to people in large towns and cities?"

"Prices are influenced, of course, by a reduction in production as compared with the increase in the number of consumers. The principal cause of dear living, however, is to be found in our barbaric methods of distribution. A commercial traveler ordered eggs for breakfast at a village tavern in Virginia the other day. 'We won't get none, captain,' the waiter said, 'until the train gets in from Baltimore.' Peaches, fine ones were spread on the land in Georgia last year and plowed under as fertilizer because the orchardist couldn't get them to market.

"Washington has 60,000 families and 3000 places at which food is sold—one store to every twenty families. Eighteen of these families, let me add, pay the bills of the twenty. Conditions are the same elsewhere. I use Washington simply as an illustration. Five hundred food stores are enough for 60,000 families. I go further and say that 100 co-operative stores would be sufficient. Americans ship eggs, poultry, fruit, and vegetables to cities and then turn around and buy the eggs and so on of the cities, paying freight both ways, not to mention the middleman's profits. I am afraid that historians of social matters a hundred years hence will assert that we were crazy."

THE QUEER DRINKS THAT WE DRINK.

BY MAJ. BEN C. TRUMAN.

"One of the most curious and also one of the most alarming things that I have learned in my profession and from articles in medical newspapers and from other agencies of observation is the practice of hundreds of thousands of persons of drinking strange stuffs," said a leading physician of Los Angeles to me a few days ago, "and the fact that vast numbers of them excoriate the moderate use of pure wines and liquors and good beer, and in many cases tea and coffee, or other stimulating beverage. For instance, ether drinking, according to the Brooklyn Medical Journal, is on the increase in New York, Chicago, Boston and some other cities, and in many cases by leading prohibitionists. To be sure none of these drinkers of ether take much at a time, as too large a dose sets a person to laughing or dancing, or to cutting up some other foolish capers."

And then the physician added that there were forty thousand persons in Brooklyn who scorned even light wines and beer, who drink ether from two to six times daily in doses from half an ounce to an ounce. It is taken in a single swallow, either diluted or pure.

The late Mr. Keeley, some twenty years ago, once said to me that there were more than a hundred prohibitionists in Chicago who indulged in ether but who condemned his cure because upon first treatments he permitted his patients a small amount of whiskey or other liquor. I remember that when I was in Ireland in 1887 I saw a couple of men in Limerick acting as if they had over-indulged in whiskey and I remarked that they had their tanks full of good old stuff, and my driver informed me that they had been taking too much ether, and he added: "Most Americans think that an Irishman only drinks whiskey, but they are mistaken, for according to the newspapers, 60,000 of our people drink ether every day of their lives; in the first place, it is cheaper than whiskey and one drink will produce more joy and good feeling than ten drinks of good Irish grog. The better kind of Irish do not drink it at all, or at least to speak of, and not many good Catholics touch it or taste it. It is drunk most frequently by the very poor and by all beggars. Now, let me tell you: The first beggar that asks you for a sixpence or a penny, you tell him you will give him a shilling if he will give you a drink of ether; and he will take from his pocket a flask of ether so quick that it will make your head swim."

Probably the most alarming drink habit in the United States at the present time is a beverage made from cocaine, and it is the most subtle and destructive drink known, making ravages particularly in America and England. A Chicago paper is my authority for the statement that a million whites and half a million blacks in the Mississippi Valley alone get drunk or partially drunk daily on a potation made from cocaine powder and water. These people drink it not for the alleviation of pain nor on account of insomnia, but because it is cheap and stimulating. It is used in this way in every State in the Union; 68,000 inhabitants of Chicago alone taking their bracers in this manner, 20,000 of whom never visit liquor saloons nor indulge in any alcoholic drink stronger than beer. The Chicago Tribune says that boys of 17 and 18 are addicted to the habit and that 10 cents worth of the "flake" will last several days. The Tribune also says that this cocaine drink is almost exclusively confined to poor people, but that the drug as prescribed by physicians is used largely by politicians, lawyers, bankers, real estate and insurance men and physicians themselves, a majority of whom also indulge in liquors and wines and beers in bar-rooms and hotels and at their clubs and homes. The newspaper, of course, denounces the cocaine habit, either by injection or otherwise, because seemingly more harmless and more agreeable, more stimulating and generally more efficacious than morphine in any of its forms of use. It also declares that it is much easier to break away from either the morphine or liquor habit and that the last two possess less weakening power than cocaine in any shape. Cocaine more rapidly destroys the moral sense, likewise, as many kleptomania cases may be traced directly to the use of this most bewitching of all narcotics. A Boston paper has also lately come out savagely against the new cocaine drink. "Better get disgustingly inebriated on Medford rum than caress with this new western drink, which is selling like wildfire all up and down the big western rivers, especially to the negroes. It is a cheap and agreeable drink, but will in the end be followed by excruciating headaches, raw nerves, and fearsome depression of spirits. It grows on one with amazing rapidity and displays for a while little warning of the harm it is doing until the evil is accomplished beyond recall." A New Orleans paper calls "the cocaine toddy" a new kind of vice and says it commenced a few years ago among the negroes and poor whites, "but is fast extending into a higher grade of society. Baltimore and Washington are becoming stirred by this new menace." London and Dublin newspapers are also warning their inhabitants against this "new United States drink, which is the greatest moral reducer yet discovered," some of them say.

Not many people who only take Jamaica ginger medicinally are aware of the fact that it is used, along with water, as a beverage all over the United States, and by thousands of men and women in Los Angeles, and means ruin to as many thousands of stomachs. "The tincture of ginger, or Jamaica ginger, as it is popularly known," said Dr. Haynes to me a few days ago, "is the strongest and most irritating alcoholic solution known, and stands about equal to commercial alcohol, which is never used as a beverage. The most alarming phase of its use is its prevalence among women and especially among women who reside outside of our cities." Another physician said to me: "There is no need of Sunday bar-rooms when you can get all the Jamaica ginger you want at a few cents an ounce and which contains 89 per cent. more alcohol than beer. And let me tell you another thing—it is worse than the whisky habit—it is hopeless from the start."

Perhaps chloral in its early day was one of the most fascinating drinks ever known. It was of German manufacture and came to the United States in 1867, and was largely used in San Francisco by clubmen and all big eaters and big drinkers for eight or ten years, and has never wholly gone out of use, at least as a medicine—a narcotic and hypnotic combined. I was acquainted with many of the army and navy officers and clubmen in San Francisco in 1867-69, and nearly all of them indulged in chloral. It came into the pharmacopedial field a born conqueror. A very little of the drug in a goblet of water was a triumph over pain from gout to rheumatism, insomnia from excess of eating or drinking, and in other ways a very fairy of refreshment. It was not considered dangerous taken properly and moderately, but as it could be procured at any drug store without a prescription, it began to be used in large quantities for all ailments, imaginary or otherwise, and was soon looked upon as dangerous; and in ten or twelve years of constant use it had managed to kill off a score or two of California von vivants, and at least a thousand or more throughout the country. So far as I have been able to arrive at facts concerning the drug, no person with a good, strong heart or who did not use it to excess was ever killed by it. One delightful thing about chloral was that it left no unpleasant effects of stomach or head "the next morning." But in twenty years after its first appearance reports of its sinister dangers spread rapidly and alarmingly throughout the United States and in many commonwealths laws were passed making its purchase impossible without a physician's prescription; and I think that at present no druggist in our country can sell it only in this way.

But there is another new tipple that is widely spreading, especially among people who are opposed to liquor drinking, or who are residents of prohibition towns, and that is witch-hazel, which seems to impart an alcoholic pleasure and also soothes the stomach. Those who use this new tipple combine one part of the witch-hazel as purchased at drug stores and pour two to three parts cold or hot water; there are also thousands in Los Angeles county who take the witch-hazel "straight." The manager of one of the biggest drug concerns in Los Angeles informed me that his stores sold gallons at present where they only sold pints two years ago. Another manager of a drug store not far from the Pacific Electric building said to me that it was a poor Saturday afternoon when he did not dispose of at least sixty pints, presumably, he added, to persons going to Long Beach or Pasadena, or to some other locality where what are known as intoxicating drinks cannot be procured.

A DAIRY INVESTMENT

Heber Is Big Dairy Section

Represents Income to Farmers of Some $273,600 Per Annum; Creamery in Great Demand.

Heber is the big dairy section of Imperial Valley, and that it hasn't the biggest, finest creamery and cheese factory in the southwestern part of the State, is something that cannot be reasonably explained away.

The Swiss people, who are famous for their knowledge of the dairy business, have selected Heber as the ideal place for the industry. Here will be found twelve up-to-date dairies conducted by these people who are milking, approximately, 900 cows.

In addition to the Swiss colony some 1000 cows are being milked.

The return from these 1900 dairy cows, counting increase, butter fat, milk fed to hogs, etc., will conservatively gross the farmer $12 per month each, or $144 per year. On 1900 dairy cows, the Heber section is realizing on this basis the neat sum of $273,600 per annum.—[Imperial County Enterprise.

Every dollar of your money is invested in the business—there is no watered stock in this company.

We have 320 acres alfalfa land 5 miles east of Heber, Cal., fenced, in six fields ready to turn the cows on the alfalfa and start the business at once.

Mrs. S. F. Wiles, the first woman to raise cotton in California, and Mrs. Marie W. Bradley, a local business woman of Los Angeles, are those at the head of this enterprise. They will erect a modern up-to-date sanitary dairy and purchase 300 cows. The lowest estimate places earnings at $90 per year from each cow. Stock in the company is rapidly being bought. Indorsed by men and women in excellent business standing of Los Angeles.

ENQUIRIES FROM AND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Many Samples.

JUNCTION (Ariz.) Feb. 11.—Q.: Seeking information and your advice again. Don't get wrathy! We bank on your statements. I send you eight samples of ore, six of them are from location holes. Nos. 8 and 6 are from deeper holes. We are anxious to learn if any of samples carries minerals or show a formation which promises anything with depth. The matter in No. 6 when first coming to surface was much blacker than now; we thought that it carried zinc and lead. No. 8 is the ledge beside which the matter marked No. 6 follows No. 7, down eight feet, has a gouge; is about two feet wide up to the sulphuret piece which you find in the package which we first took for footwall, but now that sulphurets appear, they may be the valuable side. Grant us information. No use to thank you in advance, but believe me we feel thus disposed. G. O. F.

A.: glad indeed to hear from you. Your kind words are appreciated. No. 1, two samples of ferruginous quartz (cavernous quartz in part,) manganese with iron oxides, and zinc a trace. The third specimen is pistachio-green epidote with barely a trace of vanadic acid. No. 2, three samples greasy quartz; zinc trace; iron-alumina garnet present with iron oxides. No. 3, two samples ferruginous quartz; antimonial lead, lead carbonate and lead oxide present. No. 4, two samples (altered rock) iron-epidote and manganese (dendritic.) The sulphuret specimen in this lot is arsenical-iron, manganese in the mass. No. 5, three samples with a number of thumb specimens; all of this is talcose-iron with the exception that one of the number is epidote with copper a trace. No. 6, chiefly hornblende with epidote; one specimen amphibole (tremolite;) lime trace, iron oxides and manganese present. No. 7, "the sulphuret or white-iron piece comes from footwall. Is it ledge or wall? Does it carry values?" (the quoted matter is from tag with samples.) This sulphuret carries cerussite (lead carbonate,) and galenite (lead sulphide,) with antimony trace; it is probably ledge-matter, and carries "pay-values." There are two samples of vein matter with No. 7, and the small sample carries copper, trace, with galenite, antimony, and zinc a trace. No. 8 is ferruginous quartz carrying manganese. No. 7 looks "good." No sample tested for gold or silver.

Hydrous Silicate.

PASADENA, Feb. 11.—Q.: We send you under separate cover a sample of rock from the Funeral Range, Lee mining district, Cal. Will you kindly give up the name of this mineral and state commercial value? B. & M.

A.: As a matter of fact, the sample does not represent a true mineral of mineralogy. It is a mixture of porcelain spar (aluminous,) with impure meerschaum. Zinc a trace.

Epidote and Chromite.

SANTA BARBARA, Feb. 12.—Q.: I found the two samples of rock in this container while walking over the hills near Santa Barbara. I have never submitted anything to mineralogists or chemists until now, but I must confess that I am greatly interested in your column of "Rare Minerals," etc. I subscribe myself. "TENDERFOOT."

A.: Glad to have you in our "quiz." Sample No. 1 is a beautiful and acicular variety of epidote, and No. 2 is chromite (chrome-iron ore) with a clay-likhe product of yellowish-green chrome-ochre attached to one side of the sample.

Manganese.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 12.—Q.: The black sample of sooty mineral comes from a point in Arizona, and I desire to know if it is black-oxide of copper? P. T.

A.: The samples does not carry a trace of copper, and it is named at the sub-heading.

Wolframite and Dumortierite.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 12.—Q.: I am leaving at The Times Building five samples of ore. All of them were taken by me on a prospecting trip around Fair Oaks and within forty-two miles of Indian Springs, Nev. Is No. 1 Wolframite? I think so. No. 2, is this kaolin, and does it carry potash? No. 3 I took to be copper, but field test shows no copper; this is a new one to me. Is No. 4 an iron ore with native copper in it? No. 5 I think is a kind of meerschaum? G. W. L.

A.: No. 1 is wolframite, and carries over 55 per cent. tungstic acid of commerce. No. 2 is kaolin, impure with limonitic iron oxide, and carries no potash. No. 3 is smalt-blue Dumortierite and it is silicate of aluminum. No. 4 is hematite, but the "native copper" coloring matter is iron oxide only, with not a trace of copper in the mass. No. 5 is a fine-grained tremolite, (silicate and magnesia and lime.)

Impure Dolomite.

CORONA, Jan. 25.—Q.: One sample of ore from near Maricopa, Ariz. Would like to know its value, and what it is. D. A. B.

A.: One might judge by the heft of the sample that it is an ore of tungsten, but there is not a trace of tungsten in the mass. The sample is dolomite (mountain limestone) with strontium present. The value of "stuff" represented by sample is problematical.

Quartz.

SPRINGVILLE, Feb. 8.—Q.: Local samples for classification. C. S. B.

A.: No. 1 greasy quartz. No. 2 milky quartz. No. 3 quartz with mica resembling gold-flakes. No. 4 ferruginous and micaceous quartz.

Unit and Patronite.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—Q.: Noting your aids to students in the mineral column, I will be very much obliged if you will describe what is meant by the term "unit," and give me a point on patronite i. e., what is patronite? E. B. M.

A.: Our friend, Dr. Frank L. Hess of the United States Geological Survey, describes a unit as follows: A unit is 1 per cent. of a ton in tungsten trioxide (WO 3;) ex. gr. An ore carrying 60 per cent. tungsten trioxide would be an ore carrying 60 units, or say, 1000 pounds of ore carrying 60 per cent. tungsten trioxide would be equivalent to one ton containing 30 per cent. tungsten trioxide, and if the price were $9 per unit it would be worth 30 times $9 or $270.

Patronite is well described as follows: "An amorphous black material of complex mineral composition containing large amounts of a vanadium sulphide perhaps VS4. Analysis of material extracted by alkalies from ore gave V. 19.16; 18.89; 19.09. S. 47.44; 45.65; 44.74. The material occurs in a complex mixture of mineral substances among which Quisquite and Bravoite are found."

Some Minerals.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—Q.: Inclosed samples are from claims located about forty-five miles southeast of Victorville, in San Bernardino county. Samples marked No. 1 are from a large dyke, please classify. No. 2 is from a dyke several feet from above. No. 3 is sample from shaft about thirty-five feet from surface. What is the silver-gray metal? Is the green material in the sample Pyroxene? No. 4 are samples from tunnel at point about seventy-three feet from the surface. Is the iron present hematite? Please classify the rock? No. 5 is from a shaft about fifty-five feet deep. Please tell me what the shiny-black substance is. Would the samples submitted indicate tellurium with depth? Any further information will be appreciated. E. J. S.

A.: No sample submitted would indicate tellurium with depth. You should have submitted wall-rock from, and on each side of ledge matter. The rocks from the two separate dikes "cut no figure," as it were.

Sample No. 1 consists of two specimens. The large sample is a feldspathic (and silicious) rock, carbonates absent; iron oxides, manganese dioxide, titaniferous, and epidotic matter present. The smaller sample is also a silicate with epidote in part; dumortierite (smalt-blue silicate of aluminum) is "mixed" with the rock; manganese and iron oxides present. No. 2 we would classify as feldspathic in part; epidote and dumortierite present, and on one side of the specimen dendritic manganese (forest-rock of the mining bays) appears in fern-like markings. In the mass we find iron oxides, titanic iron ore, traces of antimony, bare trace of lead, trace of zinc, almandine garnet, and dumortierite. No. 3 carries no "metal," as such; it is a mixed silicate of lime, magnesia, and aluminum, and we tested this with extraordinary care, qualitatively. This sample represents mineral on which we had much work when back East, where we were called upon to "run it carefully for platinum and tellurium." There is neither platinum nor tellurium in any sample you submit. There is present, however, bromine a trace; chlorine trace; bismuth; antimony; lead; zinc; iron oxides; manganese; copper a faint trace. Pyroxene absent. The silver-gray metal you refer to is a mixture of antimonial and bismuthic sulphides and "ochres," and the greenish matter is bismuthic, with probably silver present. No. 4 (two samples) is the "ancient, fake-platinum ore of San Bernardino county, California," and in the mass appears various iron oxides, such as limonite, micaceous iron-ore (hematite;) manganese dioxide, "forest-rock," lead a trace; trace of bismuth; of antimony and zinc traces. Almandine, quartz, geode matter (chalcedony,) titanic iron, and aluminum silicate. The rock is in part porphyritic. The "shiny-black" matter in No. 5 is pseudomorph after pyrite, with zinc trace. There is "garnetiferous zinc" present which is also "shiny." This rock, like many of your other samples, is of but little commercial value. Samples 3, 4 and possibly No. 5 are governed by the silver and gold present by fire-assay.

Fine Mineral Paint.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—Q.: Two samples from a friend in Idaho. No. 1, three miles from railroad. What is it? No. 2, five miles from No. 1. Does it indicate values? M. W. C.

A.: No. 1 is that commercial grade of hematite known as "mineral paint." No. 2 is a mixture of "greasy quartz" carrying limonitic iron oxide (in part sienna) in crevices and seams. The sample carries traces of lead and copper.

Eagle Stone.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—Q.: Please find with this what I consider a very remarkable ore of some kind. I was prospecting in the mountains twelve miles from Azusa, in the San Gabriel mining district, and found about twenty of these, I do not know what. I took them for solid iron pebbles, but I broke one of them and am now anxious to know what the ore is. J. B.

A.: When broken the pebbles look like chocolate-drops with a nice, creamy filling. The sample is Eagle stone, a mineral with brownish (smooth) iron oxide shell, as it were, with a cream-yellow, ochreous filling in the "innards."

Handsome Crystals.

VICKSBURG (Ariz.) Feb. 14.—Q.: I am sending, this mail, still another ore sample from this locality that we want your valued assistance in determining what are the red crystals. F. L. R.

A.: Glad to hear from you. The sample is a fine showing of wulfenite, and carrying vanadic acid. There are some remarkable minerals on this order in the Far West. We recall quite a difficult variety of tests on mineral resembling the sample and from the locality of Crescent, Nev., and the Crescent variety proved to be negative in reaction for vanadic acid. Cerussite appears in the samply you submit, with blackish lepidomelane (uniaxial mica,) manganese and iron. The reddish crystals, to which you refer, are those of wulfenite, chiefly. Some of the smaller ones are lead vanadate, and crystals of red-realgar are present in the mass.

Pebbles.

SAWTELLE, Feb. 14.—Q.: Would like to know if any good gems are with the samples? T. F.

A.: You submit eleven samples. The two greenish specimens are ordinary green bottle glass. One is grayish agate, one chalcedony, two pieces of altered granite carrying red and green iron salts, with mica of no value. The blackish pieces are impure lepidomelane (uniaxial black mica,) with yellow mica scales in the mass. Pieces of feldspathic rock carrying mica resembling gold flakes. Two samples conglomerate with yellow mica flakes, and two samples of sandstone carrying the same yellow mica as the other named samples.

Phosphoric Acid Trace.

PASO ROBLES, Feb. 14.—Q.: I am sending you under separate cover some lime formation. There is a hill on our ranch that seems to have a large deposit of this. The sample I am sending was knocked off a large rock exposed above ground. Would like to know its commercial value—if any, and if it would pay to market same? J. L. T.

A.: "Pay to market same" is a question indeed, locally or otherwise. The samples are mixtures of Fuller's earth, gypsite, and are (chiefly) lime carbonate (marl.) Phosphoric acid values are low. Probably if some of the material were slightly calcined and 2 per cent. sulphuric acid added properly to the mass, you would obtain a "fertilizer filler" superior to infusorial earth.

Altered Rock.

JEROME (Ariz.) Feb. 14.—Q.: Will you kindly tell me what the rock is, and if it carries any values? C. L. E.

A.: The sample is altered (low grade) hematite and magnetite, and is now made up of reddle (ruddle or iron chalk,) with aluminum silicate, iron carbonate and chlorite present in the mass. Copper, a trace.

Doubtful Ore.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—Q.: I herewith enclose sample of ore taken from mountain near Newhall. Please state through your valuable paper what white metal is sticking out of rock, and if rock contains any valuable minerals? J. E. O.

A.: The rock is mica schist. Iron oxides present with antimony traces. There is no white metal in the sample, and you probably refer to the mixed sulphides (occurring sparingly) of iron, copper, and arsenic.

Aragonite.

BROWN, Kern co., Feb. 14.—Q.: Via parcel post am sending a white rock. Will you please tell through The Times, what it is, also if of any commercial value? G. H.

A.: The sample resembles an acicular (needle)shape) gypsum, but it is made up of the two varieties of lime carbonate (aragonite and calcite.) As a base for carbonic acid manufacture the sample represents material of probable value.

duced $100,000 under the crude methods then in vogue. Of late years it has been neglected, largely because of financial inability of owners to work it on a progressive scale. It is expected to strike at depth the vein system which has enabled the Shawmut, Jumper and other properties to yield splendid profits.

The mines of the Horse Shoe Bend Mining Company have been sold by the Sheriff to satisfy judgments against the owners. The property was bid in by George Morrice, judgment creditor, for $15,000. It is understood steps are taken to resume operations. The Gold Crater has also been acquired at a Sheriff's sale for $4236 by George Mundorf. Local people plan to begin developments at an early date.

FUME CONTROL.

The furnace at the Heslewood plant, Heroult, has been thoroughly overhauled and another series of tests will be undertaken within a few days. Efforts have been made to secure a thoroughly air-tight furnace, as it is essential that leaky walls be eliminated. A shipment of highly sulphurous copper ore from the Hornet mine of the Mountain Copper Company will be used in the tests.

The inventor claims the method is a demonstrated success, and a large number of interested mining men have arranged to be present when the next run is made. A completely satisfactory demonstration of the merit of the process will undoubtedly result in its employment by the Mountain Copper Company, First National and other powerful copper corporations.

The Tropico Mining and Milling Company is stated to have arranged for the vigorous development of its claim near Rosamond, in the Antelope Valley. Three parallel ledges, ranging from two to seven feet in width, have been developed, and the main shaft is down 540 feet. Considerable ore is exposed and it is understood the management plans the early installation of a ten-stamp mill and fifty-ton cyanide plant. Twenty-five miners will be put to work in the near future. The veins carry both gold and silver, the gold values running around $25 per ton.

TO BUILD CONCRETE SHAFTS.

Inspiration Company Will Use Permanent Construction Material in Two Important Workings.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

GLOBE (Ariz.) Feb. 28.—Owing to the tremendous importance of the two main working shafts of the Inspiration Company at Miami, the management has determined upon lining them with concrete. It is expected that these shafts may be called upon to handle 10,000 tons of ore within twenty-four hours and that they shall be fireproof and of the most permanent construction is appreciated.

Seventy tons a day of 6 per cent. copper ore are shipped from the Warrior property to the El Paso smelter, shipments to the Old Dominion smelter in Globe having been discontinued. The mine is now under lease to Snell & Fisk. From the Geneva mine, under lease to Hubbell & Wilson, a carload of 6 per cent. ore a day is going to the Old Dominion works.

The Salt River Valle

Offers Inducement to Settlers

Maricopa County, Arizona, is attracting thousands of settlers. Lands are cheap, very productive and there is an abundance of cheap water for irrigation purposes. Fruits, vegetables and berries grow to perfection. While the local rainfall is only from six to seven inches, there is an abundance of "stored water" for irrigation purposes. The benefit of this absence of rain will be instantly apparent.

The fruit grower's strawberries need water say once each week; his orange grove once a month; his alfalfa may want it oftener. The headgate in the irrigating ditch is the key to the whole situation, and the horticulturist waters one plot and withholds water from another, and at the same time has ripe peaches and raisins in the trays drying in the sun.

The principal varieties of fruits grown in the Salt River Valley, in Maricopa County, are: Oranges, grapefruit, lemons, olives, pea pears, apricots, grapes, plums, figs, berries, prunes, blackb loganberries and rasp

In addition there are raised dates, crabapples, gerines, pomegranates.

The killing of the blossoms by late frosts most unknown here. Valley of the Nile co no richer soil. In some in the Salt River Valley top soil is one hundred deep, all of uniform lence. These soils are to work, mellow and bake after irrigation.

The new State of Ar is developing very and there are good for crops. Railroad are excellent. County prides herself schools, which are equ any in the country. literature on this rich, country sent free upo quest. Address Verno Clark, Commissioner of migration, Dept. GRAND PRIZE INTERNATIONAL ROAD RACE FROM NEW YORK TO SAN FRANCISCO FOR OPENING OF WORLD'S FAIR IN NINETEEN FIFTEEN.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

Motor manufacturers of the United States are planning a road race from New York to San Francisco for the opening of the World's Fair in 1915. The proposed course is by the way of the Old Santa Fe Trail, through the larger cities and over the Banning route to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Four thousand miles of road, with a speedway stretching across the continent, is to offer the fans the most spectacular course ever chosen for a great road race. None of the details of this contest have been worked out, but the biggest men in the automobile industry have placed their indorsement on the project.

The first step in the enterprise will be the Los Angeles-San Francisco road race on July 4 of this year. The second step will be the San Francisco-Los Angeles road race in 1914, and the climax will be the New York-San Francisco road race at the opening of the World's Fair in 1915.

When The Times Special was driven across the continent mapping the route for the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway, men of prominence determined that a great contest, a road race, that will call the attention of the entire world to the developments in automobile manufacturing shall be held in 1915. After due deliberation and much thought these men are ready to back the project and the race is to be held.

Course for the Proposed Transcontinental Road Race from New York to San Francisco Over the Old Santa Fe Trail Through Los Angeles.

This is the 4000-mile Ocean-to-Ocean Highway which is to be the speedway for the fastest and greatest road race ever held in the history of the motor car if some of the leading manufacturers and dealers have their way. Also the men who are to make this race famous.

Call Is Strong.

WORLD'S BEST PILOTS START.

Oldfield, Tetzlaff, Bragg, De Palma, Burman Sure.

Fat Purse Would Lure Scores of the Lesser Lights.

Spectacular Course from Atlantic to Pacific.

An automobile race across the continent would call the world's best motor pilots into the lists. The prize would be a fortune. The honor of winning the contest would be the greatest ever attained by any motor car driver. All the differences that ever existed with any racing association would be swallowed up in the larger race and the association that conducted such a contest, or issued a sanction for such a race would be supreme.

Barney Oldfield would drive. His choice would probably be a Fiat. His victory at Imperial Valley would probably settle that question, though the speed king could choose from among the world's best racing cars. This would probably be Barney's last race. He is willing to retire if given the right kind of an opportunity and a race across the continent would be just the right kind of a finish for the great driver.

Teddy Tetzlaff, granted the honors as the world's best road race driver for the season of 1912, would enter. He, of course, would be on a Fiat, the car with which he won most of his laurels. Teddy would start as one of the favorites. His defeat at Imperial would not mar his chances in a big road race, if started tomorrow. Tetzlaff would be one of the drivers who would undoubtedly be in the Show Up Well.

M'CREDIE'S NEW BEAVERS CHANGING THEIR COATS.

Outfielders Prove They Are Infielders, While Right-Handed Pitchers Show that They Are Southpaws. Only Light Practice on Saturday—Big Mac Is After Krause.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

THIS is the first of a series of articles to be written by Harry Williams, The Times special representative, who will visit all the training camps of the Coast League ball teams and also the camp of the Chicago White Sox at Paso Robles. He will furnish every day the correct dope on the way the various players size up.

VISALIA, March. 1.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] I reached Visalia today just in time to grab our old enemy, the Portland Beavers, in their first work-out of the season and to discover the fact that Walter McCredie in his mad scramble for talent had made a managerial faux pas or two.

Earl Marriott, for instance, was signed up as an outfielder. Imagine the surprise when Marriott walked into camp today and announced himself a third baseman. He hails from Eureka and was recommended by Pat Kelly, who secured Fitzgerald and Cunningham for the Beavers.

McCredie drafted Pitcher Hynes from the London club of the Canadian League in the belief that he was a right hander. Hynes denies the charge. He is a southpaw. McCredie secured Fortier from Salt Lake to bolster his outfield. It now develops that Fortier is half outfielder and half catcher. He backstopped in forty games last season.

These things are not worrying Mac. He doesn't care a tinker's cuss word about the mistakes, if the new men only turn out to be real ball players.

AFTER KRAUSE.

McCredie has not yet reached the scene of action. He is in San Francisco thrashing out the salary problem with Harry Krause, who was secured from Toledo in exchange for Dave Gregg. McCredie, it is said, will not let the difference of a few dollars stand in the way of landing this prize southpaw. Krause led the American Association last season with thirteen wins and four defeats.

Trainer "Doc" Schmeider arrived yesterday and found that none of the men are in need of physical repairs. It will be necessary, however, to amputate about fifteen pounds of surplus avoirdupois from Art Krueger.

The Beavers have been laggards in reporting and the full force will not be here before next Saturday. Krueger, Fisher, Doane, Korea, Hagerman, Higginbotham, Loan, Berry, Krapp and Marriott are now on the ground. James, West, Cunningham and Carson are expected today.

EASY PRACTICE.

The Beavers were at the park at 10 a.m., today, but stayed only long enough to get up the suspicion of a sweat. In the afternoon they contented themselves with an hour's batting practice. There was a clash in authority between Krueger and Higginbotham, both of whom insisted on running things. Krueger ordered Higginbotham to run around the park seven times and Higginbotham ordered Krueger shot at sunrise.

Catcher Bill Loan, secured from the Phillies in the Dan Howley trade, is the baby of the team. When the fans see him they will charge McCredie with robbing the cradle. He is only 18 and looks even younger.

HAGERMAN COSTLY.

"Rip" Hagerman from the Lincoln club, looks like the goods. He is six feet, two, and has a world of smoke.

Hagerman is known as the "$2500 beauty." That is a tidy sum to pay for a pitcher and should he by any chance prove to be a "lemon," McCredie would jump off the end of the long wharf.

"No danger of that," said Kores, who played in the Western League with Hagerman.

"Just get two runs for that baby—that's all he needs in any old game."

Visalia is some baseball wild and the town has just about been turned over to the Portland players and visiting scribes.

"War correspondents" on the scene besides myself, are Lou Kennedy and Bob Cronin of Portland.

They are thinking about sending out a tracer for Outfielder Chadbourne. One report has him in Maine and another in Los Angeles.

The Beavers will play their first game today, going up against the strong local club, which contains several Southern California boys.

The line-up:

HOLLYWOOD SURPRISES.

Manual Arts Defeated by Close Score on Slow Track—Smead Individual Star.

In a highly exciting meet on the Manual Arts field yesterday Hollywood High School sprung a big surprise by defeating Manual in a meet in which the result depended upon the relay. Capt. Smead of Manual was the individual star of the meet, winning eighteen points, taking first in both hurdles, the discus and second place in the broad jump. The score was 63 to 55.

Teitsworth, the Manual distance man, fell down badly in the mile, finishing a poor third, but came through in the 880 in 2m. 11s. The track was very slow and as a result the time made was rather poor.

Results:

The 100-yard dash—Candee (H) first; Ironmonger (H) second; Penn (M) third. Time, 11s.

The 880-yard run—Teitsworth (M) first; Henry (H) second; Merritt (H) third. Time, 2m. 13s.

Mile run—Bills (M) and Foster (H) tied for first; Teitsworth (M) third. Time, 5m. 15s.

The 440-yard dash—Forbes (H) first; Wood (M) second; Mills (H) third. Time, 56 4-5s.

The 220-yard hurdles—Smead (M) first; Coultas (H) second; Candee (H) third. Time, 28s.

Shot put—Richardson (H) first; Wood (M) second; Webster (M) third. Distance, 44ft. 8in.

The 220-yard dash—Ironmonger (H) first; Renn (M) second; Little (M) third. Time, 24 4-5s.

The 120 hurdles—Smead (M) first; Forbes (H) second; Henry (H) third. Time, 18s.

Pole vault—Trampton, Stewart, Thayer, all of Manual, tied at 10 feet.

Broad jump—Goodwin (H) first; Smead (M) second; Stewart (M) third. Distance, 20ft. 10in.

High jump—Stewart (M) and Gates (H) tied for first; McVicar (M) and Creighton (M) tied for third. Height, 5ft. 6in.

Discus throw—Smead (M) first; Richardson (H) second; Earl (H) third. Distance, 103ft. 2in.

Relay—Hollywood first, Coultas, Candee, Ferber, Henry. No time taken.

SANTA PAULA WINS MEET.

Good Competition Marks Third Annual San Fernando Invitation Meet. Hall Is Star of Contest.

The Santa Paula High School track team won the third annual San Fernando invitation track meet yesterday by the score of 36 points. Monrovia was second with 30, Huntington Beach was third with 12, Glendale was fourth with 11½; Hemet, fifth, 9½; Harvard Military, sixth, 9; San Fernando, 9; Burbank, 6; Thatcher School, 5; Citrus Union, 3; Huntington Park, 3, and South Pasadena, 1.

Hall of Santa Paula was the star of the meet, scoring four first places for his school. His events were the discus, broad jump, pole vault and shot put.

Bynum of Monrovia after winning the mile run in rather easy fashion, came back strong in the half-mile and could have won the event, but in order to help his team mate dropped back, allowing him to win. It was a game exhibition.

Graham of Huntington Beach was coming up strong from the rear at the time. This race was the thrill of the afternoon. The competition in all the events was good and the final outcome of the meet was in doubt until the broad jump and relay were finished. Santa Paula placed two men in the jump and finished third in the relay, which was enough to win.

FRANKLIN CARS ARE SHIFTED.

NOW HOUSED IN SPECIALLY DESIGNED STORE.

Former Los Angeles Auto Dealer Here for Opening Says Little Chance of Any Racing in San Francisco—Dealers Can't Get Together as in Southland.

Ralph Hamlin and his Franklin cars are now established in their new home at No. 1040 South Flower street. The new building is designed along plans proposed by Hamlin and is perfectly lighted and ventilated.

John McLean of San Francisco, formerly agent of the Winton in Los Angeles, came down for the opening. He has just opened a new place of his own in San Francisco and says that business there is booming.

"It seems that we will have little doing in the racing line up there, though," he said. "The dealers there never seem to get together on racing propositions as they do in the South."

Calistoga Man Drives Automobile From Boston Four Thousand Six Hundred Miles.

C. W. Armstrong of Calistoga recently passed through Los Angeles on the last lap of an automobile ride from Boston. He bought a Rambler machine in the eastern city and drove it down the Atlantic coast to Georgia, and then across Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona. When he reached Los Angeles from San Diego his speedometer showed that he had traveled 4603 miles from Boston, which he had left on November 6. He stopped for a few minutes to talk over with W. K. Cowan, local agent for the Rambler, the good points of that car, and then hurried on to his destination, as his machine needed no repairs after its long grind. He was accompanied by his wife.

Lubrication

All things being equal, the life of an engine depends upon the way it is lubricated. Pouring oil in a reservoir and depending upon the splash and seepage to supply all moving parts with the proper amount of oil, may be all right—BUT has a system that is recognized by experts the world over as perfection in lubrication.

Oil is forced through hollow crank and cam shafts to the interior of every bearing and moving part in the motor.

MANY REO ORDERS KEEP LOCAL AGENTS HUSTLING.

FOR the time being the Lord Motor Car Company has caught up with its orders. The concern now has Reo touring cars and roadsters on hand for immediate delivery for the first time during the 1913 season.

According to Harry A. Lord the demand for Reo cars has doubled since the cars were equipped with the Gray & Davis starting and lighting system. He also classes three other features as of prime importance in making sales records. These are: The extra large tires, the quality of steel used and the high-priced magneto.

"By increasing our tire cost over 20 per cent. in making 34x4-inch standard tires a part of the regular equipment in our 1913 product standard tire-makers say that the tire mileage of each Reo will be increased on an average of 65 per cent.," he says. "This not alone means a great saving in upkeep, but it insures safety to those who ride in the car. Every vital part is built for a forty-five-horse-power engine, although the Reo the Fifth is rated at thirty to thirty-five horse power. We thus get all the usual margains of safety plus about 50 per cent.

"To obtain the greatest efficiency we have adopted a magneto which easily stands the rigid laboratory tests which we require. What is true of our tires, demountable rims and magneto is likewise true of such vital parts as the steering gear, brakes, springs, axles, roller bearings, the 180 drop forgings, the doubly-heated carburetor, springs and luxuriant 17-coated body.

"Each lot of steel is analyzed twice—before and after forging. Chrome nickel steel is used for all Reo rear axles and drive shaft, vanadium for connections, manganese steel for the crank shaft, and for the front axles the very same steel that the highest priced cars use for crank shafts."

GOES EAST TO GET MORE CARS.

George Bentel of the Bentel Mackey Company is now visiting the Mercer and Simplex factories endeavoring to obtain more new Mercer models and additional enclosed Simplex cars. Twelve of the latter have been sold by the local agency in the past two months in addition to a number of Simplex limousines and laundalets. Shipments of 1914 Mercer and 1914 Simplex cars were received last week. On Bentel's return Charles Mackey will meet him in San Francisco and they will cover the territory controlled by their agency on the Pacific Coast.

Final warnings have been sent to motorists of New Jersey that 1912 license tags are no longer good. The license year in New Jersey runs from January 1 to December 31, but the State allows the motorists thirty-one days of grace, in which to procure licenses. The actual year thus coincides with the New York year, which runs from February 1 to January 31, "without any grace."

ICE AND SNOW IN SOUTHLAND.

Earle Anthony in Packard Hits Sharp Blizzard.

Tour of Southland Brings Surprise to Easterner.

Packard Home Ornate and Complete in Every Way.

Arthur Corbin, assistant sales manager of the Packard Motor Car Company, was treated to a sample of Southern California climate such as few men experience. He arrived in Los Angeles Tuesday afternoon and the same evening he and Mrs. Corbin, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Earle C. Anthony, left in a Packard touring car for Riverside and San Diego. The head of the California Motor Company intended showing the eastern visitor the beauties of the Southland.

The run to Riverside was a beautiful moonlight drive and Wednesday morning the Packard was sent off for a run to San Diego by way of the valley route. The air was crisp when they started through the orange groves and over the Box Springs grade. Beyond Perris the car shot into the hills and Earle Anthony says he could hardly believe his eyes when snow began to fall. As the party penetrated the heart of the hills the snow became heavier and soon covered the ground at least two inches deep.

The ice caked on the glass front and when the car was sent into Elsinore there was ice an inch thick on the front.

Thus the eastern visitor had the unusual experience of picking flowers in a beautiful California garden fifteen minutes after passing through a hard snow storm.

Corbin came to Los Angeles to attend the formal opening of the new Packard building that was held a week ago. The ornate plant was crowded with visitors until late into the night and the new Packard cars were admired by thousands.

ORNATE HOME.

The assistant sales manager was delighted with the affair and says the building is the handsomest structure of the kind he has ever seen. He is certain that this is to be the greatest year in the history of the industry, both as to sales and in regard to the upkeep methods employed by the high-grade car agents.

"This question of the upkeep of the Packard car has been answered nicely in the new Packard home," said Corbin. "We have here all that the heart of the most exacting motorist could desire. The owner of a Packard can find everything he needs in this building, and the expenditure of a fortune in perfecting this structure means a big boost for the industry. There is nothing to be desired in this building that Mr. Anthony has not provided. It is a pleasure to own a car and be able to use the conveniences provided in the new Packard home."

CALIFORNIA AUTOS AMAZE EASTERNER.

E. H. Parkhurst, vice-president of the Peerless Motor Car Company, who is on a pleasure trip through California with his wife, expresses great astonishment at the development of automobiling in this State.

"It takes but a glance at your business streets to see the wonderful progress that has been made. The horse is in a woeful minority in Los Angeles," he said.

COMMERCIAL PROBLEM EASY.

Moreland Truck Used to Solve Knotty Question.

Merchants of City Pleased With Demonstration.

Detachable Body Simplifies Freight Question.

Another commercial car problem has been solved by Watt Moreland, designer of the Moreland truck. A high-powered, five-ton Moreland has been used and the demonstration was so successful that the big commercial car was put into service at once by the Haas-Baruch Company. The truck was equipped with a detachable body and was loaded and unloaded in record time.

Instead of an hour and a half only twenty minutes' time was necessary to remove and then attach the body. The truck chassis was used to haul other bodies which had been loaded in the warehouse. The saving of time and money is said to be remarkable and already the attention of the merchants of this city has been attracted to the novel methods employed by the local factory.

R. J. Harrington of the Haas-Baruch Company, who was present when the demonstration was made, is confident that the methods now employed for moving freight are to be revolutionized by the new process perfected by Moreland. In a statement yesterday Harrington indorsed the removable body plan and said he is sure it will save both time and money.

"You can say for me," said Harrington, "that I am satisfied with the test made and believe it will mean much to the freight industry. We had a Moreland truck that was used in the demonstration and it proved highly satisfactory. The body was removed and loaded and then was rolled back to the chassis. We saved just an hour and a half and while the body was being loaded it was possible to use the chassis for other work."

[illegible] FULL-HANDED.

It is the purpose of Moreland to build a number of these trucks with the detachable body equipment. He says it means the saving of time and money. He was so pleased with the demonstration made that he has already designed a number of other machines which are to be turned out at once. The Moreland factory is running to its full capacity and Moreland is increasing his force every week. He says he finds it hard to keep up with the demand for the trucks.

The branch of the Moreland truck factory at San Diego is in charge of E. H. White, formerly with the Auto Vehicle Company, in this city. According to White, the market in San Diego is particularly brisk and he expects to place a number of the Moreland commercial cars in the southern city this year.

MOTOR TRUCK CLUB HAS INTERESTING MEETING.

The Motor Truck Club has joined the movement of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce to secure adoption of a policy by the Harbor Commissioners which will provide room for motor trucks and other vehicles on all docks and wharves at the harbor. At the February meeting of the club a committee was appointed to prepare a protest to this effect for presentation to the Harbor Commission.

The Legislative Committee of the club, of which Watt Moreland is chairman, is watching the preparation of the ordinance for a commercial vehicle tax closely, and has been assured that the interests of motor truck owners will not be unduly taxed if the ordinance is passed by the Council. A vote by postal card, taken by the club among motor truck owners representing an aggregate of $2,000,000 invested locally in trucks, showed a general desire to have the money collected by such a tax used for street improvement and repairs instead of going into the general revenue fund of the city.

The February meeting was given over to a general discussion of tire problems after the dinner, and both operators and tire dealers presented different phases of getting the best usage out of tires, which form the heaviest expense in truck operation. W. B. Guyton, who made the principal talk for the dealers, called attention to the fact that the average overload was not the main danger, but that one excessive load alone would do the damage to the tires. He asserted that the tire should have as much consideration as the axle in considering an overload.

LeRoy Jones presented a device for getting trucks out of mudholes which his company has found practically perfect when a truck is stuck. It is made available to any club member who wishes to use it. The question of speeding trucks was discussed by M. S. Bulkley and several others. On overspeeding and overloading were blamed most of the troubles relative to tires.

The next meeting will be held March 18 at Christopher's banquet-room and the subject for practicaly discussion will be "Operating Costs and Truck Maintenance."

An effort will also be made to secure the enactment of a law compelling the display of lights on all vehicles in Connecticut.

Springs and Upholstery

In other motor-cars there is a repeated rebound when passing over an unevenness of road.

In the C-Six, the original type of springs converts this into a single gentle dip.

VISITING AUTO MAN DESCRIBES NEW CAR.

THE visit of D. S. Menasco of Indianapolis, vice-president of the American Motors Company, to Los Angeles last week marked the advent of the American Underslung Six. The points of this car were explained in detail by Mr. Menasco and C. Fred Grundy of the Grundy Motor Sales Company, local sponsors for the American.

"The new model," said Mr. Menasco, "is six cylinder, sixty horse power, six passenger.

"While the motor is one of the largest to be shown on any of the new higher-powered sixes, it is entirely free from the many little fittings which so often complicate a large motor. The cylinders are cast en bloc together with the intake manifolds and water connections. This gives a very smooth casting and with the valve covers in place the motor presents a view of simplicity difficult to reconcile with the old order of rods and levers distributed all over a motor.

"A web cast between the legs of the motor on each side and extending from the crank case to the sub-frame also helps to keep the motor clean, by preventing dirt from the under pan coating the motor.

"The electric lighting and starting unit is mounted on the left side of the motor. It drives and is driven through heavy shafts of high grade alloy steel and sturdy timing gears.

"The magneto is mounted on the same side as the starter and water pump, leaving the intake side entirely free and clean. An electric horn, part of the regular equipment, is mounted on the intake side just ahead of the carburetor.

"The motor has a bore of 4½ inches and a stroke of six inches, placing it well in the class of long-stroke motors. It develops 65 horse power at 1600 revolutions.

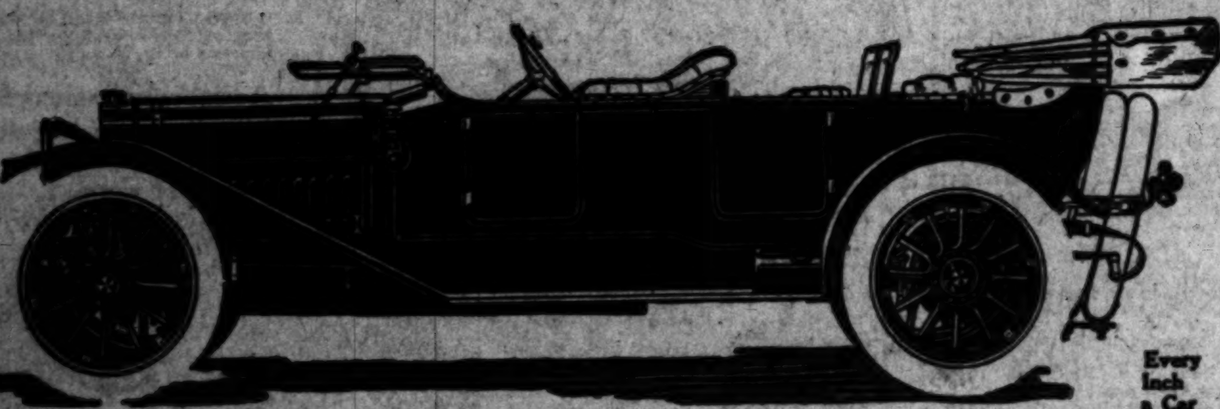
"The rear axle is of the built-up type. A drawn steel torsion tube of large dimensions and two drawn steel axle tubes are rigidly mounted in a cast steel differential housing. The top half of the housing is removable without disturbing the rest of the axle and the entire differential may be lifted out through this opening. The axle itself is of the full floating type, all loads being carried on large imported annular ball bearings—which in the case of the drive pinion and ring gear are mounted in adjustable cages.

Front and rear wheels are both mounted on annular ball bearings of the highest grade, encased in grease-tight compartments, to insure lubrication. A double thrust is used in the front wheels; this being a feature found in only the highest grade European cars.

"The regular equipment of the car includes cravenetted mohair top of special design, complete with storm curtains and boot; positive and efficient electric starter and generator, supplying all lamps; 100 mile electrically lighted speedometer and clock; adjustable built-in windshield; electric horn, shock absorbers; two spare demountable Q.D rims; pump, jack, tire repair kit, complete tool kit, foot rest, robe rail, etc., etc. The car sells for $4500 f.o.b. Indianapolis."

Each of the sixty-seven counties in Alabama has been authorized to draw $2000 as its share of the first installment of the State road assistance fund.

The Comfort Car



Every Inch a Car

Electric Motor spins the Engine

No more cranking—a touch of the foot lever in the front compartment, and the electric motor spins the engine vigorously—the engine starts—then the dynamo cuts in and charges storage batteries for future starting and lighting.

No need to get out of the car, either to start the engine, or light lamps — a touch of the foot lever starts the car—a press of a button lights it.

This system is not an experiment—it has received a year's careful testing—it has proven itself sufficient to start the engine of any KisselKar model under all conditions—it is the only system which will turn over the big engine of the KisselKar "Six," which it does at seventy-five revolutions per minute. Electric lights are twice as powerful as those ordinarily used on automobiles.

The KisselKar system puts no strain on the motor. It is powerful enough to drive the car a considerable distance. It will start the engine every time—no possibility of a failure.

Minimizes Gear-Shifting

You can do all ordinary driving "on high." The flexible KisselKar motor will slow "on high" to a mere walk, and will take hills at steady speed without rushing down one hill to get up the next.

KisselKar Service Doubles Every Dollar of Car Value.

KisselKar service cares for your car—and nothing responds to good more care than an automobile. Specially constructed and equipped buildings are maintained by the manufacturers at principal points of America. A service center is maintained in this city.

The complete service given by this organization lowers the running cost, insures uninterrupted pleasure and retards depreciation. Outside the special merits of the car itself, KisselKar Service is a weighty reason why you should choose a KisselKar.

KISSELKAR

The car of liberal design—self-starts at touch of the foot lever—electric lighted—the 1913 car of super-comfort and distinction : :

Sit in a KisselKar—immediately you sense the unusual roominess of the tonneau—one factor of the liberal KisselKar design.

Lounge back in the seats—here is another surprise, another result of liberal design. Never before have you sat in an automobile seat in which you could so completely relax. Never before have automobile seats been made so exceptionally deep. This, and the eleven inches of softest upholstery give you the most luxurious ease.

Ride in the KisselKar—you will note a steadiness and softness of motion immeasurably superior to every previous idea of car comfort—it is super-comfort due to the liberal KisselKar design.

The generous KisselKar wheelbase is the basis of this rare riding comfort. If a car is to be roomy, and at the same time have the "balance" which causes a car to ride with steadiness and handle responsively, it must have a proportionately liberal wheelbase. No car can equal KisselKar roominess and comfort without equaling the wheelbase—and few cars do. Every inch of KisselKar wheelbase means more liberal design in every part of the car.

Ride on rough roads—this is where the liberal KisselKar design discloses its true comfort value. The generous wheelbase modifies the irregularities of the road—springs built according to the weight of each model—shock absorbers and eleven inches of resilient seat upholstery absorb the road vibration. The unusually deep seats permit you to relax in a way so that sideway or lurches do not disturb you—no tendency to brace yourself. A good rough-road ride will show you why the liberal design makes the KisselKar deserving of being called "the car of super-comfort."

The one who drives will appreciate the roominess of his compartment—the "balance" that makes the KisselKar easy steering, and the light-footed way that the KisselKar picks the road.

Liberal design lends distinction—the generous wheelbase, emphasizing the long straight line effect of the body—the commodious tonneaus, make the KisselKar foremost in individuality and attractiveness.

Every part of the car shows the liberal KisselKar design — transmission, differential steering knuckles, brake drums, etc., securing a greater safety margin, minimizing up-keep and depreciation.

NOVEL METHOD OF MAKING TIRES.

NEWERF EXPLAINS ONE CURE-WRAP TREAD PROCESS.

Demand for Tires Greater Now Than It Has Been for Some Time and Continues to Exceed Supply. Manufacturers Working in Vain to Meet the Trade's Needs.

When one stops to consider the multiplicity of uses to which rubber is put, the revelation is astounding, says W. D. Newerf.

Since the discovery of the vulcanization method some twenty years ago the industry has sprung from comparative insignificance to an even footing with steel.

The perfecting of the automobile and the consequent demand for pneumatic tires gave it its greatest impetus. So great has been the demand on manufacturers of standard makes that in order to meet the supply they have literally been compelled to build additions to their factories over night. As an instance he sights the case of the Miller Rubber Company, Akron, O., which concern is now building a large extension to the plant, but so great has been the demand for their one cure-wrapped tread tire that, although the extention is not completed, they are figuring on further additions.

This firm seems to have struck the happy medium in tire construction, so to speak, and consequently the sales increased 400 per cent. last year and they expect to repeat the performance. Newerf explains that the one cure-wrapped tread method combines the best features of the two old methods. The feature of the one-cure mold process is that the tire is built and cured as a whole, but instead of being cured by live steam, which toughens it, it has the great disadvantage of being baked in a mold which dries out the rubber and greatly lessens the tire's wearing qualities, while the heavy mold pinches the tire, causing fabric breaks and consequent blowouts.

The two-cure wrapped tread process has only one thing in its favor. The tread is cured by live steam, which toughens it. But the carcass is baked in a mold the same as in the one-cure mold method, consequently having the same defects and in addition it is impossible to make the tread adhere to the already cured carcass. In the one-cure wrapped tread method as inaugurated by the Miller people, the tire is constructed as a whole, including the tread, as in the old one-cure method, giving it unity and solidity of body cut, instead of being baked in a close-fitting mold that pinches the carcass, it is wrapped and cured by steam, as in the two-cure wrapped tread process.

"Thus," says Mr. Newerf, "have been combined the good qualities of the two old methods, without any of their defects, and the result is a process of tire construction that is bound to revolutionize the industry."

Word was received in Portland yesterday of the official announcement in Toledo, O., that Pitcher Krause had been released to the Portland team of the Pacific Coast League by the Toledo team in exchange for Vean Gregg.

IMPERIAL VALLEY ROAD RACE TEACHES LESSON

W.A.A. Comes Into Its Own and Barney Old Proves He Is Live Wire—Teddy Tetzlaff Learns Lesson—Goode on Studebaker a Comer and McKee Among the Consistent Ones.

BY BERT C. SMITH.

SUCCESS in generous measure marked the Impemial Valley road race. The Western Automobile Association came into its own in a great speed battle. Our best drivers showed to advantage and men we did not know much about became famous. That race below sea level was a winner and the aftermath is pleasant.

Barney Oldfield can come back. In fact, he never has been relegated to the "hasbeens." He is a live wire and proved himself in the Imperial Valley road race, which he won with his superior head work. Against a field that included our best drivers, among them a man who has been given the championship road race honors, Barney flew to the tape a consistent winner.

Watching the Fiat as it romped across the finish the crowd saw Oldfield at his best. His consistent work on each lap showed how he had judged the car and the course. Refusing to be drawn out into a battle royal, Oldfield kept his pace, remained at the wheel every second and in spite of his wrists, which were weakened by the strain of the hard grind, remained firmly glued to his seat and finished a winner.

That race was won in the preparation. Oldfield only made one circuit of that course. His preparation was "early to bed and early to rise." He acted like a man training for a great prize fight and was in the pink of condition when Starter John S. Mitchell sent him away. Though he was not the favorite, Barney was picked by a number to win. One Imperial Valley enthusiast wagered $100 that Tetzlaff would defeat Oldfield.

Teddy Tetzlaff was the favorite. It was right that he should be picked to win. He had won against larger and faster fields. He was driving the same car, but "there is many a slip twixt the cup and the lip." Teddy has to learn many lessons and he learned one in the Imperial Valley road race. He is just as great a driver, even though he did not win, but the defeat was a bitter dose for Teddy to swallow.

GOODE IS GOOD.

The man who took second place in the Imperial Valley road race is a driver who is being overlooked. Frank B. Goode is good. He is good enough to give some of the big fellows a run for the money. He went after Barney Oldfield with the right kind of spirit. Yes, I know he had no chance to beat Mr. O'Field, but he certainly made Barney "kick" that Fiat on the tail every lap and Goode was in the running every second.

Backed by William R. La Casse, manager for the local Studebaker branch, than whom there is no better sport, Goode went into that race with the right kind of ginger and pep. Bill handled that race like a big man. He managed Goode and the Studebaker with a master hand. Just when Goode needed an extra kink or two let out, Bill gave the signal and as a result, Frank took second place in a race in which the best our best drivers were entered hall to Bill La Casse and the showed.

RICH PRIZE FOR SPEEDWAY RACE.

Five-Hundred-Mile Battle on for Decoration Day.

Indianapolis Prepares for Record Throng.

Entry List Larger Than for Last Year's Event.

Although with the exception of aviation, automobile racing is the youngest of all sports, it has climbed into popular favor to such an extent that today it is not rivaled even by baseball. This interest is manifesting itself all over the country and at present all eyes are centered on Indianapolis, where elaborate preparations are being made for the staging of the third annual 500-mile international sweepstake race, which will be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Decoration Day.

That the 500-mile race at Indianapolis this year will be the most exciting and best balanced contest ever held in the United States is the opinion that is being freely expressed by automobile authorities. With the idea of bringing this about and making the contest as sportsmanlike as possible, the speedway officials inserted a clause in the rules which govern the 1913 race, reducing the piston displacement of all cars to a maximum of 450 cubic inches. This will prevent big, specially-built racing cars from running away from cars of the stock class, a thing which has frequently occurred heretofore, and has lessened the interest in the contest. The wisdom of the speedway officials in making this rule has been universally recognized, and bids fair to revolutionize American racing. It is quite probable that the same rule will be adopted for the government of the Vanderbilt Cup race at Savannah.

There is another element which will also add interest to this year's Decoration Day race, this being the distribution of prizes. The purse of $50,000 hung up by the speedway management will be divided as follows: First prize, $20,000; second prize, [illegible]; third prize, $5000; fourth prize, [illegible]; fifth prize, $3000; sixth prize, [illegible]; seventh prize, $1800; eighth prize, $1600; ninth prize, [illegible]; tenth prize, $1400. In addition to the regular prizes an unusual number of trophies will be offered by various accessory manufacturers. The Remy trophy and Brassard will be offered to the car which is ahead at the end of the first 100 miles, provided it is Remy equipped. The Brassard goes to the driver and carries a salary of [illegible] a week for twenty weeks. The trophy goes to the manufacturer. It has also been announced that the famous Prest-O-Lite trophy, a solid silver cup valued at about $1500, with a [illegible] in miniature of the speedway on the reverse side, will go to the driver who is ahead at the end of the [illegible] miles. The Wheeler-Schebler trophy, a beautiful cup in heroic size, which has an actual value of $10,000, will be presented to the winner of the [illegible] miles.

In addition to this, the winner of this trophy will also be given a cash prize of $1000, provided his car is equipped with a Schebler carburetor. This is offered by F. H. Wheeler, president of the Wheeler-Schebler Company. Other trophies will also be awarded, all of which will be well worth struggling for, and the combined value of which will represent a small-sized fortune.

STANFORD HAS LIVE BALL TEAM.

SANTA CLARA AND ST. MARY'S SUCCUMB TO CARDINALS.

Early Season Games Indicate that the Varsity Nine Is Stronger Than It Has Been for Several Years. Coach Peters Is Out for Coast Intercollegiate Championship.

[illegible] Correspondence of The Times.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. [illegible]—Stanford students have suddenly awakened to the fact that they have an unusually strong ball team this year. Yesterday Santa Clara University was trounced, 7 to 4, and last [illegible] the third consecutive defeat was administered to St. Mary's [illegible], on the latter's diamond at [illegible]. Glavovich, who is slated for [illegible] league, was driven off the St. [illegible] mound, which is going some. The Cardinal has a strong trio of [illegible] this year. Tom Workman, '14, of Los Angeles, is covering first as it is [illegible] covered in college baseball. [illegible] Terry, '14, of Los Angeles, is the best shortstop that Stanford has [illegible] in many months.

[illegible], '14, at third, and Mo[illegible], '14, at second, are doing credit[illegible] work. These men are just breaking into the varsity ranks. This is [illegible] third year in the squad.

In the outfield are three veterans, [illegible] whom the horde of garden[illegible] will have a hard time in [illegible] out. Louis Cass, '13, of Los Angeles, is center; Argabrite of Ventura, '1[illegible], in left, and "Heinie" Beeger, [illegible] right, are varsity men of former years and are playing the game as it [illegible] be played.

Coach Peters has been concentrating on developing batting ability in [illegible] and during the last two [illegible] the men have been slugging [illegible].

Many Features.

SELDEN TRUCK HERE IS HIGH GRADE NEW MODEL.

SINCE the arrival of the first one-ton Selden truck the H. O. Harrison Company has experienced a decided rush on the part of merchants to see this model.

This interest was a demonstration that the people have become motor wise and the news of the impression created by this truck at the show had traveled westward.

The Selden has many features that recommend it. Although it is called a one-ton truck it is as sturdy in construction as two-ton models and as strong in all particulars as many three-ton types. It has a long-stroke motor of the standard construction, unit power plant, multiple disc clutch, large fuel capacity, simple control and a sealed governor that controls the maximum speed. This assures the owner protection from the speed-mad driver. One of the greatest troubles in the operation of trucks is in securing drivers who will not unduly speed these vehicles. Hitting street car crossings or other obstructions at a high rate of speed cannot but be injurious. The Selden takes care of this with the sealed governor.

H. O. Harrison is also making a time proposition on the truck that should appeal to many business houses not desiring to make the large initial outlay.

The H. O. Harrison Company has one of the most complete lines of trucks in the West. In the large class there are the Peerless three, four and five-ton models. These are extensively used for the heavy work and have made an enviable record in all parts of the country.

The Autocar, a ton and a half truck, is one of the most popular in the country. For rapid delivery service it is in a class by itself.

The Waverley Electric Company also furnishes trucks from 600-pound delivery wagons to seven-ton trucks. The electric truck has been gaining in popularity and has many features to recommend it. This places the Harrison company in a position to provide any type desired.

PROPHESIES CHANGE IN AUTO TIRES.

"Motor cars are becoming less and less instruments of sport, more and more instruments of utility," says P. M. Pontius, sales manager of the Motz Tire and Rubber Company, who is in charge of Motz exhibits at auto shows. "The craze for speed is giving way to a more practical demand for economical and reliable service. Under these circumstances the tire question is certain to become acute.

"Embarrassing delays on the road, cars out of commission when needed, a feeling of insecurity when driving at any distance from home—these result from the puncturing and blowing out of pneumatic tires. As standard equipment for the great bulk of motor cars, therefore, the pneumatics are certain to be displayed by some form of tire construction combining easy riding with proof against puncture trouble."

CLAIMS SHE WAS FIRST MOTORIST OF HER SEX.

MRS. J. H. PHILLIPS, formerly of Chicago, now of Maple Lodge, St. Louis, claims to be the first American woman to drive an automobile. Illinois license No. 24 was issued to her fourteen years ago.

In 1898 people stared in wonderment as Mrs. Phillips "sped" up Michigan avenue at the then fast rate of eight to ten miles an hour in her "horseless carriage," as all self-propelled vehicles of personal transportation were known.

Mrs. Phillips drove what was known as a tri-motor—her first automobile —back in 1898. It was a queer car, "conceived" by an Englishman, who came to America in that year with a roll of blue prints and $80,000. He had a concern, known then as the Western Wheel Works, build 200 such cars for him. The car was nameless. In about two years the 200 tri-motors were sold. The Englishman was bankrupt. His conception of an automobile had three wheels—one in front and two in back. A long handle reached from the front wheel to steer with. Its maximum speed was eighteen miles an hour, which was prohibited in Chicago.

"Drive your own car. It is woman's best tonic," advised Mrs. Phillips from the seat of the powerful Hudson, six-cylinder car she now drives. "After a woman has learned to drive there is no more splendid exercise in the world. It is the open sesame to good temper, good digestion, sound nerves—in short, good health.

"I drive at top speed over St. Louis speedways, where fast speed is allowed. There is nothing I love more than getting every ounce out of the machine. No matter how I may be feeling when I start, every nerve will be tingling with delight when I finish. I love to feel the wonderful pick-up of the machine under my control and to know that I am directing great energy. It is something for a woman to do, yet it is simplicity itself."

Trojans Win From Tigers

throw, when Beckes defeated Leo Livernash with a throw of 111ft. Leo has been making better marks than this in practice, but seems unable to come through in competition. Hal Clamment of U.S.C. was not in the meet, but it is doubtful he could have beaten Beckes yesterday, as the latter was in splendid fettle.

LINTON GETS REVENGE.

Linton Smith came into his own yesterday, defeating Bill Annin, the pride of Oxy, in the mile. Last year in this meet Annin trimmed Linton easily, and Smith was out for revenge. The time was slow, probably due to the rather raw wind on the back stretch, but Smith was expecting a sprint from Annin on the last lap, but the latter evidently was not in good shape as the sprint failed to materialize and Smith came in an easy winner.

The 100-yard dash was a surprise for the first sixty yards of its course. Baer of Oxy was ahead of Throop at this stage of the race, but the little Trojan veteran put on his famous finish and breasted the tape first. Baer got a good start and Throop a poor one, which likely had something to do with the event, but at that, Baer ran a beautiful 100. Three of the timers caught the men in 10 flat, while two stopped their watches at 10.2, so the slower time was given out as official, although the race looked quite a bit faster.

Fred Kelly took first in the high hurdles, finishing in 15.4s. He did not seem to have his form in the race, but his great natural speed carried him through. Kirkpatrick of Oxy finished second, running a good race. Stewart of Oxy and Taylor of U.S.C. were both disqualified for knocking over the barriers, so did not place.

Big "Ash" Hendrick of the Trojan band won the hammer-throw, with McNary and McDonald of Oxy second and third, respectively. Hendrick had a little trouble staying in the ring, but easily won in the final throws. The big fellow is steadily improving and should better his mark of 126ft. 8in. made in this meet.

WAR IN FOUR-FORTY.

The quarter-mile almost developed a riot. Jackson of U.S.C. breezed in a winner in 51 3-5s., Cook of Oxy taking second with a great sprint in the last 150 yards. Berger of U.S.C. was forced into third place on the back stretch, due to the fact that John Creighton of Occidental uncorked a terrific sprint in an attempt to gather some Trojan goats. Jackson heard him coming and let out with a great burst of speed and was not passed, but Berger was caught and on the third stretch was nearly shoved off the track in trying to get by Creighton. Cook pulled up at this point and came steaming in only a few yards behind Jackson. If the Oxy man had started his sprint sooner, he might have had a chance, but the son of Ham was running in magnificent form and would probably have won in any event.

Throop and Bradley, both of U.S.C., took first and second, respectively, in the 220-yard dash. Throop was in the lead all the way, though for a time it looked as if Baer might give him another hard grind, but the speedy Tiger blew up in the last thirty yards, Bradley coming up with a good finish for second. Yakeley of Oxy, was third, as Baer fell badly behind at the finish.

The next event was the discus throw, and here Beckus wound himself around the disc and when he unwound the weight fell 111 feet, which was enough to win.

FRED KELLY WRECKED.

The 220-yard low hurdles developed a wreck of some magnitude. Fred Kelly, the mighty, lost his stride on the sixth hurdle, stumbled, to the seventh, where he fell, cutting a great gash in his hip and knee. Kelly's fall messed up Laird and Hodge, the other U.S.C. entries, with the result that Kirkpatrick and Stewart, of Oxy, finished first and second, in the order named.

This was a terrible set-back to the Trojan dope sheet, but was a repetition of last year in the matter of hard luck. A year ago Kelly threw a shoe in this race, giving the same two Tigers first and second.

Tipton of U.S.C., won the 880 in 2 minutes and 6 4-5 seconds. Petit of Oxy came up in the last lap and nearly caught the flying Trojan, but Tipton had too much finish left and the Tiger could not make up the lead gained on him in the first lap. Tipton apparently did not extend himself in this race, while Petit could have done better had Bill Annin been running with him.

KELLY COMES BACK.

The shot put went to Fred Kelly, who made a put of 42 feet, 2 and 1-4 inches, after his bad accident in the low hurdles. This showed that the big Trojan has the grit, even if his luck is not the best in the world. Drury Wieman of Oxy took second, with a heave which was well beyond 40 feet, which shows that the Tiger is coming.

Swigget, Torrance and Walbridge tied for first place in the two mile, giving U.S.C., nine points. Swigget led out with a fast half-mile, but soon saw that there was no need of a record-breaking pace, so slowed up in order to finish with his team mates.

The broad jump brought Beckes to light again, and he once more annexed five points and first place for the Tigers, in the high jump.

The day was brought to a close with the relay. The U.S.C. team won with yards to spare. Berger and Yakeley ran the first lap, Berger winning for his team and putting Ira Courtney out in front. Courtney ran a good lap, but did not extend himself. His bad tendon was troubling him a little, but he gave Hodge a lead over Craighton. Hodge increased the lead materially, running a great lap, finishing in 51 3-5 seconds. Cook of Oxy started after Jackson of U.S.C. in the last lap, with a fine burst of speed. Jackson had been told that Cook was dangerous, so he came through with a lap in 51 seconds flat. Cook ran a good race, but was helpless against the speedy Jackson. He showed remarkable form in this race and finished with a wonderful sprint.

ST. LOUIS BROWN TO BE PROM

Stovall Has Picked Up a Very S Players and Has Proven Himself sidered a Regular Manager—Ag Umpire Yet.

BY HUGH S. FULLER

JUST how it is cannot be told here; but something has gone on in the American League. If St. Louis had been conceded first pick of recruits and allowed to grab the promising material that is loose— that is, the cheaper material—the Browns could scarcely have done better. If there is merit in the mine run of minor leaguers the Browns have strengthened considerably. Without paying money for the stars they have accumulated a corking good crowd of youngsters, and I believe they have done better both in the purchase and in the draft than any club in the country.

The team, of course, still is weak. It needs pitchers and it needs a lot of other things, but it is likely to come strong and to develop. There are signs of hope. In the first place, George Stovall has proved himself fit to class as a regular manager instead of an experiment.

Last season I figured the Browns would win fifty-two games, and they won fifty-three. This season I figure they will grab sixty-one games, and if they do the team that slips will go below them. Indeed, I am figuring them a lot better than they were, inasmuch as the league as a whole has tightened up, the weaker clubs strengthening materially and the strong ones at least holding their own. It is going to be a hard league to move up in this season, for although Detroit ought to be easier to beat, Philadelphia, the White Sox, Cleveland and New York will be harder and Boston just as hard as ever, which makes the task of St. Louis more difficult.

St. Louis' campaign to strengthen the team was a remarkable one. The Browns secured a regular army of recruits and cancelled a dozen or more after drawing them. They skimmed the cream of the Coast

ST. LOUIS BROWNS SEEM TO BE PROMISING CLUB.

Stovall Has Picked Up a Very Strong Bunch of Good Players and Has Proven Himself Entitled to Be Considered a Regular Manager—Agnew Looks to Be an Umpire Yet.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

JUST how it is cannot be told here; but something has gone on in the American League. If St. Louis had been conceded first pick of recruits and allowed to grab the promising material that is loose— that is, the cheaper material—the Browns would scarcely have done better. If there is merit in the mine run of minor leaguers the Browns have strengthened considerably. Without paying money for the stars they have accumulated a corking good crowd of youngsters, and I believe they have done better both in the purchase and in the draft than any club in the country.

The team, of course, still is weak. It needs pitchers and it needs a lot of other things, but it is likely to come strong and to develop. There are signs of hope. In the first place, George Stovall has proved himself fit to class as a regular manager instead of an experiment.

Last season I figured the Browns would win fifty-two games, and they won fifty-three. This season I figure they will grab sixty-one games, and if they do the team that slips will go below them. Indeed, I am figuring them a lot better than they were, inasmuch as the league as a whole has tightened up, the weaker clubs strengthening materially and the strong ones at least holding their own. It is going to be a hard league to move up in this season, for although Detroit ought to be easier to beat, Philadelphia, the White Sox, Cleveland and New York will be harder and Boston just as hard as ever, which makes the task of St. Louis more difficult.

St. Louis' campaign to strengthen the team was a remarkable one. The Browns secured a regular army of recruits and cancelled a dozen or more after drawing them. They obtained the cream of the Coast league and, among others, got Patterson, a first baseman, from Oakland, who hit .306, and is touted strongly by some scouts.

This fellow Pratt, fair at second base, and to me looking better at shortstop, is a natural hitter and a clever man on the bases. With Austin at third and Wallace or Hallman at short the infield looms up as rather formidable. The reports I get on this fellow Hallman, brought back from Memphis on an optional agreement, are that he is a much improved player, and with Wallace ageing the youngster would fit in well anywhere.

There is a swarm trying for outfield positions. On the best four I can select the outfield figures .746, against Boston's .893, by the comparative tests, using Boston as the basis of the strongest. By the same test the outfield figures sixth in the American League. Truth to tell, it figures better than that, except for the deductions necessary to figure lack of experience and the uncertainty as to how the team will line up.

I figure that Shotten, a .290 hitter, a fast, clever man, Brief and Maisel probably will be the intial lineup.

Maisel is the fellow who set the league afire at Harrisburg last season and for whom several clubs, including Baltimore, were scrapping. Just how how he stands now I'm not certain, but if St. Louis hangs to him he looks good and, according to one of the wisest scouts in the country, a comer with a Cap come.

St. Louis has been rather weak in the catching department, although it had men who might have been all right under better circumstances. Stovall evidently has tried to freshen up the catching staff. With Krichell and Stephens and Alexander he finished in fair shape last season, and he has two new men who come strongly touted, so strongly, in fact, that they are good trading material whether St. Louis wants them or not. Agnew, from Vernon, I do not think is ripe, although he is a corking hitter and a fair backstop, and McAllister from Montgomery is rated high.

To me the sign of hope is Alexander, a catcher who ought to do a good deal of improving with experience and who in the post season series last fall seemed to have the makings of a better man than he ever promised to be prior to that time.

The pitching department has been the most deficient. In fact, the pitching has been so bad for several years that it has made a weak team look weaker than it really was. I think the pitching will improve immensely with the end of the rowdy and careless regime.

There isn't a star on the staff, but there are a couple who may develop into stars. Either Wellman or Allison may come fast under proper encouragement, and either would be grabbed by stronger clubs if they were loose. Hamilton is a very fair pitcher, but never a star, and anything is possible for Baumgartner.

Leverenz, from Los Angeles, is a promising man, and Napier, although he did not look good last fall, is strongly recommended. I like Wellman immensely, and one scout, working for a National League club, tells me he thinks that with the exception of Green, secured by the New York Highlanders, he believes Wellman the strongest newcomer in the circuit—which is going some.

It is frightfully hard to figure this team until Stovall selects it, but one thing is certain, he has a wealth of promising if untried and undeveloped talent. Balenti, the Chattanooga Indian, is highly touted all around among the wise baseball men. Johnson, the heavy-hitting outfielder from Montgomery, is to be reckoned with. Brief, although a first baseman, can make a bid for a regular outfield job. I hear that Sloan, from Bristol, is a good man, and Miller, from Lewell, is highly spoken of.

The trouble is that Stovall has so many youngsters he may make a bad mistake or two before he gets acquainted with them.

Figuring every position and every candidate, including a few who are certain to go and therefore are only figured tentatively, it seems to me that the Browns are a coming ball club, commencing to build up after their long era of defeat. Don't expect anything sensational from them, but don't figure to win more than two out of three games in any series, no matter what club you admire. With good pitching they'll beat any one. It isn't a team as yet dangerous to top notch clubs or to first rate pitchers, but the Browns will beat second string pitchers pretty handily with their own strongest men, and managers who have been in the habit of saving up their strong men for other clubs and using their second raters to beat the Browns are due for a lot of surprises.

MRS. PIERCE IS CLASSY BOWLER.

EASILY WON RECENT TOURNEY FOR LADIES.

Rolls Ten Games for an Average of Almost 210, Which Is Very High, Even for Men—Mrs. H. C. Scott Was Expected to Win But Was Not in Good Condition.

Mrs. F. J. Pierce won the women's single bowling championship tournament last week by 104 pins over her nearest competitor, her total for the sixty games played being 10,138, and her average 169. Incidentally, Mrs. Pierce rolled one ten-game series for a total of 2098, an average of almost 210, with a high game of 238. This is said to be a record for women in ten-game series.

A challenge match for the championship is expected between the winner and Mrs. A. J. Johnson, who finished second in the race. It is also possible that Mrs. H. C. Scott, who finished in third place, and who has for many years been considered the leading feminine bowler of this section, may be brought out as a contender for the title when she recovers the form temporarily lost during the past few weeks.

FINAL SCORES.

Scores after completion of the final round, which was played at the Oaks alleys, stood as follows:

Mrs. Pierce—10,138, average 169; Mrs. Johnson—10,034, average 167; Mrs. Scott—9743, average 162; Mrs.

Turner—9602, average 160; Miss E. Scott—8555, average 142.

Ten continuous games were found too heavy work for women, most of the contestants weakening toward the end of each four-hour session, with the two stronger competitors forging gradually ahead. Aside from Mrs. Pierce and Mrs. Johnson, all the competitors are of light physique, Miss Scott being probably the frailest of the six.

Figures of the final round of ten games, which developed a remarkably close contest, in which four contestants finished but a single pin apart in averages, are appended. It should be noted that the three members of the Ben Travato team, Lapham, Johnson and Scott, rolled a total of 1196 pins more than their competitors of the Cosmo-Machin team, the respective totals being 29,482 to 28,285.

LONG TERM IN PRISON.

Heavy fine and a long term imprisonment will face automobile speeders if a bill drawn by the city solicitor of Toledo, O., and which he will have introduced in the Legislature becomes a law. A fine of not more than $500 or not more than six months in the work-house is provided for the first offense. A fine of $500 and six months' imprisonment is the penalty for any subsequent offense. The new law would make the owner and operator of any automobile violating the provisions of the act jointly liable in damages for any in-

GOOD RECORDS MADE IN CALIFORNIA MEET.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BERKELEY, March 1.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The first shortened event track meet of the season was run off today. Wadsworth, a freshman, traveled 80 yards in 8 2-5s., beating the varsity time. Prebble, another freshman, beat Besson's time in the 80-yard high hurdles. He was clocked at 10 4-5s. Woodruff of Redlands made 37 4-5s. in 352-yard dash. Elmendorff of Los Angeles took second in the 704-yard run. Spindt trotted 2816 yards in 7m. 49s., Vedder from Tacoma, won the 1408 run by thirty yards. He made it in 3m. 25s. Besson, in the high jump, cleared 6ft. 1in. McFie of Los Angeles went 5ft. 8in. Graves, a freshman, pole vaulted 11ft. 6in.

The sixteen-pound pill was put 40ft. 11½in. by Thomas. Shattuck tossed the hammer 164ft. Wadsworth is practically sure of making the varsity. Woodruff is doped as a likely candidate. His form is great. McFie was a little off color today.

The freshmen crew candidates were given their first work-out on San Francisco Bay yesterday by Coach O'Dea. A training house has been equipped at Redwood City.

CARLSON IN BENZ WINS AT SAN DIEGO.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN DIEGO, March 1.—W. H. Carlson, Jr., in a big Benz racer, won the 200-mile road race on Point Loma late this afternoon. Time, 3h. 24m. 28s.

At the end of the running only three cars were in the race, two Benz and a Stutz. At the start, J. Compton, driver of the Mercedes entry, was seriously injured when his car, going at terrific speed, turned turtle in the first turn in the road. He was rushed to a hospital, where it was stated he probably would recover. His mechanician escaped unhurt.

The light-car race was won in the morning by "Spider" Campbell in a Buick. The distance was 100 miles and Campbell's time was 1h. 57m. 58s.

The big Benz driven by Tony Janette turned over in the last lap while in the lead and Janette was reported seriously hurt.

WRESTLING BOUT AT ATHLETIC CLUB.

The wrestling match between Dr. B. F. Roller and William Demetral at the Los Angeles Athletic Club Friday, March 7, promises to be the first real grappling contest ever seen in Southern California.

The retirement of Frank Gotch has left the championship a matter of contention, and Roller, champion of the Pacific Coast, and Demetral "The Greek demon," are claiming the title. The match on Friday night will settle the dispute.

Fully as interesting will be the preliminaries. Some of the finest Japanese jiu-jitsu artists in the world have been secured, and the little brown men will show the wonderful power their superlative knowlege of human anatomy enables them to exercise over men many times larger and stronger than are they themselves.

Roller weighs 210 pounds in trim, and Demetral but few pounds lighter, and both are as quick and as skillful as they are strong.

Getting Into Line.

MANY ENTRANTS FOR MARATHON.

Fifteen Indians May Co[me] from Sherman School.

St. Joseph's Club Is to Ent[er] Two Good Teams.

Directors Will Meet Th[is] Week on Business.

The announcement of The modified marathon this season met with the decided approval of amateur fans of Southern Califo The entry blanks have only been for a few days and already are coming in from all parts of south. The fact that the race been reduced from twelve to miles, seems to have pleased of the long-distance runners in south.

This year the race bids fair to a struggle between teams and be a great deal like one of the ern intercollegiate cross-country The St. Joseph's Young Men's has a squad of ten men training the present time and expects to ter two full teams in the race, of or five men each.

Last year the St. Joseph aggrega tion got the trophy for having most men finish within the lated time limit and this spring, to again take this prize, along the cup for the winning team, in gard to time.

L.A.A.C. TO ENTER.

Last season the Los Angeles letic Club runners scored the victory, as Roger Cornell's men ished with the best time score race. This year the L.A.A.C. entering a team of four men, to the time trophy, and if enough terial can be developed, may two squads in the field on the day the race.

The athletes of the L.A.A.C. ning squad are rather peeved the Sherman Indians cantered with the annual club road Washington's Birthday, and, as Indians are going to enter two teams in The Times race, hope retrieve some of the laurels the club race.

MANY INDIANS READY.

As for the Sherman Indians, team that defeats these will be one to win the race, as the man defeats Albert Ray, may be the to win the "grand prize." Joe Schoulder has fifteen men in training for the event and he will enter at least ten, divi two teams of five each.

"We expect to take first and places with our teams and first five places individually," Schoulder. "If possible I enter fifteen men, or three we are after records and we ing to get 'em." This is a long for a native son and there a world of argument behind says, or he would have stopped he had said half as much.

However, it is a safe bet to the Sherman Indian teams will watching in the coming race. running squad has been chosen ly from the Hopi and Palma which have years of tribal as wonderful runners, behind

The other teams, which are ter the race this year are to from the University of Southern fornia, the Los Angeles Y.M.C.A. several of the other Y.M.C.A. sations in the south.

FOUR GOOD TROJANS.

The U.S.C. Trojans have four men this season and may several more before April 19. Henderson, Ralph Murphy and Teschke are the veterans at game, while Walbridge, who cently entered the College of has a long rcord as a cross- star, having won races here the north. He first starred in "Depsea" race of the San Olympic Club. At the present Walbridge is training with for the two-mile, but should fine shape for The Times as the event comes at the close regular intercollegiate season.

It is doubtful whether Pomona Oxy will enter full teams, institution expects to be by one or two contestants. C.A. teams should offer some best competition, as the running has steadily grown in popularity them for the past two seasons. Beach, Pasadena, Redlands, side and possibly San Bernardino expected to enter teams in the Manual Arts High School the front with a pair of fast the L.A.A.C. race and is now to arrange a team for The race.

Of course, the military feature the race will add a great A, Co. F, and Co. C of the Regiment, have marching the field, while Co. R-C-H $985

F. O. B. San Francisco

You Can' Pay More Than $985 for a Motor Car But What More Do You Get?

Here are some facts about the R-C-H that you ought to most carefully consider before you finally make up your mind which car to buy.

It is the most economical of fuel of all low-priced cars, most owners getting from 20 to 25 miles per gallon of gasoline, while some owners report as high as 33 miles per gallon.

It is the easiest riding of all low-priced cars, due to the special arrangement of the springing. You can very easily prove this by riding in the R-C-H and comparing it with competing cars.

It is exceptionally roomy, the body seating five average persons comfortably and having full width doors so that passengers can get in and out comfortably. Front seat is 38½ inches wide, rear seat 43½ inches wide.

It has left side drive with center control, enabling the driver to have better view of traffic conditions and permitting of entry to the front seats from the curb instead of from a muddy or dusty street.

It has an unusually quiet motor—3¼-inch bore with 5-inch stroke (long stroke)—which can be throttled down on high speed to four miles per hour.

It has more drop forgings than any other car at any price, 244 drop forgings being used in its construction.

There are a great many other features that will commend the R-C-H to the discriminating buyer, described in the detailed specifications below.

Electric Lights All Around.
Bosch Magneto.
Warner Speedometer.
32x3½ Tires All Around
Demountable Rims and One Extra Rim.

SPECIFICATIONS.

FRONT AXLE

Front axle is one piece I beam drop forged—the stiffest, strongest, lightest and safest that can be employed.

REAR AXLE AND TRANSMISSION

The rear axle is of the semi-floating type that permits of easy adjustment of driving gears, full adjustment of bevels can be made by removing plates on rear axle and transmission housings. It is possible to remove transmission unit without tearing down rest of car. The R-C-H transmission is of the sliding gear selective type and has three speeds forward and one reverse.

GEARS

Especially large wide toothed, heat-treated, Chrome nickel gears, cut and tempered in our own plate, are used throughout. No shims are used on the bevel drive-gears and they are easily adjusted for quiet running.

ACCESSIBILITY

Every part of the R-C-H is easily accessible. All timing gears and camshaft may be removed by taking off front cover plate. The rear axle and transmission unit can be removed by loosening four bolts without disturbing rest of car, while the clutch assembly or motor can also be removed with as little trouble. Connecting rods may be adjusted by taking off plates in crank case. The differential may be removed complete by loosening plate on rear axle housing.

LIGHT WEIGHT

The weight of the touring car is only 2000 pounds, roadster 1800 pounds, coupe 2300 pounds.

LIGHTING SYSTEM

Electric lights throughout. Hundred ampere-hour battery. Large, up-to-date electric headlights with double parabolic lenses, electric side lamps with parabolic lenses. Tail lamp. Lights controlled from selective switch on dash. Turn on or off from the seat, give an unwavering powerful light, and moreover are economical.

MOTOR

Long stroke (3¼-inch bore, 5-inch stroke.) Cylinders are cast en bloc, making a shorter motor possible with consequently less weight. Another advantage of en bloc casting is perfect alignment at all times, while better water spaces and the highest efficiency possible in cooling are obtained. The long stroke motor gives greater pulling power at slow engine speeds, is more economical of gasoline and oil.

BOSCH IGNITION

There are no batteries or coils in the R-C-H system. We use a high tension magneto carried at left side of motor and driven from magneto gear in forward housing. It is simple, having only four secondary wires and two primary to switch.

COOLING

Thermo-siphon system with fan. The radiator is extra large, with supplementary tank giving unusually large water capacity of 3½ gallons. Uniform cooling of cylinders is assured.

CLUTCH

Cone is leather faced, engaging in flywheel which is fan-spoked. Clutch is 1¾ inches wide, 11½ inches in diameter. It engages easily, and requires slight push on pedal and gives long wear. This facing is easily removable, and for replacement a piece of curved leather can be secured in leather shop. In clutches where the facing is cemented and riveted, replacements must be had from factory. The clutch springs are outside, thus easily adjusted and removed.

STEERING

R-C-H cars are driven from the left side, the logical arrangement for American road rules. This permits of easy access to the car from the curb instead of compelling occupants of the front seat to walk around the car in the dust, mud or slush, and in driving, better view of the traffic both ahead and behind is obtained.

BEARINGS

All R-C-H bearings are in dust-proof cases which retain grease and exclude dirt, needing less attention and giving longer life. In the motor, extra long 1⅞-inch diameter die cast bearings are used; transmission jack shaft bearings are of phosphor bronze, all others in propeller shaft, rear axle, etc., being Hyatt high duty roller.

SPRINGS

Front springs are semi-elliptic; rear springs are full-elliptic and are mounted on swivel seats and slightly uptilted. The swiveled springs do away with strains on the frame, and the tilt means that in hitting a bump the shock is taken at right angles, giving an easier riding car.

FRAME

Frame of pressed steel with five cross members hot riveted in place making it especially strong.

TYPES OF STEEL AND IRON

High manganese steel is used in connecting rods, crank nickel shaft, and all parts requiring stiffness and strength. Chrome nickel steel goes into gears, shafts and parts requiring strength, toughness and long life under severe strains. Malleable iron goes into the rear axle and transmission housings with highest grade of gray iron in cylinders and crank case.

WHITE SOX TO PLAY THURSDAY.

Second Team Is to Play Los Angeles Club.

Venice Tigers Are to Take on Big Leaguers.

Miller, Berger, Kuhn, Zeider Among the Visitors.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

Thursday the local fans will take their fourth annual peep at the hosts of the immaculate hosiery, better known as the White Sox and listed in the baseball blue book as the Chicago Americans.

On that day, Comiskey's No. 2 squad will go nine rounds or more with Hen Berry's matchless Angels at Washington Park. This will be followed by games on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Another four-game series will be played the following week.

Team No. 2 will then go north to make way for team No. 1, which will open with the Angels at Washington Park in a four-game series on Thursday, March 20.

Then team No. 2 will be turned over to the tender mercies of Hap Hogan's Tigers, and will officially open the new Venice Park with a pastime on March 26. This will be followed by three games at Washington Park between the Tigers and Sox, following which the Comiskey people will pack up and depart.

Comiskey has thirty-five ball players quartered at Paso Robles. This amazing array is to be severed into two squads to be known as teams No 1 and No. 2. These will be about equal in strength, it is said, as Callahan expects to assign some of the veterans to each squad. Team No. 1 will be in charge of Jimmy Callahan, last season the managerial sensation of the American League.

The ancient, but ever aggressive "Kid" Gleason, coach of the White Sox, will boss team No. 2. Gleason is one of the best men in the business when it comes to operations on the lines, and is credited with saving many a game for the Sox last season.

This is the fourth annual trip of the White Sox to California. They were here in 1908, 1909 and 1910. The following two springs they tested the Texas climate, but found that it did not measure up to the boosts in the Board of Trade booklets, and the result was that dear old California looked better than ever to Comiskey.

Here is the talent on Comiskey's roster: Jimmy Callahan, manager; Harry Lord, captain; Ed Walsh, "Doc" White, Frank Lange, Jim Scott, Eddie Cicotte, Joe Benz, pitchers; Kid Gleason, coach; Billy Sullivan, Ray Schalk, Walter Kuhn, Ted Easterly, catchers; Morris Rath, second base; George Weaver, shortstop; Rollie Zeider, third base; "Ping" Bodie, John Collins, Walter Mattick, all regulars of last season's team; Joe Berger, shortstop, from Los Angeles; George Mogridge, pitcher, from the Western League; C. Smith, pitcher, from Birmingham; E. Wolfgang, pitcher, from the New England League; C. A. Russell, pitcher, from Ft. Worth; Jack Fournier, first baseman, from Montreal; Walter Johnson, pitcher, from Washington; George Johnson, pitcher, from St. Joseph; E. Johnson, shortstop, from Dubuque; Jack Kuhn, third baseman, from Oshkosh; John Dossett, catcher, from St. Joseph; Frank Clark, pitcher, from Vancouver; Frank Miller, pitcher, from San Francisco; James Johnson, outfielder, from the Southern League, and Phil Douglas, pitcher, from Des Moines.

Imperial Valley Race.

saved the day for us. Yes, I suppose the crowd received a dollar's worth, but at that, I'm not so sure. So much depends on the man who handles a meet. The road race was managed by Steve Lyons, and he did his work well. The track meet? Well, let's pass on to the next aisle.

Here we find exhibit No. 2, and it's worth looking at carefully. The Imperial Valley road race discovered some fine sports. We already knew some of them. Others came to light in the lowlands of that valley Saturday and Sunday. First among them is Attorney Eugene E. Hewlett, the man who owns that Fiat stable, the finest list of racing cars ever groomed for any contest.

REAL FIAT SPORT.

Attorney Hewlett hates to be trotted out into the limelight. He would far sooner hear words of praise for his Fiat cars than have anything said about himself. But we rise to remark that without Hewlett and his cars the road race would have been only half as good and the track meet would have been a joke. Thanks to E. E., the Howdy Special and the Imperial road race was a hummer, and everybody had the time of their lives.

Another, and he's a good one. Otto Schons, secretary of the Venice Athletic Club, and right bower for Eddie Maier. Schons was willing to keep time, willing to trudge through the dust and risk his life on a shaky judge's stand; in fact, willing to do anything to be in the swim. He came through that big race with the right kind of honors and our hat is off to friend Schons, who acquitted himself like a man.

Another please stand up. W. N. Murray of Oak Knoll. Big and handsome, with an appetite for anything that looks like real sport. He stood in the breach until the last car had crossed the line. He kept tab on those racers and was there at the finish without apologies, and without a grouch. We have discovered Murray and we like him.

Orvie Overall. Well, you all know him, and just a word in passing is enough. Allan Kelly was another true sport, who served as an official and was willing to do the work without thanks. He made many friends among the motorists and was correct. That's more than we can say about many timers we have known.

John S. Mitchell, president of the auxiliary of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association, was starter. If you think that's an easy job, try it. Look at the tense faces of those drivers. Watch them trying to snitch at the line. See John Mitchell, with his hand aloft, holding them to the mark, and then you'll know what it means to start a big race.

Perry H. Greer, president of the Automobile Dealers' Association, Mayor of Mexicali, king of the Imperial Valley, and referee of the big road race. Well, he represented the W.A.A. right well, but he also was guide and chief money-spender for that big howling crowd of howdy specialists. Perry made friends as usual. He honored that howdy hat. He showed up well in the merry-making this side and the other side of the line, and if we have another big road race in the near future may I be there and may Perry Greer be referee.

Many Persons

spend sleepless nights due to their inability to make "both ends meet." If your present position is not sufficiently remunerative, get a better one by reading the "Help Wanted" columns of The Times "Liner" section.—[Advertisement.

TIDE IN AFFAIRS OF MEN.

Auto. Manufacturer Believes That the Purchase of a Machine May Lead to Fortune.

A. E. Morrison, western sales manager for the R. C. H. Company, now in Los Angeles for a short stay, states that his firm expects to sell 2000 cars on the Coast this year.

"The outlook for a car selling at $935, as does the R. C. H., was never better," he said. "There is hardly a man in the United States who does look forward to owning a motor car. The purchase of a car may be the turning point in a man's career. It makes him more efficient and raises his whole standard of life."

Mr. Morrison stated that his company's exhibit at the Chicago automobile show was a great success.

An Intense Desire to enjoy the wonderful climatic and scenic beauties of Southern California, splendid commercial and industrial possibilities, impel many eastern and northern property owners to advertise their holdings in the "For Exchange Eastern and Northern Property" columns of The Times "Liner section." It pays to read these announcements.—[Advertisement.

No-Rim-Cut Tires
10% Oversize

Mark What the Meter Says

On the tire question, let your meter talk
Look at tire bills only.

Thirty makers say, "Our Tire is Best"

But the verdict of meters, after 14 years has given Goodyear tires the largest sale in the world. And that sale doubles yearly.

Reason Says This

A tire that can't rim-cut must save all that rim-cutting wastes.

And statistics show that rim-cutting ruins 23 per cent of all old-type tires.

An oversize tire, of equal quality, must outwear skimpy tires.

Our 10 per cent oversize, under average conditions, adds 25 per cent to the tire mileage.

Reason also says that a tire which has come to outsell all rivals must in some way excel them.

Get the Facts

Now isn't it wise to get the actual facts?

Here is a tire which, through sheer merit, has become the sensation of Tiredom. Men have used two million of them—on perhaps 300,000 cars. So many men could not well be deceived. Why don't you learn what won them Make your own comparisons. No-Rim-Cut tires will certainly not cost you more per mile than others.

If they do for you what they have done for legions, it means an enormous economy.

We Deserve It

We deserve this test.

For 14 years our experts have worked, in the ablest way, to cut tire upkeep.

Year by year they have made these tires better—embodied in them a dozen strong features found in no other tire.

They have saved motor car owners many millions of dollars. They have won over all the rest. Now we surely deserve your verdict on them.

Write for the Goodyear Tire Book — 14th-year edition. It tells all known ways to economize on tires.

A bold assertion, but a true one.

There are a score or more of six-cylinder models, but none of them have the fine characteristics of the Oakland Greyhound—6-60—a car of such striking lines that you gaze at it in sheer admiration and marvel at its wonderful symmetry and graceful appearance.

This, too, is a bold assertion, but a true one.

AUTO REVIVES ROAD PROJECT.

Ocean-to-Ocean Highway With Many Supporters.

Country-wide Interest Is Now Holding Nation.

Old Santa Fe Trail Logical Route for Highway.

There was a time when the utility of the motor car was extremely limited. It was considered a feat if the gasoline vehicle could go on a tour of fifty miles without accident. But that time has passed and the sphere of usefulness of the automobile is steadily increasing. It would seem that this sphere has about reached its maximum, but this idea springs from present conditions which has never taken into consideration the fact that the motor car must be given its advantages in order to measure up to the standard which it will attain provided conditions are in its favor. The greatest locomotive ever turned out of the Baldwin works could accomplish nothing unless it should be placed on a suitable track. This applies also to the automobile and unless road conditions over the country are improved the automobile will be compelled to remain in its present state of development without achieving the results of which it is capable. There is but one solution to this problem, and that is good roads.

There was a time in the United States when the good road question was all-important, for at that time the mail service depended upon this phase of national development. The introduction of the locomotive changed matters somewhat, and good roads were allowed to sink into oblivion. The automobile, however, has revived an interest in perfect highway construction and today the future development of the automobile rests upon this question. If the automobile is to be brought into its greatest sphere of practicability there must be a marked improvement in road conditions all over the United States.

Good roads movements are not new, but they have been hindered by the interference of politics and other outside influences which have been brought to bear upon them and which have conveyed every good roads question, with but few exceptions, into a tangle which resulted in chaos. It is only recently that a practical plan has been inaugurated and from the present outlook it would seem that this plan is to carry through.

A few months ago Carl G. Fisher conceived the idea of an Ocean-to-Ocean Highway. Profiting by the experiences of others along this line, Mr. Fisher, and those associated with him, concluded that the only practical way of securing such a highway would be to appeal to those most vitally interested, and consequently he broached his idea to the automobile and accessory manufacturers and dealers.

NEEDS MONEY.

His plan was to raise a fund sufficient to purchase all the materials necessary for the construction of a highway which would extend from New York to San Francisco. Manufacturers and dealers were asked to pledge 1 per cent. of their gross earnings for one year or 1-3 per cent. of their gross earnings for three years. No sooner had this plan been made public until manufacturers and dealers all over the country responded generously. Today more than $2,000,000 has been pledged and it is fully expected that within a few months the entire $10,000,000 necessary for this undertaking will be realized. Once this fund is assured a representative national committee will be elected by the contributors and it will be the duty of this committee to select the route which the highway will take. This will be done after the committee has carefully examined the conditions over the country and has ascertained which State or group of States will be most willing to cooperate in the movement. The expense of constructing the highway will be put up to the various counties and the work of construction will be entirely under their supervision. The plans and specifications will be placed in the hands of United States government engineers, who will be detailed to this duty without cost, to the Highway Association. This will assure each county a perfect specimen of roadway entirely free from cost with the exception of the labor necessary to construct it.

Utterly aside from the benefit which this highway will bring to the automobile industry, it has an economical value which must not be overlooked. It is believed that this one perfect roadway will bring about an impetus which will be nation-wide in scope and which will result in a general good roads movement which will be a benefit to the entire country. The example of New York State may be taken as being typical for, where a few years ago nothing but mud roads existed, today we find as perfect a system of roadways as could be desired. The Automobile Club of America, after much persuasion, obtained State aid for the construction of one short rock highway which would serve as an example of what a perfect highway should be. So great was the influence of this highway, that at present the State of New York is interlaced with a system of roadways, the equal of which cannot be found either in America or Europe. If this much was obtained by one State, it is quite apparent what would be the result if a perfect highway should span the continent from coast to coast.

There is no one more dependent upon the perfect highway than is the American farmer. It is a well known fact that today the boys and girls reared upon the farm, are prone to seek the cities in later life. This is because the farm as it exists at present, is not conducive most of the year, to that social intercourse which the average human demands. The introduction of the rural telephone has done much to overcome this handicap, but there is nothing which will bring about the ideal condition so much as the good roadway. Once the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway is a reality and tributary roadways begin to come into existence, the people of the farms will find that they are better off in the country that they are in the towns. They will have no difficulty in reaching the business centers, and conditions all over the country will become the same as they are in the Blue Grass Region of Kentucky where good roads have caused the people to remain upon the farms rather than to seek the uncertain fortunes of the city.

Although interest in the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway is widespread, there is no place in the country today which is so thoroughly alive to the situation as the West.

THE ROUTES.

Three routes are bidding to be made part of the Ocean-to-Ocean Highway. One of these lies through the Northwest, another is known as the Midland Trail and extends through Colorado—a third, which has been dominated the Old Santa Fe Trail, follows the Southwestern route mapped by The Times Special on the Ocean-to-Ocean trip. The people along this route have been most active. Divisions of the National Old Trails Ocean-to-Ocean Highway Association have been formed along the route of the Ocean-to-Ocean highway. But only recently the people of Utah have also awakened to the benefits of the highway, and through its president, B. F. Redman, the Automobile Association of Salt Lake City, has issued a challenge to the motor enthusiasts of Colorado. If Colorado will build a good automobile road across the State to the Utah line, along the route of the Midland Trail, as recently marked out by A. L. Westgard, of the Automobile Association of America, the Automobile Association of Salt Lake City [illegible] to provide a fund of $1,500,000 [illegible] carry the highway across Utah.

Spirit of this kind is the sort [illegible] will bring about the realization [illegible] hopes of those who are most [illegible] interested in the Ocean-to-O[illegible] highway. It is gratifying to [illegible] that the project has received the [illegible] dorsement of the largest auto[illegible] manufacturers in America and [illegible] they are contributing generous[illegible] the project. This matter has [illegible] carefully examined by the best [illegible] cial authorities in America and [illegible] been deemed entirely practical [illegible] but that the West realizes the be[illegible] to be secured through the highway [illegible] a guarantee of the success of [illegible] movement and with the co-operation [illegible] which has been offered in all [illegible] of the United States, there is no [illegible] that the Ocean-to-Ocean highway [illegible] be a reality by the time the Panama Canal opens in San Francisco in [illegible]

AUTO FACTS

ECONOMY

Economy—as far as automobiles are concerned—is too often misunderstood. Low initial cost is not always economy. Most people believe that it is. Service, tire, gas, oil and repair bills; the inconvenience of having your car in the repair shop when you need it, are as essential, or more so, than first cost.

The Marmon

"THE EASIEST RIDING CAR IN THE WORLD"

There is REAL economy in the purchase of a Marmon. There is true economy for you in Marmon construction, Marmon materials, and in the service that every Marmon gives. It is a car that cannot be turned out by the thousands to meet a low initial cost, but must be built and tested piece by piece, until final completion.

FLYING SPARKS OF MOTORDOM.

The Fire Department and [illegible] of Middletown, Pa., are considering the purchase of three automobile trucks.

An improved highway from Milwaukee, Wis., to Green Bay, along the western shore of Lake Michigan, via Port Washington, Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Two Rivers and [illegible] mark, is contemplated by a [illegible] paign put under way recently by [illegible] Milwaukee and Sheboygan [illegible] mobile clubs.

Only 7500 of the 25,000 motor [illegible] in Wisconsin had been registered [illegible] licensed for 1913 at the close of [illegible] ness February 1. While this [illegible] is larger than for the corresponding period a year ago, it is known [illegible] there are hundreds of cars [illegible] which still employ the 1912 [illegible] plates.

The State road maintenance [illegible] advocated by the Tri-City Ocean-to-Ocean Official Highway Association is receiving support in widely [illegible] sections of the country. An effort will be made to have the Iowa Legislature pass an act similar to the [illegible] the New York maintenance bill, and there is talk in Missouri and [illegible] of the same action.

Plans for a permanent home for future automobile shows were practically completed at a meeting of the Automobile Show Committee [illegible] Cleveland, O., recently. The undertaking is to be financed and [illegible] by the Cleveland Automobile [illegible] aided by the show company [illegible] Chamber of Commerce. It is [illegible] to have the auditorium ready by [illegible] uary, 1914.

Dr. Sargent F. Snow, chairman of the Highway Commission of the Automobile Club of Syracuse, N. Y., presented before the Board of Supervisors of Onondaga county the advantages of employing convict labor [illegible] the county construction of State highways, following the progressive [illegible] advanced by County Superintendent Frank E. Bogardus.

Steps have been taken to [illegible] tate what is known as the [illegible] Highway, which runs from San Antonio to Nacogdoches, Tex., a distance of 300 miles. At a meeting held in Austin of a number of men who are interested in this movement [illegible] nary arrangements were made for effecting a permanent organization to carry on the restoration work.

Although I.W.W. pro[illegible] have induced some workmen in [illegible] plant manufacturing Diamond [illegible] Akron, Ohio, to leave their work [illegible] part of a sympathetic strike, the production has not been seriously affected, according to W. J. Voit, [illegible] ager.

"No demands have been made on us by our workmen," he said. [illegible] some of those recently taken [illegible] employ have participated in a sympathetic strike. Large numbers of [illegible] are being turned out every day, however, and we will not be inconvenienced for some time."

ALL ABOUT MOTOR CARS.

Stirred to action by the [illegible] flood of bills in the present Wisconsin Legislature, which relate to the use and operation of motor cars, the various organizations of Milwaukee and Wisconsin representing dealers, manufacturers and private owners have outlined plans for a determined fight against such bills as are deemed [illegible] and indifferent. It is believed the outcome of the conference will be the presentation to the Legislature of an omnibus bill covering every [illegible] angle of the question. The principal demands will be for a uniform [illegible] law; uniform signal law; a [illegible] nual registration and license [illegible] every owner, instead of any [illegible] car owned at any time during the year; jail sentence for taking [illegible] severe penalty for joy-riding; more considerate laws covering the liability of motorists in case of accidents. A bill, already [illegible] which will be made an [illegible] in the proposed omnibus bill, [illegible] to punish theft of a motor car [illegible] purpose by not less than one [illegible] than fifteen years in prison, [illegible] makes the penalty for [illegible] stealing equal to that for [illegible] ing.

SPEED LIMIT [illegible]

One of the most drastic [illegible] bills which has yet appeared [illegible] introduced in the Connecticut Legislature. It provides not only that [illegible] hicle, including electric [illegible] travel faster than thirty [illegible] in open country or twelve [illegible] hour within a city or [illegible] that the driver and any [illegible] such vehicle shall be liable [illegible] of $500, imprisonment for [illegible] or both, for violation of [illegible]

CHAMPIONSHIP GOLF.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

THE Southern California Golf Association, which is as old as any in the country, will celebrate its fourteenth anniversary with this year's championship meeting. It was organized with all due eclat and solemnity in July, 1899, with an imposing list of five golf clubs to give it prestige. Alas, but two of them have survived intact to see to what dimensions the modest little association has grown.

There was the Los Angeles Country Club, of course, with Joseph Sartori and Edward Tufts as its representatives. The club itself was an enlarged windmill at that time and reposed in the wilderness somewhere near Pico and Twentieth! It had been born just two years before in October, 1897.

A "crazy Englishman" named [illegible], who seems to have vanished into nowhere, brought the game here, inspired Edward Tufts and Conde Jones with a desire to become adepts at the queer art. They were real enthusiasts, too, for they made their own course, and built their own greens.

The latter reached dizzy heights of perfection under the skillful plying of pick and hoe. They were six feet in diameter, with a tomato can for the hole, since this kindly receptacle exactly filled the dimensions called for by the rules.

The club was duly formed and charter members got in on the ground floor for $5 a head! And today the Los Angeles Country Club is a luxurious palace with an exclusive membership and the initiation fee alone is [illegible]—when they let you in at all.

The Pasadena Country Club was the next member of the association, represented by John B. Miller. It was then the proud possessor of a nine-hole course which has since been sold to Huntington for the Oak Knoll property and now exists as a very small exclusive tennis club only.

The Riverside Polo and Golf Club was another member, represented by Charles E. Maude, who became the first president of the association, and Robert D. Osburn, who is still one of Riverside's most prominent golfers. But the original club has vanished. Polo has reached the pathetic stage of a "revival" in Riverside today, and the golfers reorganized under the title of the Victoria Golf Club, as we now know it.

Charles E. Maude, that first president, now lives at Del Monte, and is kindly cherished as one of the curiosities of California by the younger generation of golfers when they visit the northern city for the Coast championship, albeit, he has lost none of his skill.

The Santa Monica Golf Club, the [illegible] of them all, has long since been defunct, but the Redlands Golf Club remains intact, healthy, wealthy and exclusive. It was represented by A. [illegible] Sterling, in those far off days at the birth of the association, and he is still one of Redlands's veteran golfers.

Roy B. Jones of Santa Monica was the first treasurer of the association and Joseph Sartori the secretary. Edward Tufts was elected official handicapper with autocratic powers—a position he still holds with iron rule and undisputed sway. This year, too, he was unanimously elected president, so that autocracy, and benevolent despotism may be said to be firmly ensconced in the seats of the mighty.

* * *

Naturally the first thing a newborn association does is to establish a championship and the contest for the Southern California title has been held under its auspices ever since. The original cup, which now reposes at the Los Angeles Country Club, holds five names. Charles Orr was the first champion, with a qualifying score of 168. "Dear old Charlie," is still with us and has come back to form to the point where he has had to be respectfully watched during the last few months.

For the next two years Walter Fairbanks was it. There are fearsome tales of his uncrushable uppishness during those dread days. He carried off all the cups and honors at such tournaments as Redlands, too, and one can imagine with what a dim eye he [illegible] the strutting of the latter day [illegible] and their incredible [illegible]. He won his laurels with 182 and 185 36-hole qualifying scores, and the Macbeths and Armstrongs show up now with 151's and 154's.

[illegible] Whiten was the hero of [illegible], and he too is again on the scene as a force to be reckoned with. In [illegible] Charles Orr again captured the title, this time with 159 qualifying score, about the best then known in this part of the world.

After that the association began to [illegible] in standing prestige. A grand new cup, presented by Nordlinger and Sons and known as the Nordlinger Cup, was instituted and since it has never yet been won three times, it is still in competition. It is now fairly covered with names and little shields that will now have to be appended unless a "third termer" appears this year.

The previous champions are: 1903, Walter Fairbanks; 1904, H. M. Sears; 1905, Walter Fairbanks; 1906, William Frederickson; 1907, Sterling [illegible]; 1908, Paul Hunter; 1909, Paul Hunter; 1910, William Frederickson; 1911, Norman Macbeth; 1912, Erving S. Armstrong.

Of these, Paul Hunter is nationally famous, and W. Fairbanks is still [illegible] but is in Denver. Alden Swift is still playing creditable golf in [illegible]. Sterling C. Lines comes [illegible] every summer, a left-handed player and still a good exponent.

William Frederickson is not only still with us but is a possible third term champion and owner of the cup. When [illegible] the game the judge is a rival to be treated with the utmost respect and consideration.

Norman Macbeth it was who put [illegible] noses out of joint three years ago. His easy grace, combined with his finesse and deadly skill, was quite a revelation when he descended upon California from Pittsburgh, where he had been playing with the national champions, after [illegible] leading parts in the golf [illegible] at home in Great Britain. He won the championship right off the reel and was then regarded as the [illegible] winner of the Coast laurels. [illegible] somehow he has never shown to [illegible] advantage at the Del Monte [illegible] and notwithstanding all the [illegible] attached to his name, he was [illegible] in the semi-finals for the [illegible] California Championship last year by Michael McLaughlin, himself a new comer in our midst.

Erving S. Armstrong became the champion, defeating McLaughlin by a narrow margin, and for a few dizzy months this hero carried all the honors, with three championship titles. Then Jack Neville won the Coast title from him at Del Monte. Tomorrow he will be fighting to retain the club title at Annandale, when the qualifying round is scheduled. On March 12, the third crown will be in jeopardy in the amateur championship event at the Los Angeles Country Club.

The Southern California Golf Association is leaving no stone unturned to make this year's tournament a large and brilliant success. Every player, no matter what his skill, should enter for the competition, since there are handsome prizes for every flight and every defeated eight. The Los Angeles Country Club is making elaborate preparations for the adequate reception of guests and out-of-town visitors will be accommodated in the club bedrooms for as little as 75 cents to $1.25 a night.

The courtesy of the links will be open to entrants, who have definitely made their entry, from tomorrow (Monday,) and the course is in better condition than it ever was.

Entries should be made with Alexander MacKeigan, secretary of the association, at 401 Story building, not later than March 11, or with the secretary of your home club.

BURKE'S Dry Gin will please your guests—they like the best. It is unequaled for refined and delicate flavor.

DUFFY LEWIS TALKS ABOUT CO-EDUCATION.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 28.—Duffy Lewis of the Boston Red Sox, who is visiting here, consented to be interviewed on co-education by the sporting editor of the women's edition of the Daily Palo Alto yesterday. Lewis said:

"On co-education? Say, does that mean a peg to home or a pop fly? I'll have to turn around to the bleachers and look 'em over right now, I guess.

"Some of these little ladies are certainly big league, class double A. What gets me is how some of these bush leaguers in corduroys steal home.

"Why, it would be co-education for me all the time if I thought there was even a chance of getting on with some of the co-eds that live up to the five hundred limit.

"They look as if they could hit the ball a mile, too, and as for speed, they're there a million.

"Say, the man who invented co-education was on his toes and I'd take a chance and say he looked ahead and saw a lot of squeeze plays and home runs.

"I've been making single plays for some time and I've just about decided to try a double."

GOOD AUTO ROADS.

If Colorado will build a good automobile road across the State to the Utah line, along the route of the Midland trail as recently marked out by A. L. Wetgard of the American Automobile Association, Salt Lake City will provide a fund of $1,500,000 to carry the highway across Utah. This challenging proposition has been made to the motorists and other good roads promoters of Colorado by President B. F. Redman of the Salt Lake City Automobile Club, who has been visiting in Denver.

Regal

Advantages of the Underslung

The Seven Regal Reasons

FIRST—An Underslung is the safest car. Its construction—the frame below the axle—brings the weight of the car nearer the road, yet allows full and even clearance. "Turning turtle" becomes an impossibility—skidding a rarity.

SECOND—Each Underslung has a "different" appearance. All the Regal Underslungs are attractive cars to look upon. Their design embodies graceful lines, a low rakish appearance that is pleasing to the eye and the utmost in correct proportion. Every owner is proud of the car he drives. Dealers are frequently led to a sale through the appearance of the car.

THIRD—Their spring construction makes Regal Underslungs easy riding cars. The separate "halves" of each spring vibrate at different rates—overcoming the violent bounce. The flatness of each spring adds to its lateral strength and relieves the side sway.

FOURTH—Regal Underslungs are economical on tires and in gasoline consumption. The rebound of all springs is upward, thus relieving the strain on tire casings. Low suspension means a straight line drive, and power developed in the motor is not wasted in the universal joints. Regal cars average between fifteen and twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline.

FIFTH—The Underslung principle is a tried-out principle. It has been used for years on rapid moving conveyances and is now far beyond the experimental stage in the manufacture of automobiles. Eight successful firms are now engaged in the building of Underslung cars.

SIXTH—We know how to design, build and finish Underslungs. In the field of the moderate priced car of this type we were pioneers and are today the largest manufacturers of this kind of car.

SEVENTH—Regal Underslungs are unusually good cars. Their dependable construction and conservative price makes them worthy your careful consideration. If intending the purchase of a car we ask you to learn more about the Underslung construction and Regal cars. See these cars on display in Los Angeles.

At the service of those who care to use them are special salesmen in our local organization who will be pleased to answer further questions about the Underslung construction. These Regal Reasons are only seven of many which we will be pleased to give you. Our organization awaits your call by phone or in person.

At It Again.

VENICE AND LOS ANGELES TO BEGIN SEASON HERE.

All Coast League Games to Start Out on First Day of April for Thirty Weeks Grind—Schedule Is Practically the Same as That of Previous Season—One Game at Venice.

RUN the vacuum cleaner over your eye-glasses. That annual and interesting document, the schedule of the Coast league, is herewith presented for the season of 1913.

The schedule is to baseball what the timetable is to the railroad, and without it you are liable to get left. What live fan wants to be caught napping, and overlook a thoroughly good baseball date?

Having perused it, take it and paste it in your Paris panel for future reference.

Briefly dissecting the document, it is found that the season opens on Tuesday, April 1 (and that's no joke,) and winds up in a blaze of glory with a double-header on Sunday, October, 26.

From April 1 to October 26 is some time. It represents all the difference between the bud of spring and the sere and yellow leaf of autumn, and gives us thirty weeks of perpetual and palpitating baseball.

HOME TEAMS OPEN HERE.

Venice will open in Los Angeles, with the Angels as the home team. This, friends, is sure to be some opener. It would be impossible to provide a greater attraction. The Tigers and Angels have not opened here since 1910. Even in those provincial days there was some crowd on hand. This time the old park will be loaded to the limit, with the overflow hanging onto the fenders.

Oakland, as usual, will open in Sacramento, and Portland will engage San Francisco on the latter's grounds. We wouldn't swap attractions with either of them. Give us the Angels and Tigers every day in the week, except on Monday, and twice on Sunday, when it comes to this opening business.

Ambling along through seven months of statistics, Oakland is found closing the season with Los Angeles in this city, the Tigers in San Francisco and Portland in Sacramento, which is all very satisfactory if the two local teams happen to be well up in the race at that distant writing.

Several months is a lot of agony, but we are game, and will endure it to the best of our ability.

SMALL DIFFERENCE.

The schedule does not differ materially from the general run of schedules in the Coast league. There is about only one pattern which will fit a six-club circuit. Of course, the alignment of the clubs for the opening dates is different, but that cuts no ice.

The main thing is to get the season started. After that it can take care of itself. There will be some jumps from here to Portland, and vice versa, but these have been reduced to the minimum.

There are the usual number of holiday double-headers, but that can't be helped. Anyway, the people of California have been trained up to this holiday business. It is a great industry in this State.

Venice draws the local July 4 date, one of the best on the whole calender, with Oakland as the piece de resistance. Los Angeles will be in San Francisco that day, and will make just as much money as if it stayed at home, because the receipts are pooled on holidays. This arrangement gives the lowliest an even break with the loftiest in a financial way.

Each team will play every other team in the league six series, which is some baseball, when it is considered that the series in this circuit average slightly more than seven games.

This gives each club fifteen weeks on its own ground, and fifteen on the road. However, as a majority of the Los Angeles-Venice games will be played on the Washington Park grounds, both of the local clubs are in reality at home eighteen weeks out of thirty.

That much for the advantages of continuous baseball.

STANFORD GOSSIP.

[Special Correspondence of The Times.]

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Feb. 21.—The Women's Press Club issued yesterday's edition of the Daily Palo Alto. Miss Lois Baker, '13, of Los Angeles, was editor-in-chief.

Stanford has been invited to enter a team in the Missouri Valley conference track meet, which is to be held at St. Louis, May 31. The meet will be held in the stadium that was built for the Olympic games in 1904.

The new boathouse on Lake Lagunita has been completed.

While some of the Stanford track men are competing with U.S.C. at Los Angeles, March 15, the stay-at-homes will engage in a triangular meet with St. Mary's College and Palo Alto High School.

A. H. Morosco, '16, of Long Beach; P. D. Nowell, '13; A. J. Hettinger, Jr. '16, and A. F. Coyle, '15, have been chosen to represent Stanford in the triangular debates with Oregon and Washington this spring.

Spring Rugby practice is being arranged for by Capt.-elect "Jimmy" Thoburn, '13. An interclass Rugby series is to be played for the Timothy Hopkins trophy.

And CHALMERS cars are good cars, since the first Chalmers car in 1907 there has never been a failure,—never a bad year.

"CHALMERS" means quality in a car—and you get more than is apparent on the surface—you get that hidden beauty of workmanship which adds value to the car in after years.

running from the start to the finish.

Ralph de Palma comes next in order. The man who drove the Mercedes into such sensational victories last year would be one of the contenders. Such a race would call De Palma, no matter whether the Western Automobile Associat or the Automobile Association of America gave its sanction. The Italian would probably drive a Mercedes, but he would also have a wide choice.

Ralph Mulford could not turn a deaf ear to the siren call of the big speed battle. It would be a question as to which car Ralph would drive. I think a Lozier. His victories with that car have been decisive and though he has been mounted on other machines lately I think Mulford would return to his first love.

Caley Bragg would certainly start in such a race. He, of course, would pilot a Fiat. The same car with which Bragg won the grand prize and took second place in the Santa Monica road race is available and the millionaire, who has been out of racing since the tragic death of David Bruce Brown, just before the grand prize, which Caley won, would be one of the possible first-place winners.

Bob Burman is another driver who would shine in this big race. He is sixth in the list, but is also a possible first-place driver in a road race. Burman's best work has been done in the straightaway mile, for which distance he holds the world's record, but he would be a likely entrant against the world's best and would be one of a sextette of great drivers who would make a great race.

There are many other drivers who would start. Some of our own men would enter. Harvey Herrick would be lured back into the game with a Case under him. Bert Dingley would listen to the call and pilot a National. Earle Cooper would start with a Stutz. Joe Nikrent would, of course, be in the lists with a Case. There would be at least a score of good drivers who would start even with the field of world's record breakers.

Such a race would call for a prize of at least $20,000. This purse would mean that we would have every driver of note on the starting line in New York. The course would be laid out to include Los Angeles and the drivers could be watched from the second they started until the winning car went sweeping into the entrance of the world's fair grounds at the Golden Gate.

AVIATORS TO FLY AT FAIRFAX TODAY.

What promises to be a most interesting exhibition in sensational aeroplane flying is scheduled for this afternoon at Fairfax Park, between Inglewood and Hawthorne. John Guy Gilpatrick, in a sixty-horse-power Sloane Deperdussin monoplane, will skim through the air with Miss Margaret Stahl, a pretty miss of 20, as his passenger.

Young Gilpatrick is only 17 years old. He is the youngest aviator now in the game. The youngster will try to smash the American passenger-carrying record of 5000 feet and will soar into the clouds with the daring girl who says she is not afraid to make the attempt with the boy aviator at the wheel of the monoplane.

In addition to this there will be a flight from Fairfax Park to Dominguez field by Aviator Bonney and Gilpatrick. Bonney will fly his ninety-mile an hour Sloane-Caudron monoplane. The flight is scheduled for 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Prof. H. La V. Twining, president of the Aero Club of California, will officially check the flyers and any record made will be sanctioned by the club president, who will have instruments ready to record the work of the aviators.

AT LAST A PERFECT AUTOMOBILE ALARM.

Motorists have said that if an auto alarm could be built, one that would produce a soft, courteous and yet sufficient warning and thereby do away with the fierce Buzz and Squawk of the motor-driven horn, that such an alarm would revolutionize the auto signal industry. After three years of experimenting comes the first mechanically perfect auto alarm—The Big 4 Exhaust Horn—the horn that has no ravenous appetite for batteries, nor necessitates the use of a flimsy bulb in its operation. Ask your dealer to show it to you. If he can't, we will.

No Need of Tire Trouble On Electric Cars

So far as electric pleasure cars are concerned, the problem of tires has been solved.

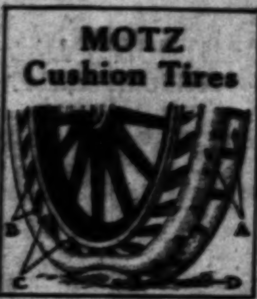
Punctures, blowouts, dangerous skidding and tire repair bills can be forgotten.

You can go any place with your electric and stay as long as you please without the slightest fear of tire trouble.

All due to Motz Cushion Tires, now adopted by every leading maker of electric cars.

Easy-Riding Tires

Unlike common, hard, solid rubber tires, Motz Cushion Tires are easy-riding. On electric cars, they give the utmost comfort to the occupants and also protect the delicate mechanical parts of the car from bumps and jars. The double, notched treads (A in picture) prevent skidding and distribute the weight to the sides. The sides are undercut (see B), which allows free action of slantwise bridges (see C). These bridges are elastic. They give and yield like the air in a pneumatic tire. Note D in the picture, showing shock-absorbing qualities when tire runs over a stone.



Cost More Than Some Tires

Motz Cushion Tires contain more costly rubber than the ordinary pneumatic tire and cost a little more. But they are far less expensive in the end.

Guaranteed 10,000 Miles

Each set is specifically guaranteed for 10,000 miles—two years. That's almost double the usual tire guarantee.

1,000% Increase in Two Years

The use of these tires has multiplied just ten-fold in two years. The great majority of electric car owners use them and all leading makers of electrics include them as standard equipment.

Send for Book

Motz Cushion Tires can be easily applied to any standard clincher, universal quick-detachable or demountable rim.

You'll regret it later if you buy an electric, or buy tires for an electric, without first knowing these tires. Send a postal today for our latest book. Then see if you know any other tire that's nearly so dependable, so durable, so economical and so easy-riding. Remember, the right choice of tires more than doubles the pleasure of motoring. Send specifications—name of car, model, size of rims, etc.

The turned-up brim is caught at the left side and black velvet in a wired bow is the only trimming placed at the back. This boat-shaped hat is becoming to a low arrangement of the hair. There should never be a wide space at the back.

The sail trimming is very decided in the spring millinery. A taupe model has a rolled brim. From the top of the crown a loop of green moire ribbon, wired, mounts very high at the side. Green silk leaves and old-rose swirled flowers form an ornament for the brim.

The story of spring hats would be incomplete without a plumed model. Here it is in a taupe hemp with a large high crown and a rolled narrow brim. A band of deep-violet velvet defines the crown. At one side is attached a lavender plume, the underside of the fronds on view and the full ends of the French plume curling over the brim at the back. The line of adjustment is the cavalier line, always becoming.

This arrangement is not iron-bound. Any unusual line of the feather, quill or fantaisie that shows a knack in the arrangement and hints of the indefinable charm which the Parisienne calls "chic" is in style.

Sing a song of sixpence, six dollars or sixty dollars—the millinery result will be the same if you will first listen to the accepted keynote and trim your hat accordingly. The important thing is to grasp the spring style features, not to forget your own type of beauty and to place a stylish and becoming hat on your head.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

TO WHOM BELONG THE WAGES OF THE CHILD?

A LETTER comes to me which compels my earnest thought, and which I would like to lay before our constituency. In fact, the writer of the note appeals to your judgment for help in the solution of a problem. Here is what he says:

"Can some member of the Corner make a suggestion regarding the rights of children in their homes? Should they give all their wages to their parents or should they only pay their board? Our family consists of parents and five children, three boys and two girls. They don't own anything, not even a house, and are much in debt. They all claim to have done me a great favor by keeping me in school until I was 19. I have obtained a position and get a great deal more money than the others, and they expect me to pay all the family debts. Is this not most unjust—to expect me to pay debts I did not altogether incur? The girls bring all their money home, but it belongs to their sex to be unselfish.

"The question is, Would they all appreciate me if I was to help some? Should not each one look out for number one? I want to save my money for myself. They can live just as they did before I went to work. However, I wait your opinion.

"YOUNG MAN."

I wonder if you will understand my attitude of mind when I say that one of the first queries which presented itself to me in connection with this screed was: "What would have become of the youth and his stay at school until nineteen years of age if the family had followed his theory of each looking out for number one?"

Perhaps you do not share my impression that the writer of this note is another illustration of the fact you frequently see exemplified that the member of the household for whom most sacrifices are made is usually a miracle of selfishness. He probably has justice on his side to a certain degree, but his zeal for his own interests is so obvious as to rob us of sympathy for him. Apparently he is not only number one in his own esteem, but several other numerals as well.

Opens Important Question.

Can't you imagine how he could have put his case so he would have won the good will of those to whom he appeals? Suppose he had said that he was anxious to get ahead and make a place for himself in the world, but that appreciating the self-denial his family must have displayed in order to let him have a little longer period of schooling he wished to do something for them in return. With this end in view he would like the opinion of the constituency as to the proportion of his income he was justified in putting aside for himself. The expenses of the family were heavy, their debts a burden he longed to lighten so far as he could, he was eager to do his full share towards the home life. Such a presentation of the case would at once have gained him the friendly feeling of all the "Cornerites." As it is, I am afraid we are forced to compare him rather unfavorably with the girls "who bring all their money home," and to ask if it is not within the bounds of possibility that they, too, would like to spend money for themselves, even if "it belongs to their sex to be unselfish."

I shall be a good deal interested to receive the estimate of "Young Man" from my readers and to learn if they agree with me or differ from me in my position with regard to him. At the same time, whatever we may think of him personally, it cannot be denied that he opens up a very important question and one on which there is room for a number of varying opinions. How much right has a young man or a young woman, a boy or a girl to his or her individual earnings, and what is the just claim of the parents upon the pay of the children?

We all know that in some sections of society it is taken for granted that the labor of the children is an asset of the parents. The latter look forward to the time when the boys and girls will be able to work and claim the poor youngsters' earnings as a matter of course.

A Messenger Boy Tragedy.

A few years ago I had a rather touching illustration of this. It was just before Christmas that a messenger boy came to my home one evening with a telegram, departed with his receipt, and reappeared half an hour later in a state of anguish of mind. He had lost his pay—$5—and had come back to see if he could have dropped it there. We were his last resort, for he had inquired at every other possible place before coming to us. The bill was nowhere to be found and the small boy—a very small boy he was, too—forgot what shreds of manliness he possessed and lifted up his voice and wept.

"Me mudder'll beat me when I come home widout me pay!" he sobbed. "Sure, I'm afraid to go home!"

I have said he was small, just about the size of some of our own little lads who had been tucked in bed for a couple of hours while this wee chap was trotting about earning his living. We held a council of war, and after taking the precaution to telephone to the office and verify the boy's story we made up a collection which replaced the lost $5 and put a little interest with it. One of our party interrogated him.

"Are you sure all this money goes to your mother?" she asked. "Don't you keep part of it for yourself?"

"Not on your life I don't!" was the prompt response. "Me mudder would lick the stuffin' outen me if I didn't give it all to her!"

Not so poetical as some of the tales in which the infant hero is described as nobly supporting his starving parents but probably much truer to life!

In something the same line was a story told me once by a wealthy New Englander who prided himself on having made his own way in the world.

"I asked my father to give me my time when I was 18," he said. "But he wouldn't do it—made me hand over all the money I earned by hiring to a farmer in the neighborhood, until I was 21. Then he gave me my 'freedom suit' of clothes and turned me loose. I never forgave him for treating me as he did—but, after all, he had a perfect right to do it. He owned my work until I was of age!"

Which Side Do You Take?

There are people today who have the same view. On the other hand, there are those who hold the scriptural statement as law—that the parents should provide for the children, and not the children for the parents—and take the stand that the children are under no monetary obligation whatsoever to the father and mother, but have a full right to anything they can earn by the work of their heads or hands.

Which side do you take?

I asked a man this question while I was pondering over the letter with which I started this talk.

"I feel I owe everything to my parents," he said, promptly. "They brought me into the world, fed, clothed, and educated me, gave me a good home and affectionate companionship, and nothing I can do for them in return would begin to repay them. I shall always be in their debt."

His wife broke in protestingly.

"I don't agree with you at all," she cried. "I don't think I am under the least obligation to my parents for 'borning' me. They didn't bring me here for my pleasure but their own, and after they had me the least they could do in common decency was to see that I was well cared for and brought up properly. Why should I feel myself in their debt?"

Her remarks sounded far less filial and amiable than her husband's, but I happened to know her for one of the most devoted and self-sacrificing of daughters, who counted nothing a burden she could do for her father and mother. I made a remark to this effect. Her retort was quick.

"I do that for love, not from a sense of duty. I care so much for them that I would give up anything in the world to make them happy—but it's not from any old idea of obligation or paying them back for [illegible] they have done for me."

She and her husband both arrived [illegible] same goal, but they came to it by [illegible] ways. And, after all, what matter[illegible] route so that the end is the same? [illegible] difference does it make if a child [illegible] tributes to the parent's support from [illegible] or from duty?

Let's Talk the Subject Over.

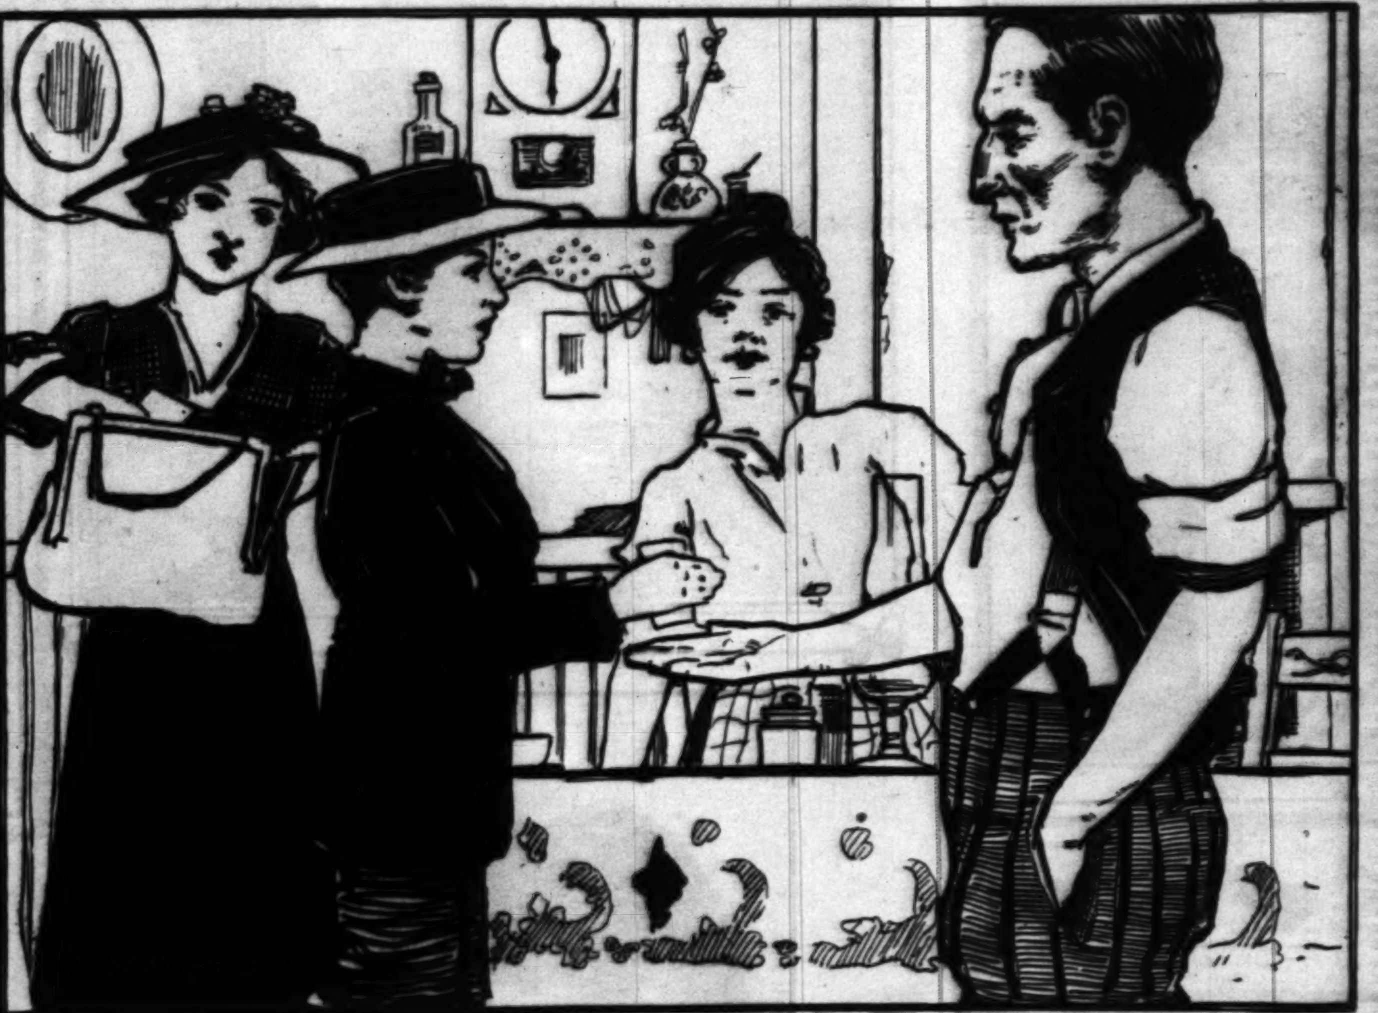
Yet this does not altogether [illegible] question of my "young man" [illegible] ant. Have the parents the right to the [illegible] dren's wages as the mother of the [illegible] messenger boy and the father of the [illegible] farmer lad evidently felt they had? [illegible] a fair thing to take a child, either [illegible] girl, from school at the earliest [illegible] and set him or her to work as a [illegible] support for the family? In the eyes of [illegible] law the minor's earnings may belong [illegible] parent, but is it justice or [illegible] force this? How much shall the [illegible] daughters be expected to contribute [illegible] running of the home? Board [illegible] but is that enough?

Of course we all know cases [illegible] young people of the family have, [illegible] compulsion, assumed the burden [illegible] hold, taking care of the parents [illegible] invalided or in any way incapable [illegible] self-support, bringing up and ed[illegible] younger children, foregoing homes [illegible] own for the sake of the families [illegible] they were born. The legal aspect [illegible] case does not affect these workers [illegible] or the other. They simply see [illegible] consider their duty and do it, and [illegible] resent the suggestion that they [illegible] fairly dealt with in any respect.

Also we know instances where [illegible] no way outside of pauperism for [illegible] dren of the family to avoid [illegible] their earnings to the common [illegible] household. Illness, bad habits, [illegible] employment for the older members [illegible] family, have tied a millstone [illegible] necks of the younger inmates of [illegible] Necessity in such cases knows [illegible] the burden bearers take the lot [illegible] upon them not from choice but [illegible] they must.

How do you of our constituency [illegible] the subject? Are the children [illegible] their duty when they do this and [illegible] more than the parents have a right [illegible] pect of them, or are they in a [illegible] tyrs to the family tie? Have the [illegible] and mothers a right to ask their [illegible] girls to go to work in order to [illegible] their share of the family funds, or [illegible] unfair advantage to take of their [illegible] Is there more claim upon the boys [illegible] girls, or vice versa? Should the [illegible] tion towards the old home be [illegible] after the children are of age, or [illegible] cease when their minority ends?

This is a matter which interests [illegible] are wage earners and who have [illegible] ers in their families. It is a [illegible] which there are sure to be diverse [illegible] ions. Let me have some of these [illegible] the subject over together as [illegible] we have done with others of [illegible] tance.



"In some sections of society it is taken for granted that the labor of the child is an asset of the parents."

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a showing in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them.

Marion Harland.

"I SEND with this my attempt to answer the genealogical riddle published some time since and signed 'H. S. N.' If I can convince him that the ties of blood which bind him so closely to the young woman in question should prevent his entering into matrimony with her in any state my faulty effort will not have been in vain.

"As Iowa is my native state, I am glad to say that she joined the 'righteous league' in [illegible]. Louisiana was left out of the list you gave, but unless I am in error I think she has belonged to the league for some time.

"Let me thank the 'mistress of the manse' and her efficient band of helpers for the comfort and good cheer I have derived from the cozy corner of their living room. I am an exile from home at present and unable to contribute towards the good work, but I trust I shall not always be 'a looker-on in Vienna.'

I. V. T."

Some of you may have forgotten the problem proposed by H. S. N. For their benefit I repeat it:

"Can cousins marry and in what states? My mother's mother married twice. My mother is a daughter of my grandmother's second husband. My aunt is a daughter by my grandmother's first husband. My grandmother's two husbands were brothers. Now what relation am I to my aunt's daughter? Can I marry her in all states? I await patiently an answer. Of course, I am a young man."

My reply gave the list of the states in which marriage between cousins is prohibited and I referred the involved question of the actual relationship to our readers with a genealogical bent.

A Double Relationship.

Thus much in explanation. Here is the solution offered by "I. V. T.":

"The mother of H. S. N. and the mother of the girl he wishes to marry are half sisters.

"Their fathers being brothers, they are cousins as well as sisters.

"The girl and himself, being children of sisters, are first cousins.

"Their mothers, being cousins, the girl and himself are second cousins also (or is it third cousins?)."

According to this the girl and the young man are both first cousins and second cousins, which adds to the deadly closeness of the relationship, should marriage be contracted between them. By the long list I gave of states in which such marriages are unlawful, some idea can be gained of the estimation in which bonds of this sort are held by thoughtful men.

Physicians have for years uttered warnings against marriages between cousins, and the memory of each of us can afford harrowing illustrations of the risk of such alliances. Insanity, scrofula, tuberculosis, imbecility are only a few of the woes which follow in the track of marriages between those near of kin. They can offer no excuse of ignorance, in this enlightened day, for venturing to call down the diseases I have mentioned, and other maladies as well, upon the heads of their children and their children's children.

I trust I may have the coöperation of all intelligent men and women in this small effort to protest against the iniquity of marriages of this class. I shall be glad to learn of any similar attempts which have proved successful or of illustrations to reinforce my position.

Beef a la Mode with Raisins.

"Will you be so kind as to let me know how to cook beef à la mode with raisins? My husband has eaten it and likes it so well that he wishes me to make it, but I don't know how. I would also like to know how to make cottage pudding with a good sauce and just how to mix it, for my husband is fond of that, too.

MRS. VON K."

BEEF A LA MODE WITH RAISINS—Cut a quarter of a pound of salt pork into strips and fry them in a saucepan, with a sliced onion, in good beef dripping. Lay a compact round of beef upon them, add a pint of boiling water, cover, and cook ten minutes to the pound, turning the beef three times during the process. Take up the beef and lay it in a dripping pan, dredge it with flour, baste it with its own gravy once, and leave it in an oven where it will keep hot without cooking while you strain the gravy left in the pot. Take the grease from the top, thicken it with browned flour, season with pepper and a little salt, if it needs this, and stir in a teaspoonful of white sugar, a heaping tablespoonful of Sultana raisins you have washed and picked over, and the same quantity of blanched almonds cut into strips. Boil gently three minutes, put the beef in a dish, and pour the gravy over it and around it.

COTTAGE PUDDING—One cup powdered sugar, one cup sweet milk, one tablespoon butter, two eggs beaten light, the whites and yolks separately, saltspoon salt, three cups flour or enough to make a good batter, like cake, sifted with two teaspoons baking powder. Rub the butter and the sugar together until smooth; add the beaten yolks, then the milk, the salt, the flour, and the whipped whites. Bake in a buttered mold in a steady oven until a straw run into it comes out clean; turn the loaf out on a dish. For a sauce beat a tablespoon of butter into a cup of powdered sugar, add half a cup of boiling water gradually, and flavor with lemon juice to taste or with sherry, and, if you like, a pinch of cinnamon.

To Get Rid of Rats.

"Some one has asked how to get rid of rats. Here is the remedy: Fifty-five per cent of wheat flour, 25 per cent pulverized sugar, 20 per cent white arsenic; mix all together well with care, doing it indoors and out of the wind or draft. Be careful no children get hold of it. Keep the chickens and the dog or cat away from it. After having mixed the stuff put it in saucers, a tablespoon to a portion, and set it any place where you are troubled with rats. Within a fortnight you will see the result. Don't worry over the possible odor, for there will be none. Most of the rats seek water and go out to get it, but none escapes. The above dose is not cruel or troublesome, but you must be careful in handling it. You may be sure of the best results, as I have proved by using it over twenty years and making my bread and butter by mixing and selling it.

"THE SCOTCH CHEMIST."

Let me reiterate the caution of our chemist friend that you will not leave the least portion of this poison where the children or pet animals can get hold of it. Not a week passes that we do not see accounts of poisonings that have taken place through carelessness or ignorance. The rats are undoubtedly a pest, and I am glad to put in your way any method of getting rid of them, but you pay a dear price for relief from them if there is even a possibility of any casualty from neglect to put the stuff meant to destroy the rats where human beings or harmless animals cannot get hold of it.

Training in Domestic Science.

"Since domestic science as household economics has been introduced into club work I have made it a constant study and for five years have used every effort towards putting such branches into our school curriculum. Domestic science has become a study in the schools in all the largest towns in Arkansas and in a few years it will be in all our grades. I am working at present to get a chair of domestic science in our state university. The State Federation of Women's Clubs has never succeeded in getting this branch of home making where it would do the greatest good.

"The art of cooking is a necessary part of the education of the homemakers. You know that. I wish you would in some way put forth a suggestion that a thorough study of domestic science would give the training necessary to efficiency and thus add your influence to the work we are trying to do.

MRS. J. B."

I entirely approve of training girls in any and every branch of domestic science, and any influence that may be mine I am happy to exert, if it will do any good. I would like to know through other workers in this line and those interested in it the practical effects of the study in the homes to which the girls go from school and college.

Wants a Parlor Stove.

ONE-HALF of this lovely design is sufficient to make an appeal to my circle of embroiderers today. At a glance this grape design suggests many possibilities. First of all, there is the use of punched work in the oval pieces around the edge. Then if you do not care to spend all your time punching, you can use heavy lace or figured net for the medallions, setting them in and buttonholing around them before cutting out the linen.

The plain linen can be filled in in various ways. French knots are always good and never will lose favor with us. Darned stitch is also a good filler, and the double dash, run in parallel lines with one white and one colored thread, has found a warm place in many hearts.

Darned stitches in both horizontal and vertical directions make a good basket weave for solid places. Whatever method you take, I am sure will contribute to the effect of this pretty design.

If you choose punched work, you should be sure to work the [illegible] in buttonhole stitches first and then to punch the material quite close to the edge. The tapestry needle or a three-sided needle is good for punching. Do not pull the goods, and work from one dot across to the next; then pass the needle underneath diagonally and proceed until you have a row of short stitches one under the other. Work all holes in this direction first. Then complete the squares by working in the opposite direction. You should put the needle through each hole eight times before the punched work is completed.

The grapes look very well worked in solid stitch. Pad in one direction first, using darning cotton, and then work with soft mercerized cotton in the opposite direction. You will find that the solid work is a lovely contrast for the outline work, which I would suggest for the leaves.

After working the grapes, outline in heavy thread the leaves and stems. Couching stitch is another effective method. Heavy silk or mercerized thread can be used. Hold it with the left hand and follow the outlining of the pattern, catching it down by small cross stitches. If done with pale green, the effect is fine.

The leaves can also be filled in with French knots. A white outline in couching stitch held down by pale green thread and filled in with pale green knots, makes as effective a leaf as you can ask.

Work the stems in stem stitch or in heavy outline with a ladder stitch between. This is merely a crossbar of double thread caught on the sides.

Pad the edge with darning cotton in long loose stitches or in a loose chain stitch of a double strand. Another method is to use about 12 or 15 strands of darning cotton just as you would couching thread, and hold it as you buttonhole over it, going around the edge.

If you can add a piece of lace with a grape design in its weave, you will make the beauty assurance doubly sure, and if time be at your disposal, work over the grapes in the lace with solid stitches. This gives a completeness that is gratifying.

I have seen grapes and leaves worked with [illegible]

One half of Design

ONE-HALF of this lovely design is sufficient to make an appeal to my circle of embroiderers today. At a glance this grape design suggests many possibilities. First of all, there is the use of punched work in the oval pieces around the edge. Then if you do not care to spend all your time punching, you can use heavy lace or figured net for the medallions, setting them in and buttonholing around them before cutting out the linen.

The plain linen can be filled in in various ways. French knots are always good and never will lose favor with us. Darned stitches in both horizontal and vertical directions make a good basket weave for solid places. Whatever method you take, I am sure will contribute to the effect of this pretty design.

If you choose punched work, you should be sure to work the outer line in buttonhole stitches first and then to punch the material quite close to the edge. The tapestry needle or a three-sided needle is good for punching. Do not pull the goods, and work from one dot across to the next; then pass the needle underneath diagonally and proceed until you have a row of short stitches one under the other. Work all holes in this direction first. Then complete the squares by working in the opposite direction. You should put the needle through each hole eight times before the punched work is completed.

The grapes look very well worked in solid stitch. Pad in one direction first, using darning cotton, and then work with soft mercerized cotton in the opposite direction. You will find that the solid work is a lovely contrast for the outline work, which I would suggest for the leaves.

After working the grapes, outline in heavy thread the leaves and veins. Couching stitch is another effective method. Heavy silk or mercerized thread can be used. Hold it with the left hand and follow the outlining of the pattern, catching it down by small cross stitches. If done with pale green, the effect is fine.

The leaves can also be filled in with French knots. A white outline in couching stitch held down by pale green thread and filled in with pale green knots, makes as effective a leaf as you can ask.

Work the stems in stem stitch or in heavy outline with a ladder stitch between. This is merely a crossbar of double thread caught on the sides.

Pad the edge with darning cotton in long loose stitches or in a loose chain stitch of a double strand. Another method is to use about 12 or 16 strands of darning cotton just as you would couching thread, and hold it as you buttonhole over it, going around the edge.

If you can add a piece of lace with a grape design in its weave, you will make the beauty assurance doubly sure, and if time be at your disposal, work over the grapes in the lace with solid stitches. This gives a completeness that is gratifying.

I have seen grapes and leaves worked with outline in buttonholing around lace. The ovals which the designer has marked for punched work were left in the linen and worked in French knots. The lacy border of fruit and leaves was very attractive in the finished centerpiece.

You can do this in colors if you are tired of white work. Pale green for the grapes and a darker silvery green for the leaves make a fine combination with white and green used in the punched work and white for the scalloped edge.

Purples in two or three shades with pale green are good, too, and when I mention the stencil brush it is hard to stop my story. If you decide to use this, trace the pattern on stencil board, which you can purchase at 5 cents a sheet at the art needlework department of any large store, or at a store that sells artists' materials. Use a carbon paper between this sheet and the stencil cardboard, and after the design is transferred cut out the leaves and grapes with a sharp knife. Leave the central vein, about one-eighth of an inch in the cardboard.

Paint through the openings on tan or gray linen with a stiff brush, using one color at a time. By that I mean paint all the grapes first, then rinse the brush thoroughly and use the green for all the leaves.

Place a blotting pad under the linen to absorb all extra paint. Stencil dyes or paints, with full directions for mixing and applying, are purchasable at the places above mentioned.

After the design is dry, outline it with rope silk or coarse mercerized thread. A beautiful result will be yours for some very pleasant work.

To the clever woman a centerpiece design need not be a centerpiece. It can be transferred to the front of a blouse, a lingerie hat, a parasol section. Trace any motif that appeals to you and combine the leaves and bunches of grapes in other forms, twisting and curving to suit the space to be filled.

I never confine one design to the original form. There is always another way to use it, and it is wasteful, in my opinion, to put a pretty pattern away.

I am sure that you will like this centerpiece. Try it and let me know.

Sets for the Dresser

EVERY woman who admires daintiness will admire a pretty dresser set, consisting of the scarf and pincushion to match.

If possible, have these embroidered in colors to match the draperies used in the room. When it is impossible to know the personal taste of the person for whom the gift is being made, white is used, and it is always lovely.

A charming set shows a border of empire wreaths formed of small roses joined with festoons. Three shades of pink are used for the roses, the darkest tone being used in the center and the lighter shades for the outer edge. Pad the bowknots lengthwise with darning cotton and cover with white or pale green silk, using stitches in the opposite direction. If desired, the center of the wreaths can be done in punched work. Neatly hem or buttonhole the edges and border with a two-inch edging of cluny lace.

The pincushion should have one wreath for the center motif and a spray of tiny roses gracefully arranged on either side. Sew a frill of the lace around the pincushion and attach dainty rosettes of ribbon to the four corners.

Another pretty dresser scarf is made of white linen cut to fit the top of the dresser. The edge is bordered with butterflies, three across the front and one at either end. Pad the bodies and the edge of the wings with darning cotton, lengthwise, and cover with mercerized cotton, running the stitches in the opposite direction. Fill in the center of the wings with punched work. Pad the scalloped edge and buttonhole stitch over this. If desired, whipstitch an edging of cluny lace two inches wide to the sides of the scarf.

The pincushion is made with one butterfly in the center and with the edges scalloped and buttonhole stitched. If lace is used on the scarf, the pincushion should correspond. Rosettes of ribbon adorn each of the four corners.

These dresser sets make attractive gifts for the girl who goes away to school or for your small daughter who has her own room and loves pretty accessories. It requires very little time to make a dresser set and it adds greatly to the appearance of a room.

THE CORSAGE BOUQUET

PARIS this season has marked with her approval the corsage bouquet of small fruits fashioned of brightly colored silks. Orange and red are the favored colors, and smart women wear these small compact bunches tucked in at the girdle, pinned to the stole of fur or fastened at the side of the hat.

These corsage bouquets can be made by the woman who knows how to sew, in this manner:

Purchase a piece of silk the desired color, a vivid cardinal red for the mountain-ash berries. From this cut circular pieces an inch in diameter and run a drawstring around the edge. Roll a piece of cotton the size of a berry and fasten it to a green silk-covered wire long enough for a stem. Place the cotton in the center of the silk, which you have gathered on the edge, and draw the thread tightly about it, fastening it securely to the wire stem. When you have made enough berries arrange them in a cluster with artificial leaves made of green velvet. These can be purchased at the milliner's.

Orange-colored berries fashioned of velvet are shown among the imported corsage bouquets and can be duplicated by substituting orange-colored velvet for the red silk. A cluster of these contributes an artistic dash of color to the black, white, brown or gold gown.

In the millinery, wild clusters of apples are frequently used to adorn modish hats, and if you admire them, they are easily fashioned.

Select silk of a green, red or yellow hue and from this cut circular pieces 2½ inches in diameter. Around the edge run a drawstring. To a piece of green-covered wire attach a ball of cotton large enough to fill the circular piece of silk. Over this tightly draw the silk covering and fasten firmly to the stem; then draw the needle through the center of the apple and, using the point of the shears, punch a hole deep enough to insert a clove. Between the prongs of the clove draw several strands of thread and draw them tightly enough to make a dent in the apple. This produces a natural effect and should not be forgotten when fashioning the apples. Cover the wire stems by winding a narrow bias strip of green silk about the stem. After the apples are completed arrange them in clusters with green leaves. They add just the correct touch to the turban of fur, velvet or straw.

If you desire to present a friend with a birthday remembrance or a little gift of appreciation, make a corsage bouquet and place it in a miniature bandbox. These can be purchased in the millinery department of any large shop. They cost from 15 cents upward and add greatly to the appearance of the gift. Fasten the lid on with ribbon, tying a flat bow on the top.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the pattern before you to any material before working.

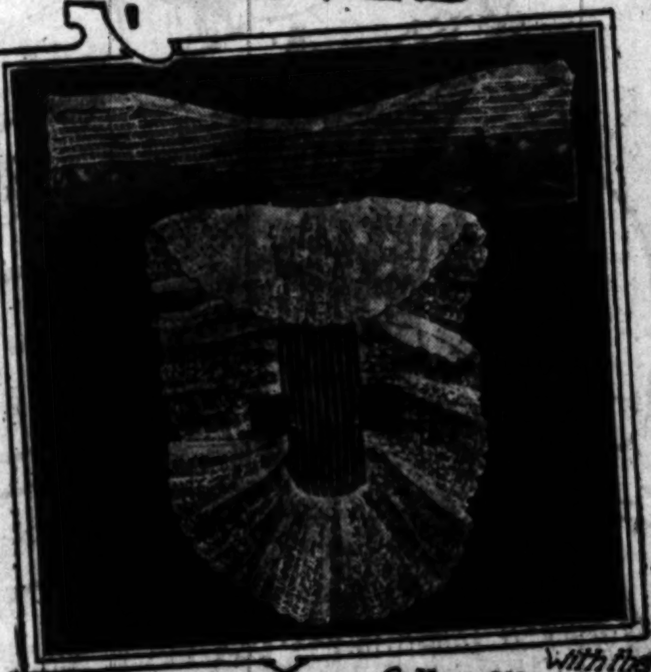
Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric. The strong light behind will make it plain.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked. This method is successful on heavy material.

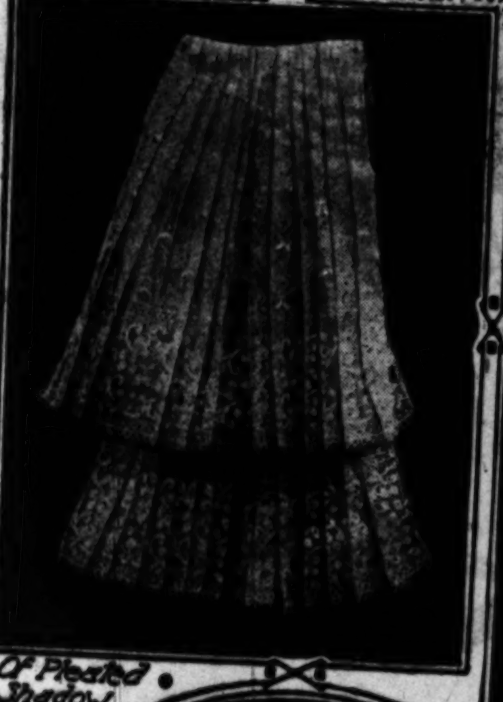
The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transferred without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

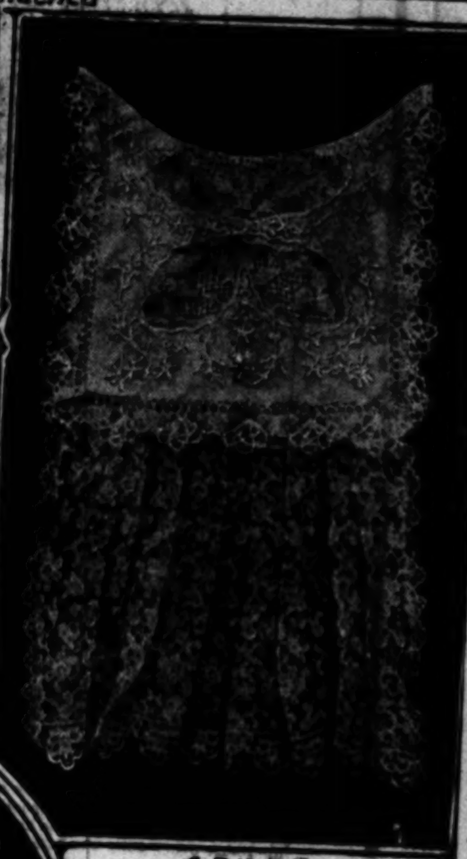
NEW NECK FIXINGS



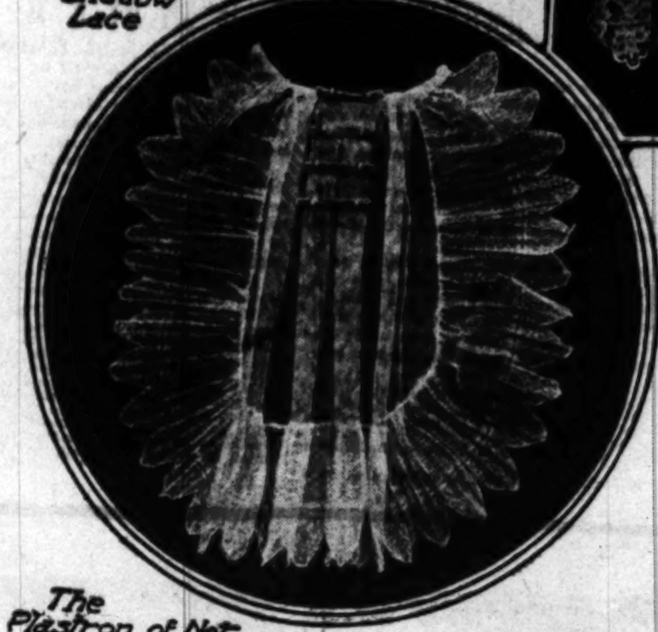
with the Collar Attached



Of Pleated Shadow Lace



A Bib Effect



The Plastron of Net

THE woman who is interested in dainty neckwear—and what woman is not?—will spend some of her spare moments fashioning some of the new plastron jabots for her collection.

The pleated frills worn on the coat are no longer considered modish, and the jabot has again returned to favor. Among the latest importations are the wide jabots of pleated net, lace or handkerchief linen. Frequently these are attached to stocks or rolled-over collars of the same materials or of black moire or silk.

One of the loveliest designs recently displayed at a smart shop where accessories are sold is fashioned of Arabian lace and embroidered linen. To duplicate this, purchase a half yard of ivory-tinted Arabian lace and arrange it in half-inch pleats. Press with a heated iron, and to the sides stitch a narrow edging of the same lace.

From a piece of sheer handkerchief linen cut a top portion, the same width and half as long as the pleated jabot, and embroider it with a dainty design of small flowers and foliage. From the center cut a butterfly-shaped portion and buttonhole the edges. Beneath this set a piece of filet lace and border three sides of the embroidered piece with a half-inch edging of cluny lace. This jabot is particularly effective, and you will be perfectly satisfied with the results if you expend the time and money required to fashion a duplicate.

Shadow lace, on account of its durability and webby fineness, has won an enviable place in the affections of the feminine world. If you desire to copy this design, purchase a yard of shadow lace edging eight inches in width. Cut it in halves and pleat the sections, pressing with a heated iron. Sew the pleats firmly across the top, and place one portion over the other, making the top three inches shorter than the bottom. Join the two neatly together, and the jabot is completed.

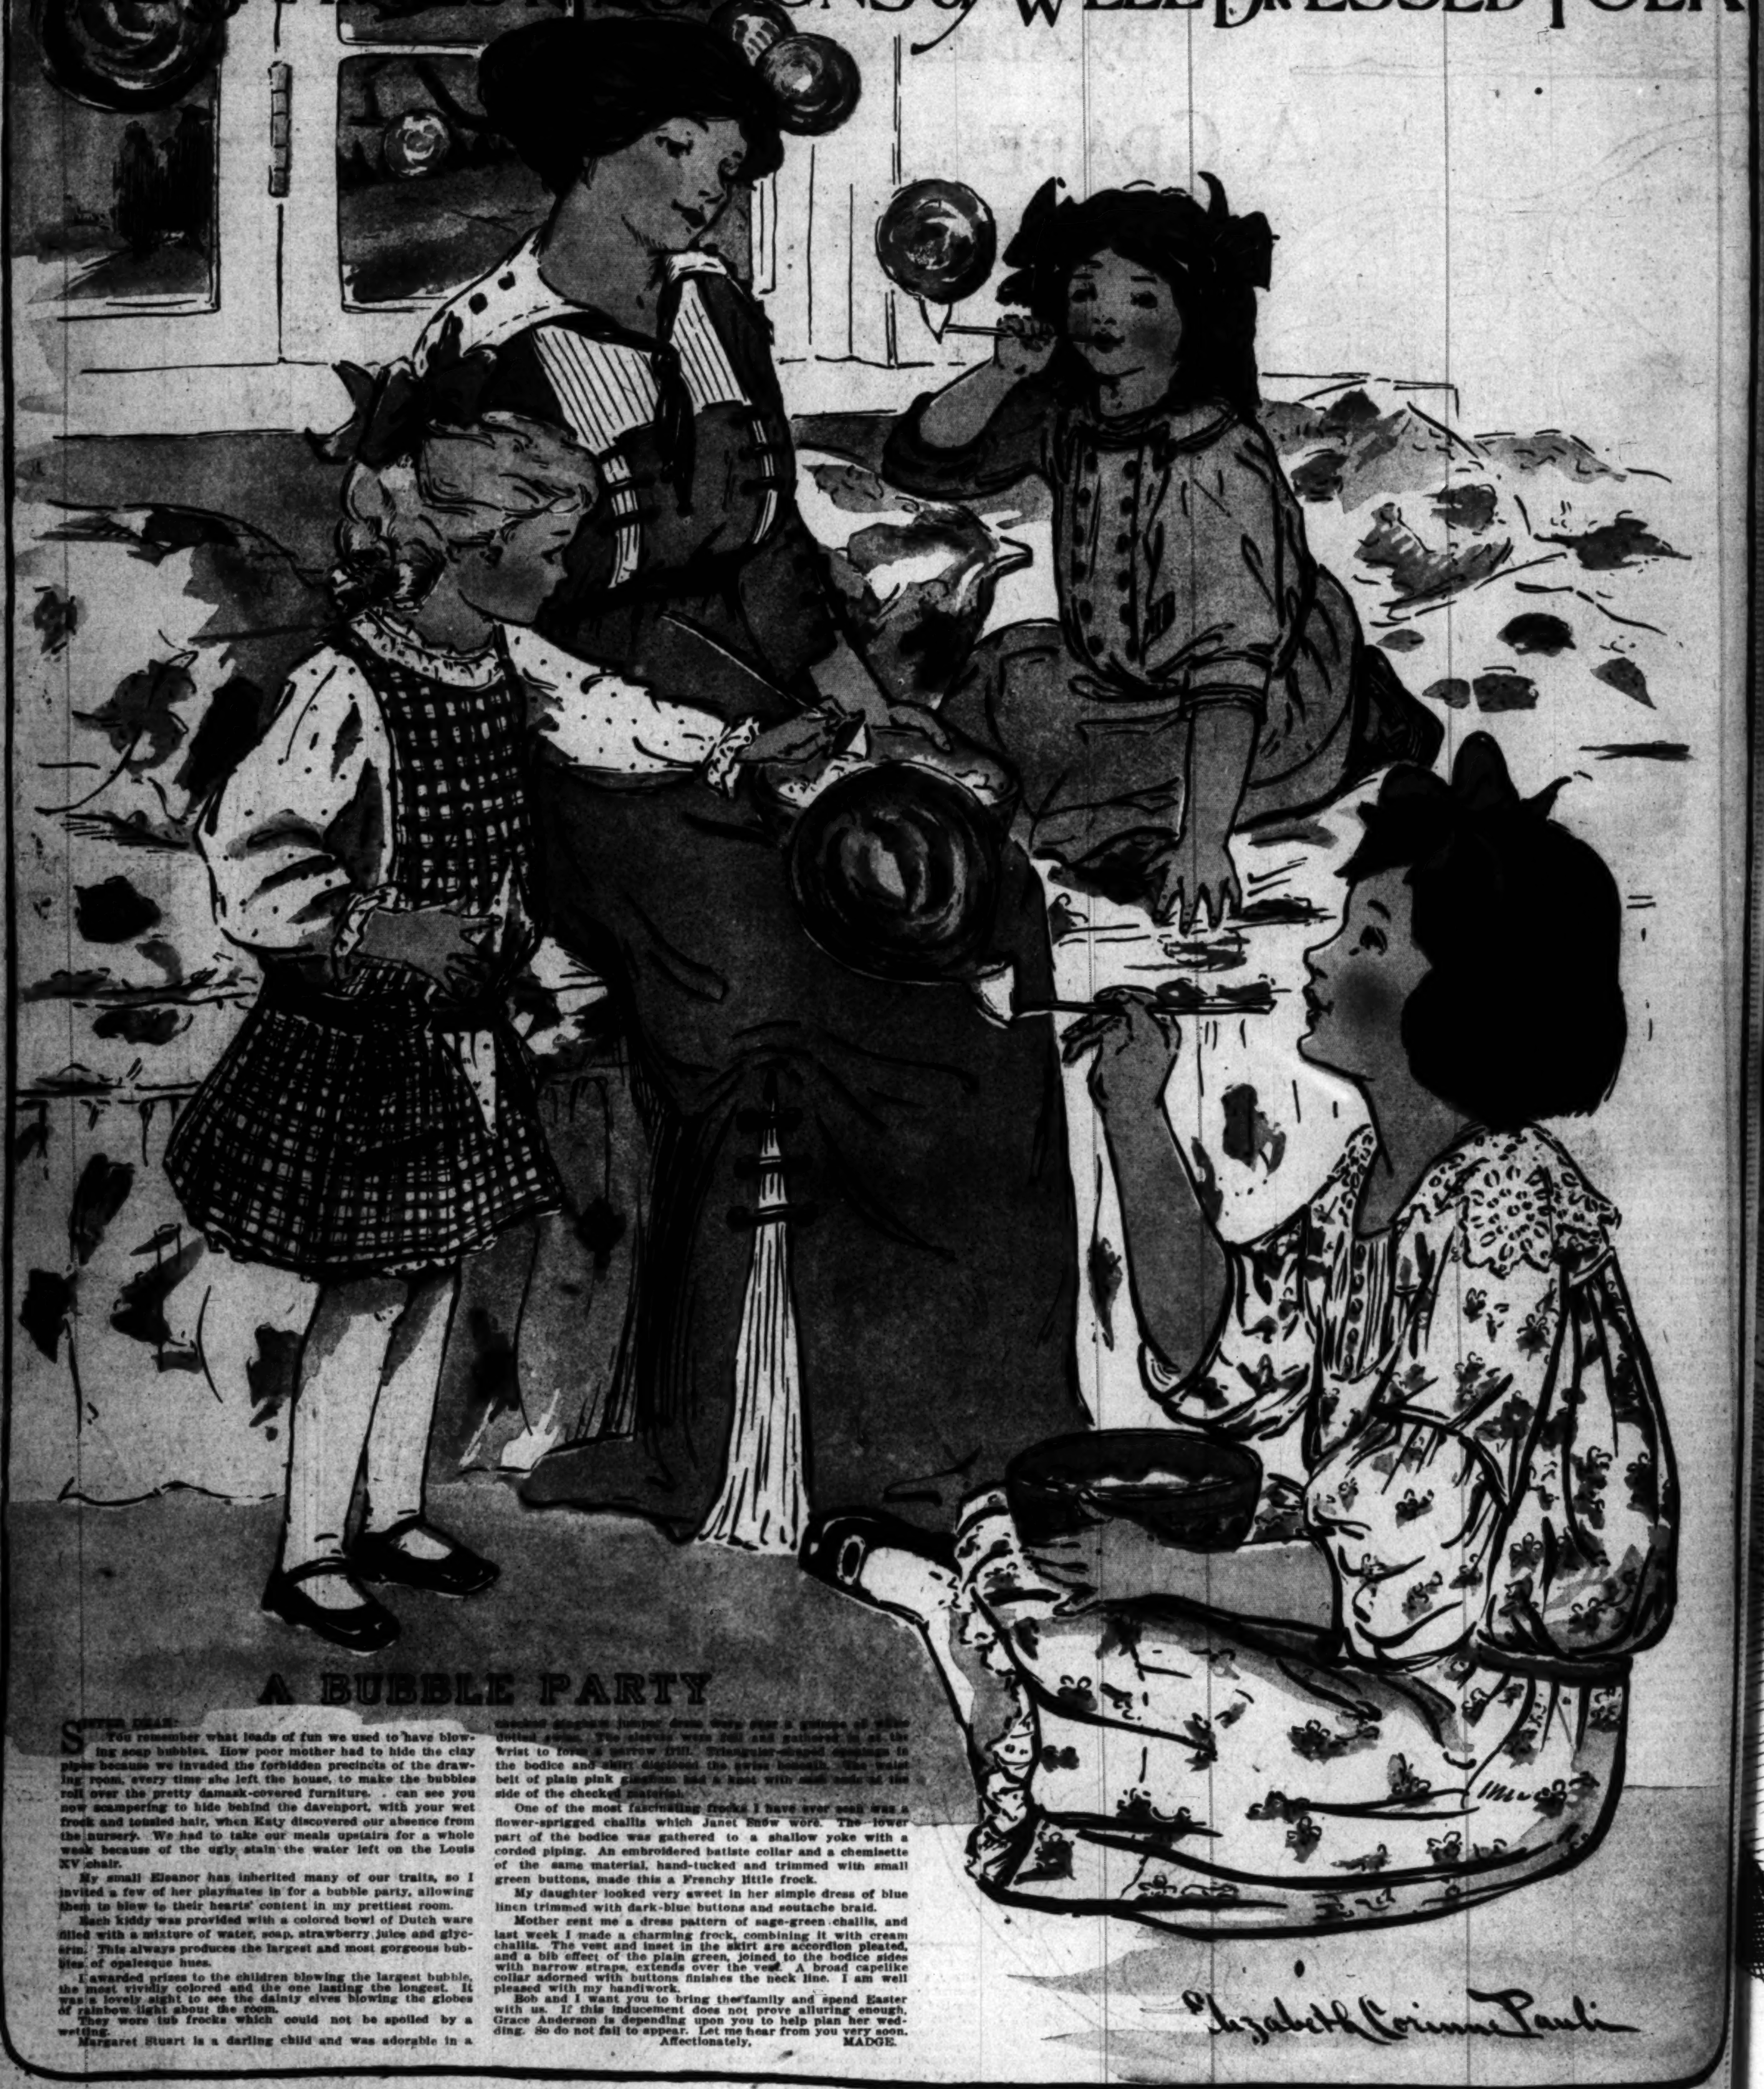
The wide jabot with rounded corners is made of net, and its soft sheerness will appeal to many needlewomen.

Cut an oblong center portion of plain net and round the lower corners. At the lace counter purchase a suitable edging of plain or dotted net and finely pleat it. Whipstitch this to the center portion, which is then pleated and pressed with a warm iron. Hem the top neatly and ornament the jabot with four strips of narrow velvet ribbon held in place with eight tiny crystal buttons.

Very often you can purchase the lace edging already pleated, and it is astonishingly inexpensive.

The jabot with the collar attached is made of tucked net and pleated shadow lace. Over a well-fitting pattern cut an ordinary stock collar. Trim the lower neck line with two pieces of black satin or taffeta cut to resemble the picture given here, and finish with four brilliant buttons. To form the jabot portion, cut a strip of tucked net five inches long by three inches wide and round the lower corners. Border the entire edges of this with a pleated edging of shadow lace, which can be purchased at the lace counter. Two inches from the bottom attach two squares of the silk and trim them with small brilliant buttons. Join the jabot to the stock, and it is ready to be worn. This model is particularly appropriate for the woman who never wears the Dutch collars.

THE SMARTEST FASHIONS of WELL-DRESSED FOLK



A BUBBLE PARTY

SISTER DEAR:

You remember what loads of fun we used to have blowing soap bubbles. How poor mother had to hide the clay pipes because we invaded the forbidden precincts of the drawing room, every time she left the house, to make the bubbles roll over the pretty damask-covered furniture. I can see you now scampering to hide behind the davenport, with your wet frock and tousled hair, when Katy discovered our absence from the nursery. We had to take our meals upstairs for a whole week because of the ugly stain the water left on the Louis XV chair.

My small Eleanor has inherited many of our traits, so I invited a few of her playmates in for a bubble party, allowing them to blow to their hearts' content in my prettiest room.

Each kiddy was provided with a colored bowl of Dutch ware filled with a mixture of water, soap, strawberry juice and glycerin. This always produces the largest and most gorgeous bubbles of opalesque hues.

I awarded prizes to the children blowing the largest bubble, the most vividly colored and the one lasting the longest. It was a lovely sight to see the dainty elves blowing the globes of rainbow light about the room.

They wore tub frocks which could not be spoiled by a wetting.

Margaret Stuart is a darling child and was adorable in a checked gingham jumper dress worn over a guimpe of white dotted swiss. The sleeves were full and gathered in at the wrist to form a narrow frill. Triangular-shaped openings in the bodice and skirt disclosed the swiss beneath. The waist belt of plain pink gingham had a knot with sash ends at the side of the checked material.

One of the most fascinating frocks I have ever seen was a flower-sprigged challis which Janet Snow wore. The lower part of the bodice was gathered to a shallow yoke with a corded piping. An embroidered batiste collar and a chemisette of the same material, hand-tucked and trimmed with small green buttons, made this a Frenchy little frock.

My daughter looked very sweet in her simple dress of blue linen trimmed with dark-blue buttons and soutache braid.

Mother sent me a dress pattern of sage-green challis, and last week I made a charming frock, combining it with cream challis. The vest and inset in the skirt are accordion pleated, and a bib effect of the plain green, joined to the bodice sides with narrow straps, extends over the vest. A broad capelike collar adorned with buttons finishes the neck line. I am well pleased with my handiwork.

Bob and I want you to bring the family and spend Easter with us. If this inducement does not prove alluring enough, Grace Anderson is depending upon you to help plan her wedding. So do not fail to appear. Let me hear from you very soon.

AND IN THE HEART OF THE SOUTHWEST.

Good But Unpleasant.

THE city of Los Angeles was perhaps never more crowded with Eastern people, tourists and winter-sunbeam chasers, than at the present moment. The population at this time is hardly less than 500,000. The writer has a word of remonstrance and encouragement to offer to them. He has seen forty winters pass over his head in California, and seven in Oregon, and he can say without a bit of hesitation that never in California has he seen eight weeks of less pleasant weather than since the first of January, 1913. Addressing the query to experienced Californians, have there been a dozen of really balmy, sunny California winter days in these sixty? The last part of February has been ideal weather from the farmer's point of view, and all of these eight weeks would be regarded as charming anywhere outside of Southern California. We have said to one another as we met on the street during the last ten days, "What beautiful growing weather!" We are careless in the use of adjectives, and if we were careful we would change the word "beautiful" to "good." In fact this excellent weather for the farmers' purposes has been like a great many other excellent things, very good but infernally unpleasant.

New Attraction to the Southwest.

IT IS like bringing coals to Newcastle or pouring water into the ocean to talk of an additional attraction to Southern California. At the same time we are neither modest people nor a self-denying one in our patriotic devotion to the section. We are not like Oliver Twist, asking for more, when we are starving, but rather like the horse-leech's daughter, who although suffering from too great fullness still cries, "Give! Give!" A great many of us have found this new attraction, and none of us more ardently enjoy it than the great army of tourists "in our midst." The reference is to the "Mission Play." About the worst day, climatically speaking, of the month of February, the writer paid a visit to the old Mission San Gabriel and witnessed (not for the first time) this fascinating presentation of the legendary history of the State. The latter was the day that he expected to find a mere handful of people in the Mission playhouse, and was surprised to find almost every seat occupied, and nine out of every ten present were Eastern people who enjoyed the play most keenly. Both the story and tableaux on scene are thrilling in their [illegible], and so the tourists find it. They see the romantic history of the old mission days told in a way that impresses the facts upon their minds as perhaps no book could possibly do. Hundreds of thousands of Americans visit Europe every year to behold the scenes of historic times. Not Rome, nor any other city in Europe, nor any country on that continent, has a legendary history more teeming with poetical romance than California. This play is taking its place side by side with the orange groves, the snow-capped mountains with the purple semi-shadows on their sides, with the plains and river vales, and with the sands by the Western Sea, in attracting and delighting the people of the East. We should all do our utmost to direct the attention of every Eastern visitor to the little playhouse at San Gabriel, with its charming presentation of the early mission history.

Beautifying Highways and Parks.

IN THE "Mission Play" being presented at San Gabriel, reference to which is made in another item on this page, the first pepper tree planted by the missionaries is spoken of as still standing at the Mission San Luis Rey. Of all the things the Spanish missionaries brought to California there are few that should call out more gratitude from us of the present day than this beautifully graceful tree. It is sufficiently semi-hardy to resist successfully the coldest weather ever experienced in ordinary situations in Southern California. It stands after the frosts of early January as green as emerald where the "blue gum" or common variety of the eucalyptus tree perished in every branch, and almost root and branch. In sunshine or in moonlight, or under the glare of the electric lamp, this beautiful tree casts its lacelike tracery in shadows that are absolutely fascinating. In an atmosphere where there is not a leaf stirring, in the ripple of the gentle breeze, or in the swaying hurricane, the pepper tree never loses its grace. It is pleasant to read that the people of Alhambra and El Monte and on to Pomona are moving to plant the highway with palms, acacias and pepper trees. At Monrovia, it rejoices one's heart to read of the efforts being made by the people to decorate their new playground, a semi-mountain park, with ornamental trees. They have chosen the time of all times for this work, for the ground is soaked, as the old Mexican farmers used to say, so that the moisture from above meets the moisture from below, and there is no dry stratum in the ground at all. We are far behind European cities, in spite of our great self-conceit, in the decoration of our streets and highways and in the providing of proper parks for the entertainment of constant residents and tourist visitors.

"Meet Me at Los Angeles."

A COMMITTEE is at work to secure the international Christian Endeavor convention at Los Angeles in 1913, July 9-14. This committee is sending out 400,000 stickers, representing an orange with the leaves around it, fruit and leaves in their natural colors, and this is the legend the stickers bear: "Meet me at Los Angeles, July 9-14, 1913. International Christian Endeavor Convention. Fruit and flowers all the year. Summer climate ideal." The committee has also sent out 300,000 guidons printed in purple ink on orange-colored paper to be used in decorating halls where meetings are held in the interests of this convention. This committee is doing good work. It is doing work that, like mercy, blesses giver and taker. It will be good for us to have these Christian Endeavor delegates here, and it will do them good to be here. Speed the committee in its endeavors, and let us all treat the Endeavorers with all the legendary hospitality of California.

Some New Industries.

IT DOES not take an octogenarian to remember the time when the products of the soil in Southern California were few and generally inadequate to meet the demands of the small population of the section. Currants were an unknown product, apple trees were scarce, and the same was true of pear trees, excepting the very commonest varieties. In those days, anybody who had suggested planting any kind of fruit tree in the mountain valleys of the section would have been considered a fit subject for the home for the feeble-minded. It would surprise one of the old-timers to read the other day of the shipments from Claremont nurseries of 96,000 currant bushes, 15,000 Bartlett pear trees, and 20,000 apple trees. And the astonishment would be doubled if they knew that they were going to the Tehachepi, to be planted there in that high mountain pass. The same day, a news item in The Times told us of the planting of 1000 acres to deciduous fruit trees in the Beaumont district, another high mountain pass in the Sierra Madre range, and that these included pears, plums and cherries. The day before, a dispatch from Portland, Or., told us of the arrival there of three steamers with 250 tons, 500 tons, and again 250 tons of brick from the city of Los Angeles. The clays of this section of the country make the finest brick in the world, and others are capable of being converted into the finest porcelain. Now comes a Georgia cotton planter and predicts that within a few years the cotton crop of the Great Southwest will be worth $75,000,000. The crop of last year was worth $2,000,000. The fact is, here in the Great Southwest we are only beginning to scratch the top of any of our resources.

Gov. Sulzer's Inspired Idea.

THE State of New York is asked to give $700,000 for a fitting representation of the Empire State at the International Panama-Pacific Exposition to be held in San Francisco in 1915. Gov. Sulzer, chief executive of the State of New York, wants $250,000 of this money spent in the erection at the exposition grounds of a permanent memorial for his State. The New York Governor thinks it would be a waste of money to spend $700,000 for temporary buildings. He does not say what form the memorial should take, but that is a mere matter of detail to be easily arranged. Let us say we heartily approve of the plan of the Governor of New York, and look upon it in the light of an inspiration that might well be followed by other States. The exposition grounds stretch several miles along the Bay front near the Golden Gate, and it would be a permanent and inspiring feature to the metropolis of the Great West to have these monuments erected there in perpetuity.

A Rival of the Yosemite Falls.

THE other day a story emanating from Oroville stated that an exploring party had found on a middle fork of the Feather River a waterfall that rivals that of the Yosemite and rocks as impressive as El Capitan. These falls are said to have a sheer drop of 500 feet, breaking into a beautiful cascade extending hundreds of yards. The falls lie in the Bald Rock Canyon district, explored for the first time by white men a year ago. The whole country is reported to be one of magnificent scenic beauty. We have only begun to know of the grandeur of the Sierras, and there are undoubtedly many features of scenic grandeur still to be brought to light in these glorious mountains.

The March of Progress.

THE new year has opened grandly in the further development of the metropolitan city of Los Angeles and of all the smaller cities in the great galaxy throughout the Great Southwest and in all the surrounding section. It might seem to the unreflective as if things might be a little overdone. But when one considers that the population of the city is growing at the rate of 50,000 a year, that of all the other cities in proportion, and the country around keeping right in the tracks of the cities, this apprehension will be dispelled. The people with the nerve to do things realize this growth of population and further are persuaded that it will be accelerated for at least the next thirty-six months, until after the great exposition at San Francisco is over. So it does not surprise those "in the know" to learn that plans are being prepared for a great apartment-house on the beautiful corner of Carondelet street and Wilshire boulevard, for another on South Alvarado street just below Ninth, for a third on Flower street between First and Second, and still another on Ruth avenue between Fifth and Sixth, and then one in the 1100 block on West Tenth street. Then come plans for a $50,000 hotel on Sixth street and Ceres avenue, also some for a big apartment-house on Santee street at Tenth. Still with their eye on this growth of population and general development, we read of the purchase of nearly 2000 acres of the Rancho La Puente at a cost of $500,000, with plans to spend another $125,000 in subdividing and developing it into orange groves to be put on the market for the investment of small holders.

"Column Forward!"
A RECORD OF INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS.

UNDOUBTEDLY the most important event since the last issue of this Illustrated Weekly along by the Western Sea and all through the Heart of the Great Southwest has been the great soaking rain of the season, which puts everything from alfalfa fields, vineyards and orchards to mining enterprises, in perfect fettle.

At Newport Beach a deal has been closed which promises to give that stirring town a glass factory, a thing which should do well in a section where so much of this is used.

The city of Corcoran in the San Joaquin Valley is offering bonds in the sum of $45,000 to build a new High School.

The city of Santa Monica is about to install municipal improvements in the way of fire protection and other things at a cost of $76,000.

At Phoenix, Ariz., a contract in the sum of $65,000 has been let for paving Central avenue.

Negotiations are in progress in the city of Anaheim, on one side of which stands a capitalist from Denver with the purpose in view of giving that city an up-to-date ice plant.

The people of Pasadena are about to offer bonds to the amount of $307,000 for park, fire department and similar uses.

The Pacific Light and Power Company is rushing work on the upper San Gabriel River which will result in the generation of 8000 horse power of electricity.

Construction work on the new shops of the Arizona Eastern Railroad at Phoenix is progressing rapidly. The office building alone will cost $50,000.

Work will begin very soon on the extension of the Eagle Rock Railway from Verdugo Park to La Crescenta. Those interested have raised a bonus of $30,000 to encourage the work, which is expected to cost, with branches and equipment, $100,000.

Those who are managing the plans for the great exposition at San Francisco in 1915 report that concessions have already been let that will call for the expenditure of $2,500,000. The Santa Fe Company will expend $250,000 to produce a replica of the Grand Canyon.

As an index of growth all through the Great Southwest may be cited the increase of postoffice business at Phoenix, Ariz., amounting to $10,000 a year.

The Orange county good roads bonds have been sold, amounting to $1,270,000, and the work of building will now go on with vigor.

The last big ranch in the Porterville district of the San Joaquin Valley has been sold for subdivision purposes. It consists of 2000 acres, and the planting of citrus fruit trees, olive trees and others will be begun this spring. A Los Angeles man bought the property for $200,000.

Citizens of the Roman Catholic faith at Fullerton are rejoicing over the completion of a new house of worship which cost $20,000.

The bishop of the Catholic Church on April 20 will consecrate a new house of worship at Brawley, Imperial county, built at a cost of $12,000.

The town of Eagle Rock is developing very rapidly, as indicated by a project to improve the streets at a cost of $50,000. During the month of January, $20,000 worth of street work was finished, and the building permits amounted to $16,000.

Santa Monica people are charmed with their new High School, which so far has cost $187,509. The main building has a frontage of 260 feet, and the auditorium will seat 1200 persons. Then the other day 1000 Elks gathered to dedicate their new building, which cost $60,000.

EDITORIAL.

Mr. Taft and His Administration.

THE administration of William Howard Taft as President of the United States comes to an end at high noon next Tuesday, March 4. The four years of his incumbency of the Presidential office have been marked with radical changes in American politics, have been beset by many complications in our relations with foreign powers, have seen the severing of bonds of friendship between Mr. Taft and his distinguished predecessor, the breaking up of the President's party, and the triumph of the Democracy, that party replacing Republicanism in every branch of the government.

There has scarcely been a Presidential administration in the history of the country in which the occupant of the Presidential chair has been more severely tried in many ways. The contentions that have been carried on during these four years, and the partisan conflicts that have marked their course, have been too earnest (indeed we might say too bitter) to permit of a just analysis of Mr. Taft's character or a just estimate of his administration on the part of many of his fellow-citizens.

We assume for ourselves, or arrogate to ourselves, as the views of others may be, the ability to forecast the verdict of history as to the person of William Howard Taft, and as to the results of his administration. Assuming this ability on our own part, we do not hesitate for a moment to pronounce the judgment that, with the possibility of seeing clearly in the perspective formed by distance the personality and the policies of our President, history will place him in the very front rank among all our Chief Executives from Washington to himself.

Ardently as we admire Mr. Taft, and almost unreservedly as we commend the policies of his administration, we would not claim for him absolute freedom from error of judgment. To do that would be to place him on the throne of Deity instead of in the chair of the President of the United States. But we do say that among all the Presidents of the country, including Washington, Jefferson, Monroe, Lincoln and McKinley, none has been more earnest in patriotism, more self-poised in attitude, more thoroughly conscientious in the performance of his duties or of more immaculate honesty of purpose, than the President who retires from the duties and burdens of the Presidency next Tuesday morning.

Henry Clay, when defeated in his ambition to be President, said with ostentatious display of integrity: "I would rather be right than be President." Grover Cleveland, when defeated for re-election in 1888 and told that his famous free-wool message had defeated him, said with a similar display of self-abnegation that he knew that message would defeat him, but that he sent it to Congress nevertheless.

Mr. Taft has been particularly free from any ostentatiousness about his integrity, conscientiousness, patriotism or other civic virtue. But while abstaining from the use of all self-laudatory phrases or expressions, he has shown a self-abnegation in politics never surpassed by any American in public life. He has never shrunk from the performance of any duty, done a single act or left one undone wherein by any manner of means it could be surmised by any fair-minded person that he was swayed a hairbreadth from his line of action by one moment's consideration of his own political future. He has been patient under vituperation as a rule, tolerant of all people's honest opinions while maintaining his own with adamantine firmness, and with this attitude toward others and respect for himself and his office he has gone forward in every duty of his position with a calmness of spirit and a judiciousness of temperament that have been indeed admirable.

We look with confident hopefulness upon Mr. Wilson and his administration of the Presidential office for four years, so far as he himself is concerned. But we say that if he comes even near reaching the high mark of duty set by his predecessor, then indeed the people of this country have nothing to fear from the new President so far as he himself is concerned therein.

A Tariff Commission.

AT THE moment, the greatest difference between the Republican and the Democratic parties, so far as immediate actual results to the prosperity of the country go, lies in the attitude of the two parties toward the protective-tariff principle.

When nearly five years ago the Republican party in its convention at Chicago declared as a new principle in tariff protection the doctrine of so fixing the schedules that they would equal the difference between the cost of production abroad and at home, it was very generally hailed by the Democrats as not only a new view for the Republican party to take on this subject, but it has been one acceptable to the Democratic party. That brought the two parties nearer together than they had been before on the doctrine of tariff protection and free trade.

When at Mr. Taft's suggestion upon his entering upon the duties of his office a commission was appointed by Congress to study carefully the cost of producing various commodities in foreign countries where they originated and from which they were imported and the cost of production of the same commodities in the United States, it was only following out the pledge made to the people in the Republican platform of the previous summer made by the Chicago convention.

The election of the off year 1910 put the House of Representatives within the power of the Democratic party, and the Sixty-second Congress refused an appropriation of money for the continuance of this tariff board. It would be difficult to say why this refusal was made, unless it was for the purpose of "doing politics," as undoubtedly the activities of the board had been of great benefit in giving Congress clearer views as to what schedules were necessary to safeguard the interests of American industries.

With the coming into power of the Sixty-third Congress the Democratic party will have control of the Senate as well as the House of Representatives, and will also have a President who, it may be fair to assume, will sign any tariff bill passed by his party. As this Sixty-third Congress is about to take seat in extraordinary session, the leaders of the party have injected into the tariff discussion a new phrase, and one we are bound to say that meets with our unqualified approbation, and which if carried out will make much for safeguarding the prosperity of American industries. The phrase we refer to is "a competitive tariff." It means the creation of schedules based upon such a just conception of the cost of production abroad and at home that, while making duties not low enough to flood the country with foreign goods to the destruction of any American industry, will at the same time keep the duties so low as not to be prohibitive of importations, thus giving American manufacturers a monopoly in the home market in any commodity.

But fine phrases do not make a fine administration any more than the feathers make the bird. We are therefore pleased to note the introduction of a bill in Congress for the re-creation of a tariff board to do exactly the work aimed at by that created some four years ago at the suggestion of President Taft.

Here again we have an approaching to a nearer point of meeting between the two parties on the tariff. If a proper tariff board shall be appointed and do the work partly done by the past board, and if the Democratic Congress will frame a tariff bill that will be truly competitive as to imported goods and those of home manufacture, we shall not have free trade after the Calhoun and Bryan doctrine, and American industries will have nothing to fear from the presence of a Democratic President in the city of Washington.

Suffragettes There and Here.

WOMEN in America have always enjoyed larger rights in every way than in any other country in the world, ancient, medieval or modern. The great feminine agitation of the day is for equal rights with men in the preliminary steps toward governmental activities in the various nations. Here again American women are enjoying more rights of suffrage than those in any other country on earth. At least half a dozen of the States have given women absolutely equal privileges at the ballot-box with men. Whether we look upon it with favor or disfavor, we must all recognize the fact that votes-for-women is one of those revolutions which will not go backward. However disagreeable the policy may be to some of us, we must put it in our pipe and smoke it with as good grace as we can. It is more than probable that by the next Presidential election a large majority of the States will have granted the elective franchise to women.

The English government, next to our own, is probably, taken all in all, the nearest to a popular form of any in our day. So far in England, women enjoy no rights of suffrage. In no respect do they enjoy the rights already granted to their American sisters.

English methods in politics are very different from American methods. And in no political contention is this difference more manifest than in the fight being made by Englishwomen for the right to vote. They have copied the methods of their brothers, husbands and fathers, and added to them so that the loins of men agitators are no thicker than the little finger of the women suffragists.

The breaking of windows, the committing of violent personal assaults, the interfering with the activities of the postoffice, and other acts of gross violence, mark the course of the English clamorers for votes for women.

The other day they carried this to the limit by dynamiting the house of Lloyd George, a member of the English Cabinet, and some of them, out in the open under the noonday sun, proclaimed their approbation of this act, and even went so far as to lament that the English statesman had not lost his life in the explosion that destroyed his property.

To us in this country that is neither here nor there, being a matter of utter indifference. One hears of a Sunday morning in Hyde Park at almost any time of year violent agitators uttering inflammatory speeches against the government which in this country would call for police interference, for the interposition of a court and the placing of the violent agitators behind prison bars. That is the English way, and so far as we are concerned we can say with an equal mind: "So let it be."

The point is this, that some of our American suffragettes marching to Washington the other day to take part in the inaugural parade loudly indorsed the English methods of obtaining for women, with implied threats the same tactics would be resorted in this country if women were not mitted to vote.

Now to this no intelligent and otic American will say: "So be." We have warned Ame suffragettes before and reitera now with renewed emphasis that would better not copy the me pursued by their English Women will get votes in this co whenever and wherever a majo of them demand the right, and even a respectable mino They will get that through sympathy, chivalry and galla of American men. But, dearly loved sisters, take our word your fathers, husbands and brot are not cowards and will not be erced. They are very easy to with and very easy to lead by a string in the lily hands of a woman, but they will not be driven women armed with hatpins one more than in the days of the Rev tion they could be driven by Bri red-coats and hired Hessians with bayonets.

The American Army.

SOME sapient solon has risen place in Congress with a bi ensmall by degrees the Ame army.

In the same issue of the daily we read of a proposition laid befor French General Assembly by the President of that republic, Ray Poincare, to add largely to the Fr army.

Gen. Wood the other day fur the country with an enumera the reserves in the following tries: Great Britain, 215,000; 1,000,000; Italy, 1,500.000; A 2,500,000; France, 2,000,000; Ge 4,700,000; Russia, 5,400,000.

Great Britain is absolutely encircled, and yet she maintains a army. The same is true of Japan, yet that new member of the fam nations maintains an army of five times that of Great Britain.

The United States has mer shell of an army, and in case of would be at an absolute disadva against any belligerent that migh tack her. We have had trouble in maintaining peace along our borders for two years past while ico has been in a state of insurre Some years ago we freed Cuba, are responsible to the world fo maintenance of order, the prot of the life and property of forei in that little republic. We hav Philippine Islands to take care of the army is inadequate properly to form these services.

Some of our people have been impatient toward the policies of President, and many of them urged him to enter into hostilitie our neighbor Mexico. There has nothing in Mr. Taft's administ more admirable than the restrai has exercised over himself in his ings with the republic on our ern border. Should anything o Mexico to force us into interv there (an event which may heave us out of,) the army would be quate to meet the situation. It require 50,000 well-equipped can soldiers, including all arms service, to handle the situa Mexico, and if we ever had to that country it would be at ten-years' job before we cou draw.

SO FRANCE has conferred the Cross of the Legion of Honor, her most prized decoration, upon Mme. Paquin, the world's foremost dressmaker. Times change, but honor, you see, is still lavished upon the bold. In a socialistic age tyranny is still worshiped.

Mme. Paquin's entire eligibility for this great honor rests upon the fact that she and her kind have made France absolutely dominant over the world of women. Herself a woman, her collaborators are all men, and that small handful of people sway half the world. If they ordained tomorrow that woman should go forth upon the streets in a directoire nightgown and a golf cap their behest would be obeyed, not meekly, but with exuberant joy. Nay more, women would fall over one another in their eagerness to be the first to respond to the tyrant's command.

Such pre-eminent power as this called for some mark of recognition from a grateful country. The Presidency of the republic was altogether too bourgeois. Unfortunately peerages are temporarily worthless in France, so the Legion of Honor seemed the only thing possible. Mme. Fine, I think, yes, and I like to see my friend and companion of the forest, the 'Bull Moose' leading his kind to the fore and hitting it along the pike of Progress to the tune of: 'Everybody has a part to play as I play mine.'

"The Eagle's response to The Eagle.
"High State Life Building,
"Indianapolis, Ind."

The Eagle on the granite tower was not born yesterday nor last week. He is an Eagle of the old school in politics and in nearly every line of human thought. He is not a self-conceited, egotistical nor bigoted Eagle. But he has convictions which are solid as the rock of Gibraltar, steadfast in their place as the North Star, unchangeable according to the Eagle's opinion as the mind of Deity itself. And while recognizing the rights of every Eagle to entertain his own opinions and guide his life according to them, this Los Angeles Eagle will not yield up his conscience to the keeping of any other, nor will he let any other do his thinking for him. He must guide his life by his own lights and govern his conduct by his own principles.

That is the way our ancestors thought, and there was nothing unfair about it, nor is there anything unfair about it today. It is only self-conceited persons who take themselves too seriously and think their souls illuminated by some inner light direct from heaven, who arrogate to themselves the privilege of imposing their notions on all the rest of the world and condemn all who differ from them in any matter great or small.

So conceding the right of the Eagle on the aerie in Indianapolis to see things according to the light of his own eyes, I can congratulate him on his happy condition in being able to view all opinions with the same indifference and to look as complacently on the bull moose in the inauguration procession as the elephant.

The Los Angeles Eagle might enjoy a more contented mind and be happier in his life if he could view things with the same indifference. But being unable to do so, he must necessarily bear his own burdens, carry his own cross, and prefer to be right rather than to be happy.

So I confess that as I sit here today, March 1, 1913, on my granite tower, and look across the abyss of time a little way to next Tuesday, and away across the continent to the city of Washington, truth compels me to confess that I look with misgiving upon the inaugural procession of that day so near at hand. The bull moose may be there. The Democratic jackass is billed to lead the procession. But tears trickle down the beak of the Eagle as he misses from the procession his old friend, the great patient, intelligent, kindly-spirited elephant.

The man who put the bull moose into American politics has himself described the beast, and his biography of the moose is not pleasant reading, nor does it make the animal a gratifying object in the human eye. We have never regarded T. R. as a painstaking and accurate writer, but as his account of the moose is the only graphic one extant, we have to accept it as correct, for the time being at least.

The Eagle's parents were present when George Washington was inaugurated President of the United States, and remember his dignified and august form as it marched up the aisle where the House of Representatives in the first Congress met, and delivered his address to the legislators in person. The Eagle has heard from his parents or observed with his own eye every inaugural procession from that time to this, and he goes on record here and now with his declaration of some impatience and misgiving as to the one scheduled for next Tuesday. It is radically different from any that has ever taken place before, being the first in which a "Missouri nightingale" marched and made the day hideous with his raucous voice. It is the first procession in the inauguration of a President that ever suffragettes marched in, militant or peaceable, and the Eagle's mind misgives him as to the promise for the future in the presence of these followers of the English suffragettes, window-breakers, rioters, dynamiters and bomb-throwers. These have not been the ways in American politics heretofore. For in America, majority rule has been the vogue and the American people, intelligent and earnest, while at the same time patient and liberal, have usually been satisfied with moral suasion and the discussion of conflicts, however irrepressible they may have seemed, and have not been in the habit of resorting to actual violence or denunciatory vituperation, malignant, violent and bitter, of those who differed from them.

Yours anxiously, though hopefully,

The Eagle

Patronize Home Industries.

IN WHICH connection let me direct attention to our own very recherche Los Angeles jails. We have two, a city and a county one, both of which compare very favorably with anything Paris has to offer. In their way, too, the inmates are quite as interesting, quite as celebrated. I can imagine nothing more delightful than a line of expensive automobiles drawn up before the County Jail on visiting days and our own society dames can be right up to the minute in fashionable pastimes without waiting for any importations from Paris.

A week or so back a most charming collection of prison celebrities would have greeted their visits with joy—some of the gentlemen are still there. Gorham Tufts, for instance, the mystic high priest, whom Mrs. Tufts accuses of all sorts of horrid things. In his new surroundings he is known as the K.C.B.—Knight Commander of the Bath—and it is his duty to introduce newcomers to the bathroom and see that they don't drown themselves in the shower.

Then there was Effingham Laurence, known as Larry the Kisser in his present retirement. Incarcerated on the alleged crime of impersonating a Federal officer (I can sympathize with him, I always yearn to be something grand and sumptuous like that myself) he came into prominence recently because a fair divorcee had started the visiting fashion with such thoroughness that she left sympathetic kisses on his brow and neither the prison authorities nor the lady's other fiance approved of them.

Another highly interesting inmate was a gentleman from Long Beach who was accused of stealing candy from the mails to give to his ladylove. Whenever anyone sent a box of candy to a lady at Long Beach the enterprising lover is alleged to have appropriated it to his own urgent uses—so of course he is playfully known as the Candy Kid in his present home.

A beautiful tenor could also have been met until quite recently. But he has married the girl now and they have let him out. During the period of his sojourn, however, the jail rang with sweet melody the like of which was never heard outside of Caruso, and his fellow "boarders" in that most attractive Hammel Club could have wept when he departed.

But new celebrities, bright, enterprising people with delightfully original ideas on life, are always coming and going. Society will know no further ennui if this new field is properly exploited. And anyway, if it is a dull season, there is always the captivating Mr. Gallagher, the superintendent—he of the Opal Ring, you know.

Ye Opal Menace.

BUT perhaps you don't know. He once owned an opal ring. Real beauty. Thought an awful lot of it. Then he noticed that misfortune dogged his footsteps. Most unpleasant little things kept happening. Prisoners got queer ideas in their heads about not getting any food for three days and silly things like that. Of course you can see for yourself that opal was causing all the trouble. So he had it ground to powder. And now things are just as happy for the House of Gallagher as though he was one of the pampered prisoners instead of the poor harassed superintendent.

The Criminal Mode.

WITH prison reform rampant in the land, it would really seem that the poor neglected criminal is to have his innings at last. The State will see that his board and lodging and recreations are more in keeping with his standing in the community now that society is taking him up. We shall soon have an official Who's Who in criminal circles and the time-honored profession will take its proper status in the business world.

This lionizing of the criminal has been coming on for some time. He became the hero in several novels first and that gave him a little encouragement. Then they starred him on the stage and Raffles, Wallingford, and such like artists in crime, brought more fully to the appreciative public notice the real charm of lawlessness. Under the circumstances society was bound to take him up; those Apache dances of a few seasons back showed which way the wind was blowing.

Refining the Brute.

AFTER all, since we must have criminals apparently, it seems a pity not to have them as refined as possible. What the cultured intellectuals are doing for sexual immorality society can do for the ordinary criminal. We can't cure them but we can raise their social status, we can exploit their individualities, encourage their daring, and make it possible for the dear things to follow their professions with some degree of security and prestige.

That really is a very great pull society has. Too long have they used their honor and prestige to merely foster and cultivate and envelop what has already cultivated and refined. Time was when to be in society merely meant that you were a superior social person who had a right to be there.

But now society is getting so delightfully democratic. It is no longer arbitrarily exclusive. Realizing its power, it now uses it for the purpose of elevating the low and outre. Thus easy divorce, bunny hug dances, sensual plays, improper literature, and a minimum of female clothing are all admitted to the society inner temple, while such old fogies as chaperons and such out-of-date respectabilities as large families have been quietly dropped.

And now the criminal will be drawn into the hallowed circle and receive the seal of recognition. His art and genius will receive proper appreciation. We shall in future take a distinct pride in our criminal acquaintances—and the uninitiated bystander will be unable to tell us apart. Just in the very same way that it is almost impossible to distinguish a really smart society lady from her sister of the half-world at the present time.

The English suffragettes are realizing the advantage of this sort of thing. So many of them are titled ladies of irreproachable family. Nothing if not enterprising, they have seized upon the most up-to-date weapons available for their cause—dynamite and destruction. Done scientifically under the auspices of culture and refinement, it becomes a noble political campaign, with all the heroics of martyrdom and bravado. Of course they are what we should have called hooligans and criminals a few years ago, but crime has climbed into society now.

Show Me.

IT COMES as a dreadful shock to know that Colorado is actually contemplating the curtailment of the physician's rights. Will the American Medical Association take this sort of insult lying down? It has positively been suggested that when a surgeon removes a patient's appendix in future he shall produce that highly interesting little organ and prove that he did it really tidily—and that it really needed removing. This dreadful doubt of the noble profession's word! This shameful slur upon the integrity of the modern rulers of man!

If the appendix is afterward—afterward, mark you!—proved to be healthy the operating surgeon is to be fined $10,000 or go to prison for ten years. What a nasty, vindictive revenge for a little mistake! Don't you stand for it, doctor darling. Exercise your inalienable right to hang, draw and quarter us when you deem it desirable. Who are these poor legislators that they should abrogate the time-honored liberties of a sacred profession? Besides, what difference can it make to your patient if the mistake is not proven until afterward? Tut! Tut! He can haunt you himself then and save the State the cost of the trial.

MAN OF AFFAIRS.

BORN in New York, educated in Michigan, a pioneer in California, at the head of the State bar, Governor of the State, and a Minister to a foreign court, while at the same time being a successful business man, makes a striking record in any human career.

That is the record of former Gov. Henry T. Gage, who has been an attorney in the city of Los Angeles for nearly a generation and is still vigorously active in the practice of the law.

Henry T. Gage was born near Geneva, N. Y., a Christmas present to his parents, in 1852. His father's given name was DeWitt Clinton, and his mother was a Glover, so there ran in the child's veins the best blood of the Empire State.

He was educated in the public schools of Michigan and under private tutors, then studied law in his father's office. He was admitted to the bar of Michigan in 1873, and to that of California in 1874. Ever since then he has maintained a law practice in the city of Los Angeles, conducting the practice of his profession alone until the end of the last century, when he admitted to partnership with himself W. J. Foley, Esq., and that partnership continues until the present time.

Attorney Gage from his earliest manhood took an earnest interest in public affairs and an active hand in politics. He has been a Republican all his lifetime, and remains to this day one of the old-liners in that party, steadfast in his confidence that the Constitution of the United States is the best and greatest basic law any country ever had, and is sufficiently broad and vital in its fundamental principles to meet all the exigencies of private and public life for the people of the country still.

Henry T. Gage has all the elements of character that go to make a man popular while thoroughly respected by his fellow-citizens. His manners are democratic and there is something of that breezy openness of character about him that marks western people and wins the heart of western men. In 1881 Mr. Gage was City Attorney, and often appeared at county and State conventions of the Republican party and served as delegate-at-large to at least one of the national conventions.

In 1898 the State convention of the Republican party named Henry T. Gage as its candidate for Governor, pitting him against one of the most popular Democrats in California, James G. McGuire, an attorney of San Francisco, and Gage carried the Republican banner triumphantly to victory.

In 1883 Henry Gage allied himself in marriage with Miss Fannie C. Rains, of a distinguished pioneer family in Los Angeles, and the Gage home on a farm down in the fattest part of the San Gabriel River bottoms has been marked for generous hospitality to the friends of the family ever since, and these friends embrace a very large number of the pioneers of the section.

In 1909, soon after the inauguration of President Taft, internal affairs in the kingdom of Portugal were very much disturbed, resulting in a revolution which banished the monarchy from the country and set up a republic. For the post of American Minister there was required a man of broad human sympathies and of a statesmanship of no light caliber. In casting about for a man to fill the place, President Taft hit upon former Gov. Gage of California, who accepted the appointment and spent two years at Lisbon when everything was at sixes and sevens in that city and in the whole kingdom of Portugal, and the American Minister there handled all the delicate international affairs with admirable tact and marked success.

During the ex-Governor's absence in Portugal his law business was carried on by Mr. Foley, one of the most erudite and studious lawyers of the State, and the business went along most successfully. Since Mr. Gage's return from his foreign mission he has thrown himself into the practice of his profession with his usual ardor, and his office is usually employed in handling before the courts of the county, State and nation many cases involving big interests.

I have referred to Mr. Gage as a successful man of affairs. He is so, conducting his ranch affairs, while not neglecting his law business, with very great success.

Pioneer Physician.

A career of nearly forty years of medical practice in California carries one back to pioneer days. If this practice was begun in one of the mountain counties, the practitioner must have experienced very primitive conditions in the practice of his profession. Such a physician who has practised medicine in Los Angeles for more than thirty years has seen changes never experienced by human eyes in any other city in the world. The good doctor is more than a professional man; he becomes the intimate friend of those to whom he ministers, and if his practice is a family one he links to himself with chains stronger than steel the hearts of mothers and fathers and of men in mature life to whom he has ministered since their birth.

Such a physician, in my opinion, is Dr. Frederick T. Bicknell. He was a Green Mountain boy in his youth, being born in the good old State of Vermont April 20, 1842. But the family moved early westward, and young Bicknell had an academic education in the Albany Academy, Wisconsin, and in the very efficient university of that State situated at Madison. He studied medicine at Rush College and received the degree of M.D. in 1870. He began practice in Neosha, Mo., immediately after receiving his degree, and practised there for four years, when he removed to California. He settled in the sparsely-populated mining county of Inyo and remained there until 1881, when he came to Los Angeles, and here he has practised his profession ever since.

When Dr. Bicknell came here affairs in Los Angeles were anything but lively. The population in the city proper did not exceed 12,000, and not half of them were men of American birth outside of the native Californians. In spite of the premature real-estate boom in the latter part of the decade, the growth of population was not rapid, and when the next census was taken, in 1890, the city numbered barely 50,000. By the next census-taking the population was doubled, and at the last counting the enumerators found 319,000 people in the city, the present population crowding close to 500,000.

When Dr. Bicknell first began practising there were very few families living anywhere east of the Los Angeles River, not many west of the crest of Bunker Hill avenue, and but few families south of Seventh street. He has seen population spread, until the large city of Pasadena, a place little known when he came here, and Los Angeles have almost grown together. East of the river there are more people than there were in the whole city when Dr. Bicknell came here. Santa Monica was the only beach town of any pretensions in 1880, whereas from there to the mouth of the Santa Ana River at the present time there are nearly a dozen flourishing towns, some of them containing twice as many people as the population of Los Angeles thirty years ago, and population is thickening in all the broad territory between this city and the sea in a way that will soon make the whole territory solidly built up all the way from Pasadena to the ocean.

The modest homes of the wealthiest families in the city when Dr. Bicknell came here were mostly one-story cottages, the best two-story houses, and the business of the city was nearly all carried on around Temple Block, mostly in one or two-story edifices. From the crest of Bunker Hill, looking in any direction, the skyline was on the level of the horizon, where the blue above joined the green of orange groves and vineyards below.

It is not often that practitioners in the learned professions do much toward building up a city. But Dr. Bicknell has done his full share. Institutional activities were slow when he came here, but he has borne his full share of the burden of supplying the city with these adjuncts of modern life. He was one of the founders of the College of Medicine in the University of Southern California, and for some time acted as its professor of gynecology. He was one of the earliest members of the Los Angeles County Medical Association, of the Medical Association of Southern California, and he is a member of the American Medical Association. At one time he served as president both of the Los Angeles County Medical Association and of the Southern California Medical Association, and has been president of the board of trustees of the California Hospital from the date of its founding. He is also a member of the University Club of Los Angeles.

Dr. Bicknell was in Wisconsin when the Civil War broke out, and like a patriotic American he enrolled himself as a member of Co. A, Twenty-third Wisconsin Volunteers, and served during the whole of the war, until 1865.

Associated in a way with Dr. Bicknell during nearly his whole life was his brother, the late John D. Bicknell, one of the most distinguished attorneys that ever practised at the California bar, one of the most lovable characters that ever adorned human nature and shed luster on our common humanity, not only a successful lawyer, but an exceedingly successful man of affairs.

One of Our Successful Bankers.

Walter Albert Bonynge was born in Lancashire, England, January 27, 1855. He was educated at Alston College, Longridge, Eng., and in 1872 passed the entrance examination of the Royal College of Surgeons at Dublin, Ireland, intending to enter the medical profession. But he decided to remove to America in 1873, and in 1874 became a resident of Virginia City, Nev., where he occupied responsible positions in the operating and accounting departments of some of the Comstock mines. In 1877 he married Miss Mary A. Davis of that city, and they have two sons, Dr. Charles A. Bonynge and W. A. Bonynge, Jr., residents of Los Angeles.

In 1881 Mr. Bonynge moved to San Antonio, Tex., where he organized a building and loan association and engaged in fire-insurance business. In 1889 he came to Los Angeles and engaged in the same business until 1892, when he organized the Commercial National Bank, and was elected its president, a position he has filled ever since.

Mr. Bonynge is a member of the Jonathan Club and of the San Gabriel Country Club, is a thirty-second-degree Mason, being a member of Los Angeles Commandery, K. T., and a Shriner. He is also a member of Marathon Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and of the Los Angeles lodge of Elks. His chief activity in fraternal circles is among the Odd Fellows, of which he was elected Grand Master in May, 1899. For two years he represented the California jurisdiction in the southern grand lodge of the order. He was the chief factor in enabling the Odd Fellows to secure their building on Main street near Second, and by persistent efforts continuing for twelve annual sessions of the Grand Lodge of California he succeeded in getting that body to erect the Old People's Home at Los Gatos, a palatial affair that cost $250,000.

Besides the Commercial National Bank, of which he was the founder and the continual president, Mr. Bonynge is a director of the First National Bank of San Pedro, of the Traders' Bank of Los Angeles, of the Harbor City Savings Bank, the National Bank at Riverside, the German American Bank at Anaheim, and is now with others organizing a national bank at Bakersfield with a capital of $100,000. With him in this enterprise are associated J. K. Russell, C. L. Claflin, J. O. Mitchell, J. Rockhill.

A Pedal-extremity Artist.

Some person with Chesterfieldian sympathies has said that the man who wears good shoes, good gloves and a good hat is a well-dressed person, regardless of the rest of his wardrobe. If this be so, the sons of St. Crispin are not negligible quantities in human life. Nor are they so here in Los Angeles. Who is better known than Burns the shoe man? He ministers to the pedal adornment of multitudes of people of Los Angeles, men, women and children.

To look at James P. Burns, one knows at a glance what his ancestry must have been, and is not surprised that the midd stands for Patrick. A SEAMAN'S AVARICE.

[Hiram Manly, who tells this story, is living near Hudson, N. Y. The adventure which he describes occurred in 1869, but it left an impression on his mind which is likely never to grow dim. He tells the story with as much feeling as though it had happened only yesterday.]

WHEN the rotten hulk of the Reliance, four-masted schooner, foundered in about latitude 12 degrees south, longitude 11 degrees east, Capt. Harding, the crew of twelve men and I, first mate, rowed away in the small boats as trim and shipshape as you would care to be. The sea rolled in long oily swells, so agonizing for the landsman, but it did not bother us.

What did worry us a bit was a low-lying streak of bluish gray just rimming the water's edge and menacing us like an evil spirit lurking between our tiny craft and the land we knew lay far to the westward.

As night drew nearer the blue-gray streak lowered and spread, and the wind we knew was blowing there whipped it into tendrilly streamers which seemed to reach out for us. We felt no breeze as yet, only a warning cogliness which presaged a blow, and the water began to shimmer the effect of a distant storm.

We pulled steadily at the oars, but we did not waste our strength, for we knew that when the storm broke we would need every last ounce of nerve and energy, that it would be a relentless battle, with our puny human power pitted against the awful strength of the wind and the battering of the sea. There was no hope that we could reach land before the tempest should be upon us. The only question was, could we survive the storm?

When night fell, stars shone overhead, but in the west the curtain of leaden clouds obscured them. Steadily it rose and we could hear the muffled roaring of the wind. The boats tossed about nervously, for the swells were rising. Rank after rank of gleaming stars were snuffed out by that rising bank of black and the very atmosphere became surcharged with a feeling of uneasiness. For my part, I longed for the storm to break. The suspense had us all keyed up to an almost unbearable pitch. Men swore softly to themselves as they tugged at the oars while others mumbled rough prayers and some few looked wistfully out over the sea with eyes that told their hopes were ebbing fast.

With a sudden fury it was upon us. There was no time then for words or worry. Sea after sea piled onto us, seemingly mountain high. One moment we poised on an unstable crest and saw the circle of the black waters around us, the line that marked the limit of vision knicked us with some giant knife. The next we plunged into an abyss with furious dropping that stopped the breath and made one wonder how we should ever rise again.

Aching muscles tugged at the sweeps to keep our bow into the wind and men battled with the fury known only to a fight for life. Bucket after bucket of water was emptied over the side, the balers sweating and panting at their work, although the wind was bitter cold, and yet with all their efforts one splashing wave would all but swamp the boat. Of our comrades in the other craft we could see nothing. It would have been useless to shout to them. We needed our breath, and we could not have helped them.

Of our comrades in the other craft we could see nothing. It would have been useless to shout to them. We needed our breath, and we could not have helped them.

Ship's Carpenter the First Victim.

It was more than we could hope that all should come through the adventure alive. I knew that many of the men were wondering who should be the first to go. It was Simpson, the ship's carpenter. He was emptying a bucket over the side when a particularly wicked list to starboard hurled him into the foaming caldron about us and he sank. He did not cry out and we made no attempt to rescue him. We could not. The boat was tossed away from the spot where he sank and we never caught a glimpse of his body, although while we worked our eyes strained to see him. His was perhaps the easiest fate of any of those among the ship's company, for they say that drowning is a clean and painless death.

We fought on. All night and far into the following day, we kept at our work, and, in fact, none knew when the sun rose behind that canopy of black, unfriendly clouds. Then a man who was struggling with an oar collapsed. It reminded us that we all needed food and drink, so without ceasing from our labors we managed to snatch a few bites of biscuit and swallow a bit of grog. It put new life into us and carried us far into the day.

The storm spent itself and we were still afloat. The seas ran monstrous high, but with the dying of the wind they did not whip us so and the boat rode easier. Sunlight struggled through the storm clouds and glistened on the white crests of the waves and where a patch of blue sky showed overhead the water reflected the color. Just such a scene we had watched many a time from a vessel's deck and thought it beautiful, but there was little room for love of nature in our hearts at the time.

All night it had been a struggle to keep the water from gaining on us, but at last we began to fight it back, inch by inch. Many times we had the boat almost empty when the little craft would catch a big fellow at a nasty angle and all our work would be set at naught again. The men were sobbing at their work, but at least we were holding our own and it was a relief for some of the men to be able to rest a few moments at a time while the others bailed.

I was just congratulating myself on the way the men had come through the ordeal when Collins, in the bow, cried out sharply, clapped a hand to his heart and dropped backward, his head and shoulders trailing over the gunwale. Ready hands lifted him back into the boat and laid him across a thwart. We forced open his lips and poured strong brandy down his throat, but I knew from the rigid distortion of his features and the horrid pallor of his face that no earthly power could restore him. The man was dead, killed I suppose by the effects of the violent action on a weak heart. There was little chance we would need our anchor, so we bound it to his feet and slipped his body into the sea. I would have liked to wrap his body in canvas, but it was not fair to the men to deprive them of any covering which we might need later.

The storm had driven us far to the eastward, although in just what precise quarter of the compass I did not know. Of course we had lost our reckoning and there was no telling where land might be. We had little heart for rowing and allowed the boat to drift with whatever current might be carrying it.

What followed is not pretty, nor is it novel. Many men have told of the hardships of castaways at sea. The story is always the same. There are the harboring of provisions, the weakening of the men, growing thirst and hunger, the beating of a merciless sun by day and the biting of chill, damp air at night, with no strength in unnourished bodies to fight off the effects of exposure.

We dreamed of sumptuous feasts. We waked to hear the splashing of water close at hand, and pulled our senses together to realize that lack of it was driving us mad and that fancy was torturing us by carrying our dreams into waking life.

Sleep seldom came to us, and for my part I dreaded it because of the cruel dreams. One time I waked to find two of the seven men in the boat gone. What happened to them we never really knew, although we took it for granted they had leaped overboard in the night.

The Welcome Sight of Land.

At last came sight of land. Low on the horizon it lay, with tufted spirelike palms jutting upward against a clear blue sky, and we tried to shout with thankfulness. My own voice, frightened me and the rasping sound which issued from the throats of the others wrung my heart. We tried to row toward it, but it was hard work. Our muscles responded slowly and they had scarce the strength to drag the oars back once we had tugged them through. We may have been an hour approaching that coral-tinted paradise, but there is no measure of time which expresses the space it seemed to us.

Luckily, a slight breeze and a current were with us. The boat rode in on gentle breakers and grounded in water not up to our knees. The men would have dragged themselves up the shelving beach and left the craft there, but I knew better than that. I was still mate and the men obeyed me instinctively when I ordered them to pull the boat high and dry where it could not drift away from us.

We staggered toward the center of the tiny island, our knees banging together as we walked, but in the shade of a clump of palms we found water, fresh and cool, and we lay upon our bellies and drank it. It was instinct with me to take of it sparingly, and I warned the men, but two of them gulped and gulped until they were so helpless they could not rise.

The drink had strengthened me and the two men who had followed my example, and we rolled our comrades over and over, as one would do to a man half drowned. It eased them some, but they suffered terribly and in a short time died in agony. We could have sought food, but need of sleep was too powerful for us, and before even we had buried our comrades we lay down and slept late into the night. I waked while still the moon was out, feeling refreshed but ravenous, and with an oar I scooped a shallow grave for the two poor comrades who had died.

Food Cast up by the Sea.

By then the sun was up and I went in search of food. Not far distant was a shallow pool which was a small arm of the sea, apparently, at high tide. Some great rocks jutted from the water, which was then at ebb, and clustered on them I saw great masses of shellfish. I went to gather some of these, but at the water's edge I saw that a number of good-sized fish were floundering about in the pool, perhaps left there as the tide receded or even washed there during the storm. At any rate they were alive although weak, and I waded into the opol and caught two in my hand, for there was not enough water for them to swim away.

With some bits of driftwood and a little seaweed I built a fire, kindling it by using my watch crystal as a burning glass. Over this I cooked two of the fish, and the smell of the fresh meat in my nostrils drove me into a frenzy of hunger. Then I ran to wake my mates. Harper and Dillon scrambled to their feet when I told them I had found food, but Wilson did not stir. We ran to him and tore away the canvas under which he had been sleeping. It needed but a glance to show us he had died in the night. It struck terror into our hearts. After all we had been through we supposed we were safe on this beautiful, palm-clad island, but already three of our number had been claimed by death, and we were lonely. It seemed as though a relentless fate pursued us.

After a comfortable breakfast we set out to explore the island. It was only a short walk around it, about five hours, but we did not know that when we set out, so Harper and Dillon started in one direction and I went in the other. Not a sign of habitation did I discover and after about two and three-quarter hours' walking, I saw Dillon climbing over a bank of sand which jutted down to the water's edge. Harper was not with him and when a few moments had elapsed without his putting in an appearance I became alarmed. I hurried to meet him and asked anxiously what was the trouble with Harper.

Dillon cast his eyes downward and replied in a voice fraught with emotion:

"We will not see Harper any more. He is dead."

"Dead!" I echoed. It seemed that two could not elude the grim power of the grave. The thought uppermost in my mind was "Which between us two will be the next?"

"How did it happen?" I asked.

"We were hot and weary," said Dillon, "and we stripped and went into the sea for a bath. There were sharks, and Harper went foul of one."

I shuddered.

"Could you recover the body?" I asked.

"No," he said. "I dared not attempt it."

"Perhaps it has been washed ashore," I said. "We will go back and look."

A Tragedy Is Revealed.

"No, no," urged Dillon, a little too eagerly I thought. "There is no use. We could never find him."

"Come," I said. "Pull yourself together, man. If his body has come ashore the least we can do is give it a decent burial."

I started to walk rapidly in the direction from which Dillon had come.

He followed sullenly and I began to get suspicious of his actions. I thought perhaps his mind had been turned by the horror of it all. Half an hour's walk from where I had met him, I spied a huddle of rags lying on the sand. I started to run toward it, but Dillon called to me to wait. Without a glance at him I ran the faster and presently I was kneeling beside Harper's wet, draggled body, which had evidently been washed up to the beach. At the moment I knelt beside it I caught a glimpse of white sails jutting above the horizon. At the time, however, I had eyes for nothing but the body before me. The hull of the ship was not even in sight, and besides, had it been bearing down on me a cable's length distant, I think I would have had eyes for nothing but Harper's body.

It showed no signs of mutilation by sharks, but in the left breast was a deep knife wound, ugly enough to have caused his death. In an instant I knew that Dillon had killed him and dragged the body into the sea. I turned furiously, and it was fortunate I did, for Dillon was not ten paces away, stealing upon me, a knife drawn.

I scooped a handful of sand and hurled it into his eyes and before he had recovered from the blindness I had him by the throat with one hand and with my other gripped the wrist which wielded the knife. He was powerful and with a wrench of his arm he freed the knife hand and scratched me slightly in the left side. The sting of the wound made an animal of me. It roused the lust to kill and I was obsessed with the grim idea—to slay the man who had foully done away with a shipmate and who would have murdered me.

With a quick twist of the knee I sent him sprawling and wrenched the knife from his grasp at the same instant. It was all over so suddenly that I know scarcely how it happened, but I remember flinging myself upon his prostrate body and stabbing the knife into his side time after time. It was brutal, but anger and sorrow and fear lest he should murder me had made a brute of me.

When I was done I sat down in the sand, forgetful of the approaching ship, and buried my face in my hands trying to shut out the vision of the body of the man I had slain. It was the memory of the schooner I had seen which roused me. She was above the horizon and I waved my shirt on the end of a long stick for I know not how long, but at last a small cannon boomed from the stern of the vessel and I knew that I was saved. There was nothing then but to wait. When an officer rowed to the beach I made a clean breast of the whole affair and told the truth about the two bodies.

"The man must have had some motive," he said. "What could it have been?"

As he spoke a seaman ran to him in great excitement and showed him two gold coins he had picked up in the sand. We searched Dillon's pockets and found three similar coins there.

"It must be the men discovered these," said the officer, "and Dillon, thinking there was hidden treasure here, wanted to keep the secret for himself."

We searched the beach for hours, but we did not find another coin. At last one of the men came across a human skull and later a part of an arm bone, which probably threw light on the mystery. We came to the conclusion that some mariner had been wrecked on the island and that the coins had been in his clothing. They were very old.

It was the schooner Bristol, out of New Bedford, which had picked me up and as she was short a second mate I served in that capacity on the voyage back to America.

Shoe Heels Originated in Persia.

[Harper's Weekly:] It is said that the heels now worn on shoes had their origin in Persia, where they took the form of flat wood on sandals to raise the feet and protect them from the hot sands.

It was many years afterward that this fashion was introduced into Venice, but the reason for its adoption in this case is said to have been quite different. Here the originators of the fashion were jealous husbands who reasoned that their women thus equipped would not venture far outside the precincts of their dwelling. These heels were called "clogs," and in order to satisfy the vanity of the wearers and perhaps to sweeten the pill—that is, the discomfort of appearing in them—they were elaborately adorned, sometimes being incrusted with gold and silver. The height of the clogs determined the rank of the wearer.

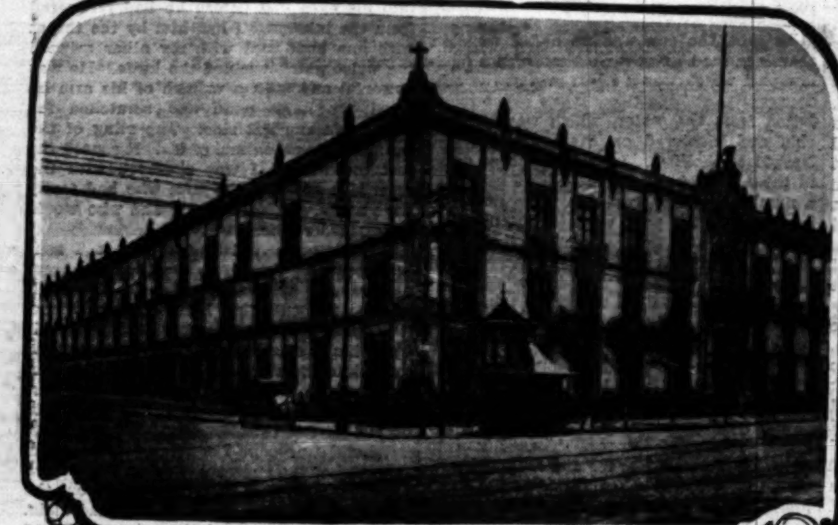
From Our Own Correspondent.

MEXICO CITY (Mexico.)—The revolutionary troubles are crowding the national pawnshop, and scores who have been ruined by the recent bombardment are "hocking" everything under the sun.



The Monte de Piedad.

The National Bank of Mexico.

Thieves Market.

Stores are securely locked.

How would you like to borrow money of Uncle Sam at 1 per cent a month?

I do not mean big long time loans, but something like five, ten or fifty "plunks" to tide you over till next salary day. That is what you can do in Mexico City. The government here has a pawnshop in which you can "hock" your watch or wedding ring, or even an oil stove or a porcelain bathtub. It is known as the Monte de Piedad, or national pawnshop. The Spanish words mean a "mountain of piety," and this mountain of easily getable gold stands just opposite the cathedral and within a stone's throw of the National Palace, on one of the corners of Cinco de Mayo street and the great plaza, right in the heart of the capital. It is a big, three story building which looks like a prison. It has a cross on one corner of the roof, and the Mexican coat-of-arms over the portals. It covers almost a block and it is filled with everything pawnable under the Mexican sun. It has millions of dollars' worth of gold and silver stored away in its vaults, and in the sale cases today I saw a peck of gold ornaments and of precious stones, and also rings and bracelets galore.

In the National Pawnshop.

During my stay I went through the various rooms, seeing people of all ages, sexes and financial conditions borrowing money on articles of every description. I watched the selling and saw crowds looking over the stocks of various pledges to get bargains. In the loan rooms the people stood before the long counters, above which were wire networks like those of our banks, and in the great patio or square, around which the rooms of the building run, I saw them bring in automobiles, steel safes, baby cradles, parlor sets and pianos. I watched the opening of an upright piano. The owner was a pretty girl, dressed in black, with a mantilla over her head, and the tears stood in her eyes as she saw it unpacked. In another part of the patio were a man and his wife getting a loan on their parlor carpet, which still showed the dust of recent wear, and away in one corner lay a half dozen old bathtubs, which had been evidently taken from the houses and brought here as pledges. It may be they will be redeemed by Saturday night.

In going through the building I saw warehouse after warehouse filled with household goods of every conceivable kind. There were hundreds of porcelain and zinc bathtubs, chairs, stools and candlesticks and tables and beds without number. There were great shelves filled with clothing, and organs, talking machines and pianos by dozens. There were also kitchen and cooking utensils and things one would not be able to pawn in the States. The smallest sum loaned on any article is 6 cents of our money, and the loans run from that to $2000. I am told that about 50,000 pieces are pawned every month, and something like $500,000 in loans is given out in that time. All but about 10 per cent. are redeemed, the interest paid in monthly amounting to $20,000 and upward.

How Money is Loaned.

I watched the process of loaning. The moment a pledge is brought in an expert valuator fixes the price, and the loan is only a certain percentage of this. The price is low, for if the pledge is unclaimed and it cannot be sold the valuator has to take it himself, giving therefor the amount of the loan and the interest. As long as the interest is regularly paid all pledges are held, but after this they are offered for sale. In going through the courts, warehouses and salesrooms I found price tags on everything. These showed the original values and the loans, and in many cases the values had been reduced three or four times, and most things seemed to me wonderfully cheap. Indeed, the first price is about what the goods would bring in a second-hand store. This is held for a month, and then, if no one comes to buy it, is reduced. The next month it is further marked down, and this goes on from month to month until five months, when, if not sold, the valuator must take back the article.

I spent some time in the jewelry salesroom. Here were cases of pearls and diamonds, and quantities of rings, brooches and pins set with jewels of every description. I saw earrings with pearls as big and emeralds valued at from $500 to

In the Thieves' Market.

In addition to the national pawnshop there are many private pawnshops in Mexico City. At these the loans are more costly, and 5 or 10 per cent. a month is frequently paid. It is unsafe to attempt to borrow on stolen wares at the Monte de Piedad, but this is not so of the private pawnshops, and I am told that many of them are fences or receivers of stolen goods.

Indeed, there is one market here which has so much questionable merchandise that it goes by the name of the Thieves' market. It is not far from the cathedral and just off of the main market-house of the city. It is on a street once occupied by the palace of King Montezuma and where the first bull ring was afterward established by the Spaniards. On the same spot thirteen heretics were condemned to be burned to death by the inquisition in 1649, and it is only within a century or so that the land has been cleared and the property of the city.

In my walk through this market I kept my hands on my pocket-book, but I was not molested. I examined the goods, but there was nothing of value in the shape of curios or gold and silver set with jewels. The most of the wares seemed to be trinkets, ousehold goods and old clothing. There was a great stock of the latter, and as I looked at the silk dresses and men's suits f one kind or another I bethought me of he warning I had when I spent my first ight in Mexico. My adviser was an old esident. Said he:

"In going to bed on the ground floor you must be careful to put your trousers un-er the mattress and lay your other clothes ear the wall farthest away from the win-ow, especially so if you keep your blinds pen. This country has many sneak hieves and there are professionals who ave jointed rods with a hook at the end, y which they can reach through the bars nd drag out your clothing. You must also atch out for your pockets, and especially crowds and on the street cars. It is not afe to leave your car window open while aveling on the railways and you want to eep track of your camera."

"The Revolution and Its Hold-ups."

Since then I have found reason to apeciate these suggestions. A man travel-g with me had his pocket picked two days ter he entered Mexico, and this has scared

In the Thieves' Market.

In addition to the national pawnshop there are many private pawnshops in Mexico City. At these the loans are more costly, and 5 or 10 per cent. a month is frequently paid. It is unsafe to attempt to borrow on stolen wares at the Monte de Piedad, but this is not so of the private pawnshops, and I am told that many of them are fences or receivers of stolen goods.

Indeed, there is one market here which has so much questionable merchandise that it goes by the name of the Thieves' market. It is not far from the cathedral and just off of the main market-house of the city. It is on a street once occupied by the palace of King Montezuma and where the first bull ring was afterward established by the Spaniards. On the same spot thirteen heretics were condemned to be burned to death by the inquisition in 1649, and it is only within a century or so that the land has been cleared and the property of the city.

In my walk through this market I kept my hands on my pocket-book, but I was not molested. I examined the goods, but there was nothing of value in the shape of curios or gold and silver set with jewels. The most of the wares seemed to be trinkets, household goods and old clothing. There was a great stock of the latter, and as I looked at the silk dresses and men's suits of one kind or another I bethought me of the warning I had when I spent my first night in Mexico. My adviser was an old resident. Said he:

"In going to bed on the ground floor you must be careful to put your trousers under the mattress and lay your other clothes near the wall farthest away from the window, especially so if you keep your blinds open. This country has many sneak thieves and there are professionals who have jointed rods with a hook at the end, by which they can reach through the bars and drag out your clothing. You must also watch out for your pockets, and especially in crowds and on the street cars. It is not safe to leave your car window open while traveling on the railways and you want to keep track of your camera."

"The Revolution and Its Hold-ups."

Since then I have found reason to appreciate these suggestions. A man traveling with me had his pocket picked two days after he entered Mexico, and this has scared him so that he now does not venture out without one hand in his trousers. I am told that the thieves steal wire cable and electric wiring. They cut through the roofs to get into the stores and warerooms, and even try to rob the poor boxes of the churches. The railways lose thousands of bolts from the cars and tracks every year and they even take the fishplates from the rails. Nothing left out of doors unwatched is safe and I am told that doormats are usually chained down. It is not safe to put an ash barrel out into the street and potted plants and flowers are sometimes stolen, while a vacant house frequently loses its lead pipe, electric globes and bath fixtures.

"Just now in these revolutionary times much of the stealing is barefaced and open. There are parts of Mexico which swarm with brigands and banditti and where it is unsafe to travel even by rail or in automobiles. This is especially so outside the cities. Indeed, in a recent railroad ride which I took through a disturbed section I carried my surplus bills in my stocking. I had $150 in American money, consisting of a $100 bill, two twenties and a ten. I put these next my bare feet, with the idea that if my train were held up they would not be found. Fortunately, I got through all right, but the passengers on the same road two days later were robbed by a party of bandits, and lost all but their clothing. In the mountainous districts even one's clothing is liable to be taken, and there are recent instances where men have been stripped and left naked. So far Americans and other foreigners have been robbed only of their money, but such cases are frequent.

Banking and Money Matters in Mexico.

Speaking of money matters, I find it best to travel in a country like this with a letter of credit. I have one issued by the Riggs National Bank of Washington on one of the leading banks of London, and with this I can get money in any of the cities. The place I patronize here is the National Bank of Mexico, an institution whose capital is more than $17,000,000, with deposits which compare with our largest United States banks. Its profits are something like $3,000,000 a year and it has branches in nearly every Mexican city.

Another big bank here is the Bank of London and Mexico, which was established by British capital at the close of our Civil War and which is paying something like 12 per cent. on its stock. And then there is the Mexican Bank of Commerce and Industry, backed by a capital of $5,000,000, some of which is held by the Deutsche Bank of Berlin, some by the Speyers of New York and by business men here in the city, and also the Mexican Banking Company, which has a capital of about $2,000,000.

Nearly all the banks are owned by foreigners. The Banco Nacional is largely backed by French capital, the branch Bank of Montreal by the Canadians, and there is also a Chinese financial organization, with a capital of a half-million or so.

Altogether there are thirty-four chartered banks in Mexico City which are doing a business of several hundred million dollars a month. The total banking capital amounts to more than $100,000,000 in gold, and the dividends paid range all the way from 5 to 16 per cent. The stock of nearly every bank is far above par, and this is the same with the life-insurance companies and many other financial institutions. The country now is on a gold basis, the unit being the peso or Mexican dollar, which is worth just about 50 cents.

What Mexico Owes.

In addition to the ordinary banks there are mortgage banks similar to those existing in France, which extend credit to agricultural and mining enterprises. These, to a certain extent, are under the Minister of Finance, and they are intended to aid in the development of the country by loaning money to farmers and others. One of these banks is known as the Institution of Loans for Irrigation Works and the Encouragement of Agriculture. It was started with a capital of $10,000,000 and a bond issue of $50,000,000, guaranteed by the national government. A few weeks ago Congress authorized the capital stock to be increased to over $200,000,000.

Mexico's Oldest Bank.

The oldest loaning institution in Mexico is the Monte de Piedad, of which I have written. It was founded before our Declaration of Independence was signed way back in 1775, with a capitalization of $300,000, its purpose being to free the poor people from the usurious rates of interest charged by private pawnbrokers. The founder was a rich mine owner, who had what then was the bonanza mine of Mexico. This was situated near Pachuca, and along about the time that we were fighting the Revolutionary War it had already yielded $15,000,000. Its owner was noted for his extravagances.

He gave several warships to Spain and loaned the King $1,000,000. The same mine is still worked, and it is now owned by Americans.

The Monte de Piedad is also a savings bank, and it came near failing in 1884 on account of its issue of demand liabilities based on long-term loans. It then held a cash reserve of $2,500,000 against a circulation of $4,000,000, but a panic came, a run was made and the institution was compelled to suspend. Outside aid was obtained, however, and the bank kept on its feet. Since then there has been a change in the Mexican banking laws, and I am told those now in force are excellent.

The country was put on a gold standard by Diaz about six years ago, and since then the peso has been worth practically 50 cents gold. Before that it ran up and down, fluctuating according to the amount of silver it contained. In 1901 it was worth 46 cents, in 1902 and 1903 only 41 cents, and in 1904 it was 45 cents and a fraction. It then ran up to 50 cents, which value it has held ever since.

There is no doubt about the sound financial condition of the Mexican government. In recent years it has been taking in more money in taxes than has been needed for the government expenses, and the public debt, considering the assets of the country, is comparatively small. It amounts to only a little over $200,000,000, or about one-fifth of what the United States owes. It is very small in comparison with the debts of Europe. France, for instance, is now owing almost $6,000,000,000, and the German empire and states owe about $4,000,000,000. Italy's debt is fast approximating $3,000,000,000, while that of the United Kingdom, including the colonies, is more than $4,000,000,000. Little Japan owes $1,300,000,000, while Switzerland, that little patch of mountains and valleys, owes considerably more than this republic of Mexico.

Hidden Treasure.

I am told that there is a great deal of hoarded money in Mexico. Up to the beginning of the present generation banking was comparatively unsafe and many of the people buried their money instead of depositing it. Even now there are millions upon millions under the courtyards of the rich hacendados or hidden away in the walls.

Men die who are supposed to be worth nothing and thousands of dollars are found in their miserable homes. Not long ago an American brought suit to collect a debt of a man in one of the provincial cities. He got a judgment, but the defendant said: "I can't pay you, but my father will." The father was called on and he took the officials down into a cellar under his house where there was $400,000 stored away in 400 bags each containing $1000. The judgment was for $5000, and five of the bags were handed over in payment therefor.

I understand that the church has a great deal of secreted money, and that the hoards of the common people are just now beginning to come to the banks. The same is true in the Philippines, where our soldiers dug up silver in the courtyards of the houses, and also in India, where hundreds of millions of dollars in the shape of gold coin and jewelry are buried in places in and under the walls of the homes of people supposedly poor.

RINGS OUT GOOD NEWS.

[Tit-Bits:] The bell at Lloyd's, which is rung when a ship, long overdue and reported lost, unexpectedly reaches port, is one of the sensation bells of the world. It was only a few days ago that its clanging announced the safe return of the Snowdon Range, a 3000-ton steamship, which recently arrived in a battered condition at Queenstown after being fifty-two days out from Philadelphia, and long reported lost. Her loss would have cost Lloyd's something like £100,000, and it is little wonder, therefore, that the underwriters cheered when they heard the bell.

The bell now used at Lloyd's is of naval origin. It belonged to the Lutine, which was wrecked near the Zuyder Zee in October, 1779, while taking specie from English merchants to Hamburg.

England being then at war with the Netherlands, the Dutch government claimed the wreck, and £83,000 worth of the bullion was recovered. It was not until 1857 that Lloyd's secured equal rights in the treasure with a private company to which the Dutch had gained concessions. In 1858, with considerable quantities of specie, the frigate's bell was recovered. Since then it has stood in the library at Lloyd's, together with a chair and table made from the Lutine's rudder.

There is a room at Lloyd's known as the Chamber of Horrors, and here are posted telegrams received reporting casualties. Unimportant accidents are not entered in the loss book, but the most serious are not only entered there, but are cried aloud by an official who stands in gorgeous uniform beneath the sounding-board. When, after a week's disappearance, it is feared a vessel has gone down, the owners make an application to the committee at Lloyd's to have the ship posted. This is done by affixing a notice in the Chamber of Horrors, which says that the authorities would be glad of information concerning the boat.

A week elapses, and then a second notice is put up, saying that the boat has not since been heard of. When you read that a ship has been "posted" as missing, you may know this ship is upon the notice-board, and on that day the insurance money is payable, and all who were upon her are legally considered dead. When a ship is posted the old Lutine bell is tolled once. In the very unusual event of a vessel arriving in port after being posted the bell is struck twice, and the caller makes his announcement from the rostrum amid a breathless silence.

ROMANTIC STORY OF A GREENWICH INSTITUTION.

[Tit-Bits.] In the annals of charity it is doubtful if there is a more romantic story than that concerning the foundation of Morden's College near Greenwich, which has lately been advertising for "gentlemen" in reduced circumstances desirous of becoming inmates of the college home. The latter has accommodation for forty-one inmates, who must be men of good character, either widowers or unmarried, and not under sixty years of age, who shall have been either merchants or manufacturers or have been engaged as principals in some wholesale trade or business for not less than ten years, and who, from misfortune, or accident, have become reduced in circumstances.

Morden's College was established by Sir John Morden, Bart., who died in 1708, and who founded the college eight years before his death. He himself was a merchant who, through singular circumstances, thought himself a ruined man.

Sir John, after living for a number of years in Turkey, amassed a considerable fortune, and, deciding to return to London, placed the whole of his merchandise on three ships; but, like the missing vessels of Antonio in "The Merchant of Venice," they did not turn up, and after a time were given up for lost. The consequence was that the once wealthy merchant was reduced to great poverty, and it was only by acting as agent for certain tradesmen that he was able to earn a livelihood.

For ten years, Sir John thus struggled on, and then, to his great amazement, one day came the news that his long-lost ships had arrived in port. In the joy of the moment he vowed to build an asylum for decayed merchants.

He purchased from the Crown the manor of Old Court, Greenwich, and on what was known as the Great Stone Field he erected a college from designs by Sir Christopher Wren. The original college consisted of a chapel in the center and apartments for twelve residents, who dined together in a common room. Since those days, however, it has been considerably altered, and, as already mentioned, there is now accommodation for forty-one inmates, who not only are provided with separate sets of apartments, with furniture, if required, to the value of £25, together with attendance, coals, wood, and light, but have an allowance of £105 annually, with an extra £5 for personal laundry. In addition to the resident inmates, it might be mentioned that the trustees of the college pay to 125 out-pensioners sums of £80 each, and six pensions of £30 each annually to widows of decayed merchants.

Altogether the founding of the college cost Sir John £10,000, and for a couple of centuries "poor, honest, and discreet merchants who have lost their estates by accidents, dangers, and perils of the seas, or by any other accidents, ways, or means, in their honest endeavor to get their living by way of merchandise," to quote the original wording of the deeds of the endowment, have been thus cared for by the munificent bequest of the generous-hearted Sir John Morden.

A Strenuous Highlander.

[Outing:] There is a wealthy man known to every one around Waynesville, who, being asked where he resided, as a witness in court, answered. "Three, four miles up and down Jonathan Creek." The judge was about to fine him for contempt, when it developed that the witness spoke literal truth. He lives neither in house nor camp, but perambulates his large estate, and when night comes lies down wherever he may happen to be. In winter he has been known to go where some of his pigs bedded in the woods, usurp the middle for himself and borrow comfort from their bodily heat.

This man is worth over a hundred thousand dollars. He visited the world's fairs at Chicago and St. Louis, wearing the old long coat that serves him also as blanket, and carrying his rations in a sack. Far from being demented, he is notoriously so shrewd on the stand and so learned in the law that he is formidable to every attorney who cross-questions him. I cite this last instance not merely as an eccentricity of character, but as really typical of the bodily stamina that most of the mountaineers can display if they want to.

OREGON owes to O. N. Denny a great debt of gratitude. Thirty-three years ago, while Consul-General at Shanghai, China, Judge Denny made a shipment of China pheasants to Oregon, the first birds of this kind ever to be sent to the Coast. Mrs. O. N. Denny, who lives in Portland, answering my question about the introduction of these beautiful birds to Oregon, said: "Judge Denny always says that Oregon is indebted to me for the introduction of the China pheasant. One day, shortly after we had arrived in China, we were taking a drive when I saw in one of the fields a China pheasant. We were both struck by its beauty and I said 'We must have some of those in Oregon.' Nothing more was said about it at the time but later I brought the subject up again, and my husband also became enthusiastic over their introduction into the Willamette Valley.

"The first shipment of these birds my husband made was sent to Puget Sound. They were put in care of one of the passengers who was bound for Seattle, with the request that he see that some of them were turned out in Washington and the others sent to Oregon. Unfortunately they were not given proper care, and in reshipping them to Portland they were handled so roughly that of the seventy birds only fifteen cocks and three hens survived the ordeal. Many of these were quite badly bruised. Those that finally arrived in Portland were turned out on Mr. Green's place just north of Portland, but none of them were afterwards heard from.

"My husband determined to make another attempt to introduce them into Oregon. He secured about fifty birds, the larger number being hens. When we were notified that the ship was ready and had moved to Woosong, and would leave next day, my husband secured two large scows, one being loaded with sand and bamboo poles, and upon the other were placed the cages of pheasants, a number of sacks of charcoal, sacks of large millet and small millet, and half a scow-load of Chinese cabbage. A room was constructed of the bamboo poles, located between decks on the ship, in which were placed numerous bamboo perches. The floor was covered nearly a foot deep with sand. My husband stayed there and superintended the work and saw that everything was in the best of condition for the comfort and safety of the birds. The pheasants were turned loose in this roomy cage and not a bird was lost on the way over. They were consigned to A. H. Morgan at Portland, and when they arrived they were in the finest possible condition. Before shipping from China, my husband had had a bamboo cage built and upon arrival at Portland the birds were allowed to go in this cage for reshipment. John Denny of Albany, my husband's brother, came up to Portland to get them. The cage was put in a farm wagon and taken out to Washington Butte, where they were liberated. During the following winter the pheasants became so tame that they would come into the barnyards of the farmers around there and eat with the chickens. It is to this shipment that Oregon is indebted for its pheasants.

"When we returned from China we brought with us ninety more pheasants, embracing several additional varieties, including the Golden, Silver and Copper pheasants, as well as the Cheefoo quail. These cost us from five to nine dollars a pair. Judge Denny planned to distribute them throughout the western part of the State under his own supervision. Unfortunately he went to Mexico on business and turned the birds over to the Portland Rod and Gun Club, believing that they would have the greatest interest in their care, preservation and distribution throughout the State. The Rod and Gun Club sent them to Protection Island, hiring the owner of the island to care for the birds and agreeing to pay him $25 a month to see that they were properly fed and protected from pot-hunters. Shortly after this one of the officials of the Rod and Gun Club embezzled the funds of the club, amounting to about $1500, and this resulted in the disbandment of the club. The club failed to make any payment to the owner of the island, who in consequence claimed the birds. A few of the birds were sold to individuals, but none of them were liberated. And so my husband's public-spirited, patriotic efforts toward the introduction of these additional varieties of game birds to Oregon came to naught.

"Before returning to the United States my husband communicated with Mr. Redding of San Francisco, asking him if he would like to have a shipment of game birds sent to California. Mr. Redding was very enthusiastic and made all arrangements to take care of them on their arrival. He arranged with the Spring Valley Water Company of California, who were also in sympathy with the movement, and who arranged to have the birds turned out upon their grounds. They sowed buckwheat seed in different places and promised that every facility for the feeding and comfort of the birds would be attended to. Between eighty and ninety birds were shipped, extreme care being taken so that they would reach San Francisco in good condition. The ship arrived at the wharf as the funeral procession of Mr. Redding was taking place. He had died suddenly and no arrangements had been made to receive the birds. In fact, no one knows anything about it. The birds, of course, had to be taken from the boat, and no one seeming to know anything about them, the sailors finally gave them away along the waterfronts, and some of them were sold to the city markets. California never knew of my husband's splendid gift, and the State received no benefit from it.

"Judge Denny, some years before his death, in a personal letter, said: 'In China there are fifteen distinct varieties of pheasants, more than any other country in the world can boast of. Some of these take the names of the foreigners who procure the first specimens in that county even waiting for an attempt at their duction into the Western country. ample, the Swinnos, in the Island mosa, takes its name from an who procured the first bird of that and brought it to the attention of lic. The Elliott, Reeves, Amherst, Lord Amherst, and several other are named in a similar manner.'"

The pheasants which had loose in Linn county increased within a few years it was not mon sight to see them in the or the orchards throughout the lamette Valley.

The Oregon Legislature passed their preservation, the act taking November 21, 1885. The law them for a period of six years. lations of the act were less, the pheasants increased ful rate. At the expiration period hunters came from all and elsewhere to enjoy pheasant shooting. Forty was the limit to each hunter munity from being hunted pheasants very tame, so it hunter who could not bring birds at the close of the day. went on until it seemed that work was again to be wiped would be no pheasants left.

ally stirred the Legislature to take ac- n. The limit was reduced and a closed ason established. The limit has gradlly been reduced from forty to twenty, d then to ten, and under the present law t five male birds may be shot in one day, d not to exceed ten in seven consecutive ys. The open season is from October 1 October 31 in the territory west of the scade Mountains, with the exception of three Southern Oregon counties, Jack- , Josephine and Douglas. These three nties, as well as all of the counties of gon east of the Cascades, are closed inlnitely.

Resident hunters are required to pay a nse fee of $1 a year, while non-resident nters are charged $10 per year. On tober 1, 1911, the State Board of Fish Game Commissioners established a te Game Farm. Gene Simpson, who for ny years has been raising pheasants, sed thirty acres of his land to the State a term of three years at $2000 a year tal. The farm is five miles north of rvallis. Mr. Simpson was employed as erintendent of the farm. Since leasing farm the State has reared and released r one thousand China pheasants in ious districts of the State as well as other varieties of pheasants, including Reeves, Golden and Silver pheasants 160 Hungarian partridges. Thirty set- of China pheasant eggs have also furnished without cost to people who e to raise the pheasants and turn part them loose. In addition to the pheas- , other game birds are raised on this , such as Bob White quail, California ley quail, Mountain quail, Bohemian tridges, wild ducks and geese and other r fowl.

he cost of running this farm from May 1911, to December 1, 1912, has amounted lightly over $12,000. The money com- in from the licenses amounts to an rage of about $75,000 a year, while the for violation of game laws amount to $5000 to $10,000 a year. Oregon is blishing game reserves throughout the e. Already sixty thousand acres of pri- land have been signed up with the upon which no hunting can be done. land belonging to the various public e institutions, amounting to 4270 acres, lso made part of the game reserve and new game code includes all public ol lands. There are a good many pri- individuals throughout the State en- d in raising pheasants for sale. They , of course, comply with the rules and lations made by the commission. A amount of the money derived from game licenses is spent in the employ- of deputy game wardens throughout State. The men are shifted from place ce where there is most apt to be vio- of the game laws and are paid an age salary of about $75 a month. The stry Bureau has issued orders to all of rangers and other employees to assist e enforcement of the game laws, and of course, will help very materially.

e of the most enthusiastic pheasant in the State is Blaine R. Smith of land. Mr. Smith's first experience with ants was in the spring of 1901, at a Vista, a little village on the Wil- tte River, not far from Salem. After d of the day's work, and on Sundays, t in most of his time in the fields and ws beside the Willamette River. crossing the meadow one day he y stepped upon a hen pheasant. She and he saw some downy little pheas- scamper into the weeds. He caught of them, but, look as he would, he n't see any more. Being the exact of a Brown Leghorn chick, they so ctly matched their surroundings that ould not see them. By sitting very , however, he soon heard, here and , the little pheasants peeping. He y located and caught twelve of them is way. He put them into his coat t and took them to the house where oarded. finally stirred the Legislature to take action. The limit was reduced and a closed season established. The limit has gradually been reduced from forty to twenty, and then to ten, and under the present law but five male birds may be shot in one day, and not to exceed ten in seven consecutive days. The open season is from October 1 to October 31 in the territory west of the Cascade Mountains, with the exception of the three Southern Oregon counties, Jackson, Josephine and Douglas. These three counties, as well as all of the counties of Oregon east of the Cascades, are closed indefinitely.

Resident hunters are required to pay a license fee of $1 a year, while non-resident hunters are charged $10 per year. On October 1, 1911, the State Board of Fish and Game Commissioners established a State Game Farm. Gene Simpson, who for many years has been raising pheasants, leased thirty acres of his land to the State for a term of three years at $2000 a year rental. The farm is five miles north of Corvallis. Mr. Simpson was employed as superintendent of the farm. Since leasing the farm the State has reared and released over one thousand China pheasants in various districts of the State as well as 300 other varieties of pheasants, including the Reeves, Golden and Silver pheasants and 160 Hungarian partridges. Thirty settings of China pheasant eggs have also been furnished without cost to people who agree to raise the pheasants and turn part of them loose. In addition to the pheasants, other game birds are raised on this farm, such as Bob White quail, California Valley quail, Mountain quail, Bohemian partridges, wild ducks and geese and other water fowl.

The cost of running this farm from May 1, 1911, to December 1, 1912, has amounted to slightly over $12,000. The money coming in from the licenses amounts to an average of about $75,000 a year, while the fines for violation of game laws amount to from $5000 to $10,000 a year. Oregon is establishing game reserves throughout the State. Already sixty thousand acres of private land have been signed up with the State upon which no hunting can be done. The land belonging to the various public State institutions, amounting to 4270 acres, is also made part of the game reserve and the new game code includes all public school lands. There are a good many private individuals throughout the State engaged in raising pheasants for sale. They must, of course, comply with the rules and regulations made by the commission. A large amount of the money derived from the game licenses is spent in the employment of deputy game wardens throughout the State. The men are shifted from place to place where there is most apt to be violation of the game laws and are paid an average salary of about $75 a month. The Forestry Bureau has issued orders to all of its rangers and other employees to assist in the enforcement of the game laws, and this of course, will help very materially.

One of the most enthusiastic pheasant fanciers in the State is Blaine R. Smith of Portland. Mr. Smith's first experience with pheasants was in the spring of 1901, at Buena Vista, a little village on the Willamette River, not far from Salem. After the end of the day's work, and on Sundays, he put in most of his time in the fields and meadows beside the Willamette River. While crossing the meadow one day he nearly stepped upon a hen pheasant. She flew and he saw some downy little pheasants scamper into the weeds. He caught one of them, but, look as he would, he couldn't see any more. Being the exact color of a Brown Leghorn chick, they so perfectly matched their surroundings that he could not see them. By sitting very still, however, he soon heard, here and there, the little pheasants peeping. He finally located and caught twelve of them in this way. He put them into his coat pocket and took them to the house where he boarded. Being unfamiliar with what pheasants should eat, and being afraid to try artificial foods, he fed them angleworms. After the timidity of the first day they seemed to take to their surroundings and eagerly ate the worms and bugs that he provided. Each night he wrapped them in a woolen cloth and put them into a basket at the foot of his bed. He built a small coop of poultry wire for them. Being light and easily moved, each day he moved it to a new place. By throwing a few buckets of water on the ground and laying planks down over the moistened ground he found that angleworms, during the night, would crawl up under the boards. Having two shifts of boards at work, he was able to supply the pheasants with plenty of angleworms. He happened to notice one day one of the little pheasants eating an ant and this suggested an idea to him. Not far distant there was an ant hill, so he put their cage six or eight feet from it. The ants would come under the cage and none ever escaped to tell the story. The little pheasants watched like hawks at the edge of the cage for the coming of the ants.

"When I left Buena Vista," said Mr. Smith, "I was in a quandary. I did not know what to do with my pheasants. I had become attached to them and knew that if I turned them loose they were so tame that they would fall victims to the first man with a gun who came by. I built a cage and took the pheasants to Portland with me. By fall they were strong and vigorous. One of them got out and had a terrific fight with a tame rooster. During the fight the pheasant flew against the fence and broke his leg. I put his leg in splints and kept him indoors until it healed. We became great friends. I named him Dick. He would follow me wherever I went whenever he could get out.

"The following spring I went to Clatsop county and lived in a camp in the woods. Two of the birds I gave to the City Park of Portland. These were the first China pheasants they had ever had, and were the forerunners of the splendid collection they now have. I took the remaining pheasants to Clatsop county with me and turned them loose, hoping that within a few years the pheasants would be as numerous in Clatsop county as they were in the Willamette Valley. There is a wide strip of timber many miles in extent, between Clatsop county and the Willamette Valley, and the pheasants will not travel through heavy timber. They all flew away except Dick, who would not leave me. Within a few weeks hunters had killed every one of them. Dick seemed to realize the danger of being away from camp, and would fly to me and would often walk into the door or fly through the window and sit on the edge of my table while I ate, and putting his head to one side and then the other, would watch critically every mouthful I took.

"One Sunday I left Dick in camp and went a mile and a half through dense timber to visit an old homesteader who had a two-acre clearing in the forest. He had a one-room log cabin, the trail leading a mile and a half back from the road to the cabin. While we were at dinner, I suddenly saw a look of terror come over the face of the wife of the homesteader. Crossing herself, she said: 'The Saints preserve us! 'Tis a bird of ill omen!' I looked around and there stood Dick in the doorway, his plumage shining with its brilliant metallic luster. Just as I looked he flew and lit beside me on the table. My hostess was an Irish woman and very superstitious. She had never seen a China pheasant before, and to have one walk into her door and suddenly fly and light on her table was too much for her nerves. With a scream she went over backward and I had a hard job to convince her that Dick was not a messenger of death or of any other kind of evil, but merely a tame bird that I had brought from the Willamette Valley with me.

"One day a hunter came near camp. Dick was out near the cabin. A moment later I heard a shot and poor Dick's trustfulness in mankind had cost him his life. To this day there are no pheasants in Clatsop Plains, although it is an ideal home for them.

"For some years I made no further attempt to raise pheasants. Later I became interested in automobiles and spent much of my time touring the valley and the Coast. I have just purchased my sixteenth automobile. Notwithstanding the pleasure one can get out of automobiles, I wanted to get something that could respond to my care, and so, a few years ago, I brought up from Los Angeles some imported roller canaries. I could not stand working with them, however, as they are cannibals. They not only eat their eggs but kill their young, so I gave them away. I then bought some imported finches. These are beautiful birds, but they are so tender that any sudden change in the temperature will kill them. Remembering my experience as a boy with pheasants, I decided to take up the raising of pheasants. I secured several dozen China pheasant eggs and canvassed my whole neighborhood for sitting hens. By the first of May I had hatched about fifty little pheasants, forty of which I raised to maturity. The ten I lost were lost because the hens, which were very heavy, trampled the little ones to death. I procured five or six dozen more pheasant eggs and set them under Bantams. Two days before they were due to be hatched a thunder storm came up and killed the entire lot. They are like turkeys in this respect, and cannot stand heavy thunder. I imported some Japanese Silkie Bantams, and during the rest of the season I raised bantams to act as mothers for my pheasants. I raised sixty full-grown Japanese Silkie Bantam hens. I had remarkable success with my bantam hens as mothers. They hatched every egg and raised every chick. Among the eggs I set were twelve Golden Pheasant eggs. The Golden pheasants are easy to raise but are harder to care for after maturity as they are more susceptible to cold and dampness. I sent to Hamburg and secured some Amherst, Reeves, Golden and Pure Mongolian pheasants. I will raise about one thousand pheasants this year. The Pure Mongolian is not a desirable pheasant, the Ring-Neck or Chinese pheasant being preferable. While the Pure Mongolians are just as beautiful, they remain wild in spite of the most careful handling and when strangers, or even their keepers, come near their cage they fly frantically against the wires, often injuring themselves severely. The Chinese pheasant is a cross between a Pure Mongolian and the English Black-neck pheasant, and while it has taken the characteristics of its wild Mongolian ancestor, and while these traits predominate, yet it has inherited from the English Black-neck some of the gentler traits.

"How I located my pheasant farm is a rather interesting story. I remembered the fondness of my first brood of pheasants away back in the early '90's for ants, so I scoured the entire country for a suitable ranch. I wanted plenty of pure water, a beautiful location and several ant hills. This latter qualification was the hardest to find, but I finally secured a twelve-acre tract near Clackamas, with a gentle rise, upon which was a spring furnishing ample water throughout the entire year. An oak grove several acres in extent was on the place, and among the oak trees were four huge ant hills, the largest about eight feet across and four feet high. I had the water piped all over the place so that the pheasants would have fresh running water. I had the ant hills carefully fenced with one-inch chicken mesh wire fence so they could not be disturbed, and near them I built the runways for my pheasants. I put up seven-foot fences, using one-inch poultry mesh wire fencing. At the age of three days I have all my pheasants pinioned, that is, with a pair of shears I snip off the final joint on each wing. This hurts them very little and prevents them, when grown, from flying. I do not allow self-selection and mating, but carefully mate them, putting one rooster in with each six hens. In their native state, of course, they pair off and are monogamous, but when domesticated they are like chickens and are polygamous. In their wild state the hen sits upon the eggs and hatches them. When hatched, the rooster takes care of the brood while the hen lays and hatches another brood. Sometimes three broods are brought out in one season. In captivity their nature seems to change, for while, when wild, the rooster will take care of the little pheasants, when domesticated the hen will not sit on the eggs, and if the rooster sees a young pheasant it will attack it and kill it. They evidently do not want to see their progeny raised in captivity. The pheasant hen will lay an average of 104 eggs during a season. In the wild state they do not lay so many, usually laying from two to three settings, with anywhere from twelve or fifteen to as high as eighteen or twenty eggs at a time.

"One of my best roosters I got in a very peculiar way. My wife and myself were visiting at the State game farm at Corvallis. My wife put her hand down into a cage of little two-day-old pheasants. A moment later she said. 'I believe one of those little pheasants has run up the sleeve of my duster.' The attendant laughed and said: 'Well, if you can get away with the State property in that way you are welcome to it.' I felt up my wife's sleeve and, sure enough there was a little pheasant; so, taking him at his word, I put it into my pocket and brought it home with me. It turned out to be one of my finest roosters.

China pheasants become very gentle and are not at all afraid of their keeper, but in the presence of a stranger they become very nervous. The Silver pheasant is more gentle and more easily handled than the China pheasant, and the Silver pheasant rooster puts up a terrific fight. On my twelve-acre place near Clackamas I have an excellent man, one who is gentle with the birds and has good success with them.

"In addition to the China pheasants we have turkeys there and wild Mallard ducks. The wild Mallard ducks are laying already. When they are once fattened they will not fly away. I was very anxious to secure some California Valley quail for my place, but I could not arrange to secure a permit to ship the quail out of the State of California. I took the matter up with the Fish and Game Commissioner at the Ferry Building in San Francisco, and finally secured a permit to ship 200 California quail through the State of California, providing they were not secured within the State. They are now being trapped for me in Mexico, and I will have them shipped to me within a few weeks.

"The trouble with most people who attempt to raise pheasants is that they make no study of the natural conditions of the birds. They give them cornmeal or grain and then wonder why they cannot raise the pheasants. The small pheasants must be given their natural food. I feed mine angleworms, ants and larvae. When they are six weeks old I feed them chopped lettuce mixed with rolled oats and cracked wheat. After they are three months old I do not have to take any special care, simply feeding them green stuff and whole wheat. China pheasants will not eat wheat unless they are driven to it, in spite of the statement made by the farmers that the China pheasants shatter their wheat and eat it. I recently saw the craws of twenty-five pheasants opened and inspected. In only one was there any wheat whatever, and yet these birds had been killed in the stubblefields where there was an abundance of wheat to be had. With the exception of one pheasant, all of the others had green food and insects in their craw. They are great foragers for bugs and worms and they are worth millions of dollars to the State for the work they do in exterminating the fruit pests and insects."

Wonderful Memory Feats.

[Tit-Bits:] Of the many examples of prodigious memories which have been recorded from time to time, none, perhaps, has been so remarkable as the case of the Rev. Thomas Thelkeld, who was a Presbyterian minister at Rochdale for twenty-eight years, and died there in April, 1806, at the age of 67. Trelkeld's memory first attracted attention when he attended the grammar school at Daventry, where he began to make a close study of the Bible. When a passage was recited to him he could immediately give it chapter and verse, and, on the other hand, if a chapter and verse were given he could at once repeat the passage.

Both at Daventry and Warrington, where he went to finish his education, his fellow-students delighted in putting his memory to the test, and never once was it known to be at fault.

In later years, says Frank Hird, in "Lancashire Stories," "Threlkeld was looked upon as a living concordance to the Bible in Rochdale and the neighborhood, and was constantly asked the most puzzling questions by his brother-ministers, sometimes actually for information, but generally for mere amusement. He was never known to be wrong."

Threlkeld's power of memory, however, were not solely concerned with theology. He was also a linguist, and knew nine or ten languages; while dates were a passion with him, no matter how unimportant. His knowledge of historical dates, of chronology, heraldry, and genealogy was enclyclopedic, and one of his favorite amusements was to go through the succession in the Episcopal Sees and trace the pedigrees of families.

"In only one direction," continues Mr. Hird, "would this wonderful memory seem to have been of direct service. Threlkeld was one of the managers of a fund for the benefit of the widows of Presbyterian ministers, and consequently was frequently appealed to on circumstances connected with the lives of dead ministers; and such was the opinion of his memory that if the books had been consulted, and had reported differently, the error would have been imputed to the secretary and not to Mr. Threlkeld's memory. This was deemed infallible."

On the Trail of Runaways. By Charles R. Moffatt.

ARIZONA ADVENTURE.

IN THE spring of 1884 Herbert Laird and I established our cattle ranch in Apache county, Arizona. We built our house and corrals on the east bank of Cherolon, or Sherlon's Fork of the Little Colorado River, just below the mouth of the great box canyon of the Cherolon. Our cattle, intermingled with the stock of our neighboring ranchmen, ranged between the Cherolon, on the west, Silver Creek, on the east, and from the Little Colorado on the north, southward to the north line of the Apache Reservation.

One of our most serious problems was to keep our cattle from drifting too far southward, into the heavy timber of the Mogollon Range or Black Mesa, or into the Tonto Basin, all then bad Indian country, and cattle once lost sight of in the timber of these regions would probably never be seen by the ranchmen owners again, and we spent a good part of the time riding north of the reservation line, or watching the Tonto trails, but usually returned to the ranch at the end of the week, to replenish supplies and get fresh saddle horses.

We got home late one Saturday night in July; turned loose, to return to the horse range, all of our saddle horses used on the trip except two. I kept Zuni, a half-blood Indian horse, and Herbert kept one of his favorite mounts, Snowflake, a well-bred American horse. These we picketed near the house.

Our saddle horses usually grazed on the mesa, just north of the Cherolon Canyon, about four miles out from the ranch house, and when the next forenoon we saddled Zuni and Snowflake and started out to the horse range to drive in fresh mounts we thought we would not be gone from the house more than an hour or two. Neither of us took rifle, revolver, canteen, extra blanket, or even a coat.

We rode to the top of Sugar Loaf, a small conical hill, from the top of which we could sweep with our field glasses the whole of the usual saddle-horse range. We soon located the horses we had turned loose the night before, and some others, but missed Brownie, a beautiful five-year-old mare, two others of the best of our saddle horses, and both of our team horses—five splendid animals, which had cost us an average of $125 each.

Brownie was caught for us some months before by a cowboy friend, from a wild horse band that ranged near the Cherolon Butte, about fifty miles to the southwest of our ranch, a band originating from a thoroughbred stallion and some fine American mares, estrays from the herds of the early Mormon settlers of Northern Arizona. Brownie had been perfectly broken for ranch work by Cowboy Joe, without breaking her spirit. She was kindly of disposition, tractable, always willing, full of the high life of a free wild horse of the range, and swift as a racer, but had one serious fault, the unconquerable desire to return to her old range with the wild horse band. We always hobbled and also sometimes put a side-line on her when we turned her out to graze.

After satisfying ourselves that the five horses were not on their usual range, Herbert said: "If they haven't been stolen, it is a sure thing Brownie has struck off for the Cherolon Butte country again, and the other horses are following her. I have noticed of late that the team horses tag her around like a lot of pack mules following the old white bell mare."

"Well," I replied, "the earlier we start on the trail the earlier we will see the other end of it. Come on!"

We debated the question of returning to the ranch for food and proper equipment for a trip, but to have gone to the house and back would have required at least two hours, and have further tired our already jaded horses, and we hoped that the runaways did not have much of a start, and that we could quickly pick them up.

About a mile south of the Sugar Loaf hill is the north line of the Crack Country, an area of several square miles of "bad lands," nearly naked sandstone, eroded by wind and rain into numberless hummocks and pits, and riven by earthquake fissures, some of them a mile or more long and from a few inches to three or four feet wide, and apparently bottomless. The westerly edge of this region is, at the nearest point, about three-fourths of a mile from the Cherolon Canyon.

Stock did not often range into the Crack Country, and only a bird could cross the Cherolon, so we thought it probable that the missing horses had passed from their usual grazing grounds by traversing the strip between the cracks and the canyon.

I rode to the brink of the canyon at the narrowest point of the strip, and Herbert to the edge of the cracked ground, from which points we rode to a meeting place in the center of the strip, each carefully scanning the ground for the trail. I found it at the crossing of a shallow arroyo, and signalled Herbert, who said when he came up: "Look at that! Brownie has broken one end of her hobble. See where the chain dragged?"

Easily following the trail of the dragging chain, about a mile further on we found the tracks of all five of the missing horses; at least we were sure of four of them. The team horses were shod with full calks, the only horses on the range so shod, and one of the saddle horses had the left hind shoe missing.

From the point where we found the tracks of all of the horses in one trail they kept together for about three miles, travelling south, parallel with the canyon, making a trail so plain that we could follow it at a canter; a trail which we knew was made that morning, for even in the fine, easily shifted sand the tracks were distinct, showing that they were undoubtedly made after the heavy wind of the night before, which ceased about daylight.

We came into a region diversified with clumps of cedar, there growing with from ten to thirty or more stocks or trunks from a central mass of roots, as the buckeyes grow in California, and quite extensive patches of juniper. In the open glades the grama and saccato grasses were luxuriant, and here our runaways had stopped to graze, and scattered.

We could not be sure that the horses were not enjoying the shade in any one of the small juniper groves, and it took us until 4 o'clock in the afternoon to work the trail out of the thickets, to find that it led out into the Crack Country for about three-fourths of a mile, to a large "tank" of rain water collected in a depression in the sandstone. I doubt that either of the horses had been there before, but horses can smell water a long way.

We let our saddle horses drink their fill, and from a small tank not accessible to the stock got some water for ourselves. It was warm, at least 90 degrees, and ill-smelling, but it was wet, which is the only desirable quality one should expect to find in water of that part of Arizona.

Just before reaching the tank we found Brownie's hobble, the chain tightly wedged between two rocks, so from that point she was entirely "foot-loose," and the trail was harder to follow. There was no soil or sand for several rods from the tank, and we had to do some real trailing to find the direction the horses had taken from the water hole. A slight mark here and there on stone, made by the calks of the team horses' shoes, was about all we had to follow, but finally, about an hour before sunset, we trailed them back into the strip and there found a plain broad trail of all the five, again travelling due south, the trail undoubtedly very fresh.

About three miles further south there is a small hill about midway between the badlands and the Cherolon Canyon. We urged our tired horses forward to the line of this hill, in the hope of getting ahead of the runaways. I was to ride from the edge of the canyon, and Herbert from the edge of the Crack Country, to the top of the hill, to cut the trail, or, not finding it, we could be quite sure we were ahead of the horses.

I rode my half of the line, without striking the trail, and reached the top of the hill just as the sun was setting. With my field glasses I scanned the country, far and near, but to the southward my view was much obstructed by the groves of cedar and juniper. I could not see either the runaways or Herbert.

There was fine grass on top of the hill, and I unsaddled tired old Zuni and picketed him with my riata. Several dead cedars on the side of the hill I broke down and carried to the highest point, and lighted a fire, for Herbert's guidance, and kep it burning brightly until midnight.

As hour after hour passed I grew very uneasy. Never before had he failed to come to an agreed-upon meeting place, but it was a moonless night, and down in the cedar thickets as black as a cellar. I could do nothing until morning.

Sometime after midnight, having slept, I was awakened by my horse rubbing his nose in my face. The fire had burned low, and as I arose to replenish it I heard many scurrying soft feet, and Zuni snorted. That my visitors were only coyotes I felt reasonably sure, but old Zuni, though foaled and reared on the plains, was afraid, and would not stay out at the end of his rope to graze, and I confess that had I had my Winchester and revolver, with full cartridge belts, I would have felt more comfortable.

I heaped wood upon the fire until I had a roaring blaze, and by sitting with my back to the fire, and shading my eyes on either side with my hands, looking out into the darkness I could see many pairs of yellowish-green eyes, a complete circle around me. I think there must have been fifty or more of the beasts. Each time the fire burned down a little they would contract their circle until they came too uncomfortably close, when I would throw fire brands at them, and they would scurry away, to be back almost as soon as I was seated, and I had to keep up the fire-works until morning. I have never known coyotes to attack a man, but have always felt that I did not awaken one minute too soon that night on the Arizona hill.

As soon as it was light I saddled Zuni and rode down the eastern slope of the hill, finding the trail of Herbert and the runaways within two hundred yards of the base of the hill. Hurrying on, in a half hour I met him returning.

"I failed to get in that time," he said, "and I know you have had an anxious night, but I knew you were all right. I climbed a tall tree and could see your fire, but you could not see mine because I was in such a jungle of cedars. When I got to my side of the hill last evening I found the trail so fresh that I knew the horses were only a few minutes ahead of me, and hoping to head them off I kept going until I could no longer see the trail, and it was then too dark for me to make my way back through the cedars. I tried until I knocked the bark off of several limbs with my head. Then I built a fire, for company. I haven't slept. Coyotes! coyotes! I'm sure they wanted to eat me. I have been throwing fire brands at them all night."

I told Herbert that he had not had all of the coyote company, and then said: "Well, old boy! we are about twenty-five miles from nowhere, and we might as well keep going, and tighten our belts in lieu of breakfast."

We found that the runaways had traveled rapidly during the night, a course a little west of south, parallel with the Cherolon Canyon, which was the direct route to the old range of the wild-horse band. We knew that if they got into the rough country around the Cherolon Butte and joined the wild band no mount we had could cut out Brownie or the other saddle horses, so we kept on the trail as rapidly as our jaded horses, ridden hard for a week of range work before we started on the trail, could carry us.

About noon we rode a quarter of a mile up a "box" canyon to a big tank we had visited before, to get water for ourselves and horses. While the horses were drinking and resting, Herbert and I climbed a high mass of rock back of the tank, to examine the country through our field glasses.

We did not see our runaways, but did see, about a mile to the eastward, a party of ten mounted Indians, with several led horses, carrying bulky packs.

Those were the days before the blood-dyed old Geronimo and his murdering Apache raiders had been captured, and although we knew that to that time the Apaches had always raided eastward or southward from their Ft. Apache or San Carlos Reservation, we had always thought that they might come our way the next time. Furthermore, in the Rio de Chelle country, just south of the Utah line, were banded about 200 renegade Utes, Navajos and Moquis, all ugly fellows who had been in trouble with members of their own tribes or with the whites. Strong parties from this band had twice within the past year hunted in the vicinity of Cherolo and had returned northward with pack animals heavy laden with what called "dried venison," but which the men felt sure was largely drief beef; examination of their packs could only been made by a strong armed force, probably not without a fight, so they returned to the Rio de Chelle with spoils, unmolested. Also, from the ands of Navajos and Moquis, whose vations were to the north of us, parties, either with, or without sometimes came south of the Little rado. The reservation Navajos and professed to be "good Indians," but were cattle thieves among them.

By sundown we were well up in the small pines in the foothills of the Mogollons, near the head of the Cherolon Canyon. Until dark we hunted rabbits, with stones for weapons, but failed, and lay down by our fire that second night supperless.

The next morning we rode to a treeless point about a mile eastward of the place we had camped, to get view of the country through our field glasses, and there struck the trail of our runaway horses, gaining hours upon them and escaping many miles of trying trailing by that fortunate cut-off. Apparently the runaways had failed to find the wild horses in their old haunts and were hunting for the band.

The trail led northeast, every two miles of it taking us at least one mile nearer home. In the afternoon we came to the Valley of the Lake, and found that our horses had watered at the lake, but had gone out of the valley again. As there is no other water near, we thought it probable they would return to the lake, and we quit the trail, for the time, and rode to Silver Creek, fifteen miles eastward, where, in the little Mormon settlement of Snowflake, that Tuesday night we got our first meal since breakfast of the Sunday morning before.

We were informed by the Mormons that the stallion leader of the wild horses had been shot, and nearly all of the band either caught or killed by stampeding them into a deep box canyon, and then felt sure that we would ultimately recover our horses.

Having purchased provisions, and borrowed blankets and a rifle from one of our friends in the village, the next morning we went back to the Valley of the Lake, and finding that our horses had again been in to the water, decided to wait by the lake.

The lake is shaped like a capital letter L, and for most of the circumference has marshy shores, but the ground of the point between the two arms is higher and firm. Most of the stock trails led down the point.

From our hiding place in an old brush corral near the end of the short arm of the lake, about sundown we saw all of our runaways come down the main trail of the point. Waiting until they got to the water edge, with saddles tightly cinched and riatas ready, we got in behind them.

As soon as they saw us, with Brownie in the lead the horses attempted to dash back by us. My mount, old Zuni, could not bring me up to either of the saddle horses, but I got one of the team horses, and Herbert, by a beautiful throw, nearly the full length of his riata, placed the loop over Brownie's head, and the instant she felt the rope tighten she surrendered and trotted up to him. The other three were racing for the cedar thickets, a mile away.

Never have I seen a more rapid change of bridle and saddle from one horse to another than Herbert made from his jaded mount to Brownie's back. Swinging into the saddle he said: "Now, Brownie, you mischief, make good!"

With loose rein, not touching her with spur or quirt, urging her by word only: "Go! Brownie, go your best, beauty! your best! catch them!" he went after the three running horses. Over stones, through badger hole bad lands, over clumps of sage or grease-wood four feet high without touching them, the splendid mare was up with those runaways before they got to the nearest of the cedar brush, although they had at least a quarter mile start.

We held them that night in the old brush corral, and the next day went back to the ranch. We had trailed those horses, actually following their tracks in all their meandering, for 125 miles.

In Our Woods and Mountain Meadows.

By Frederick R. Miner.

A FLORAL FEAST.

ADDED to the general charm of a ramble through, or a sojourn in, the woods and mountain meadows of our Southwest Land, is an especial one all our own, that comes of the fact that most of our trees, our shrubs and our flowers of the wild are purely indigenous, and many species decline to thrive if taken from the soil and climate to which they have become acustomed, to other lands, and in many cases refuse to grow at all. That this difference exists is due to the isolation of their habitat, cut off as it is from the rest of the country by the great ocean on the west and arid deserts on the east and south. Thus it has remained as first planted by the loving hand of nature. Sometimes the distinction is very marked, and may lie in some special attribute, such as form or color, or other characteristic peculiarity.

In passing through the mountain forests you may suddenly come upon the marvelous wild-flower display of the high wild meadows. These wonderful meadows may be of no great extent, or they may be miles in diameter; they may be near at hand or far off, tucked away in some inaccessible nook in the high Sierra, where only the animals and the birds and other children of the wild may enjoy them—and that they do enjoy them, in varying degree as their nature is, is true without doubt. In these meadows will often be seen a greater variety of flowering plants than can be found elsewhere in the country, even in the most extensive of the cultivated gardens. They are in the height of their beauty and at their best in our late spring, usually in the months of April, May and June. These months may seem the early spring months in most parts of our country, but in our Southwest Land, if we can be said to have more than the one season, we have no more than two, spring and summer, the former beginning with the first rains of the autumn, and the other commencing soon after the last rain of the year, except in the high Sierras where snow falls, to remain for a short period. The greater part of the wild-flower display will be over by June, but many of the flowers bloom throughout the summer along the streams and in marshy places, added to by later blooming varieties.

The multiplicity and diversity of color of these wild gardens is almost bewildering—gorgeous at times—and it seems as if nature had spilled the full contents of her color box upon them. The flowers possess the color of the cerulean skies, of the sunrise and the sunset, of the soil and of the green of the trees and of the rocks, and all the varied shades between. You will find the blue and white violets, the columbine, the larkspur (growing higher than your head,) the geranium and the golden rod, [illegible], honeysuckle and gentians growing together in a happy jamble of color but un[illegible] to the eye, set among the dark green of great ferns. There is a primrose, the only one we find growing wild, and the shrubby species of the genus that is [illegible]. Among many species of the lily family we note the deep orange of the tiger lily, and we may find an occasional orchid there in the woods, as there are several species of them, some of them quite rare. Great patches of wild roses with their delicate pink flowers you will find here as you will find them all over the Southwest, on the hillsides, in the canyons, on the mesas and even near the summits of many of the high mountains. Patches of strawberries, blackberries, raspberries, currants and other berry-bearing bushes are frequently found on the mountain slopes and in the canyons, and they are all indigenous. The wild plum and the wild cherry bear quantities of fruit which resembles the cultivated varieties but which is inferior in flavor and smaller. High up in the mountain woods in the early spring you may come upon a living column of flame, rising from out of the pine needles. It is the snow plant, which will grow to the height of a foot in a few days and whose twenty-five or thirty bell-shaped flowers, stem and roots are of the red of fire.

The fragrant white and yellow bloom of the azaleas and the delicate masses of purple of the wild lilac add great splashes of color to the woods. The rich burnt-sienna of the manzanita's twisted limbs are frequently met with, and the choke-cherry thrives there. The bay tree, whose leaves when crushed exude the aromatic odor of the bay rum of commerce, grows along the streams, and the sumach's fresh young pink tips add the rich subtle purple-pink tint to the mountain slopes. Although they do not know the winter as the East knows it, many of the wild shrubs and trees put on brilliant autumnal raiment, which contrasts most effectively with the evergreens of the deep forest among which they may be found. The azaleas don their late-summer costume of brightest yellow and orange, and the dogwoods theirs of delicate reds and pinks. Even the poison oak, whose presence in the wildwood is a menace to many a wanderer, adds its attractive brilliant reds to the general color scheme. Many grasses and some of the weeds take on autumnal tints and carpet the ground with rich browns and reds. Berry-bearing bushes lend their flaming colors to the rest, the southwestern holly being the most conspicuous with its great clusters of scarlet berries amid its green foliage that differs materially from that of its eastern relative. The wild maple compares favorably with the brilliance of the far-famed maple of the East. Along the streams the sycamores and the cottonwoods add their quota to the color display, the former with its russet yellows and dull reds, the latter with its great masses of lemon yellow turning to deep yellow-brown.

The woods of the Sierra contain a larger number of distinct species of trees than any other in the world, its coniferous forests are the most beautiful, and some of the trees are the biggest in the world, the Big Trees (Sequoia gigantea,) being the largest trees that grow. These mountain forests are very accessible. The trees grow comparatively far apart, singly or in groups, thus allowing one to travel through them with great ease. The aisles through the trees and the open spaces present many charming and beautiful vistas. Distant purple mountains are seen afar off; the vari-colored slopes of the nearer range show close ahead; the wild-flower gardens present an alluring mass of color; the sun shines broadly on the grassy meadows or sifts through the branches of the trees, flecking the trunks with dancing lights and shadows; a stream, a pond or a waterfall may gleam through the trees reflecting the deep green foliage or the blue of the sky. A great amphitheater may open up before us surrounded by tall pines through the interstices of whose branches we may gaze up at the blue sky and at the fleecy clouds that float like full-canvased ships on a boundless sea of blue.

The greatest and grandest of the conifers, as well as of all other trees, is the Big Tree (Sequoia gigantea) of the Sierras. This tree in an individual case has grown until it reached a diameter of thirty feet with a height of ten times that figure. Many of these wonderful trees were old thousands of years before America was known to the white man. The grandest as well as the largest of the pines is the Sugar Pine, which rears its head nearly as high above the ground as the Big Tree. Running it close for the first honors of grandeur and size are the Yellow Pine and the Incense Cedar, both trees of great beauty. The commonest trees of these great forests are the White Silver Fir, the Red Fir and the two-leafed or Tamarack Pine, the latter covering the greatest area of any, extending for nearly half a thousand miles along the Sierra. One of the most beautiful of the forest trees is the Hemlock Spruce. In direct contrast to these large and beautiful trees is the Juniper, or Red Cedar, and the Dwarf Pine, both of which have a hard fight for existence owing to the exposed situation in which they live. The result of this fight is shown in their gaunt, squatty, disheveled appearance. The Juniper lives on the high summits and ridges of the mountains to an altitude of nearly two miles above the sea, on rocky land where there is little soil. The Dwarf Pine wanders along the edge of the timber line where it is exposed to the full blast of storms that sweep the mountains. Though their life is hard their courage and endurance are rewarded by a long life.

There are many kinds of trees in our woods and forests, and all of them have a special interest for the tree-lover. The trees have been, and now are among our best out-of-door friends. Who can estimate the value the trees have been to us? Our forefathers crossed the ocean in ships made from trees from the old country, and on their arrival in the new world the native trees furnished them shelter from the cold storms of winter, and fuel for the fires that kept them from freezing and that cooked their daily meals. Ships that sailed the four seas, and made journeys of discovery, and that later established a world commerce, were made from the trees. As the pioneer journeyed West he felled trees to make himself a cabin, and the wagon that hauled him there was made of the same material, as were the wagons and carriages of the later generations. Today, although steel and cement buildings are going up all over our land, yet most of us still live in houses made from the trees, and though coal, and gas and oil are utilized for fuel, many still burn wood. What would a camp fire be like made of other things than wood? It might warm us and cook for us, but the sentiment of it would be gone. In fact, wood is about the only material to be found for the purpose where camp fires are made. So the friendly trees by sacrificing their limbs and their lives have provided us with homes to live in, and with fires for our comfort and well-being.

But leaving aside the utilitarian aspect of the trees, who is there who does not love them for themselves as they stand in life in all their beauty, their dignity, and their stability, a priceless possession to any community, an addition of inestimable value to any landscape? They are ever ready to shelter us from too warm a sun, or from too severe a storm. As we look at them they seem to be bowing to us in the breeze in a friendly manner, and if we touch them it seems as though we felt the thrill of their life-current flowing beneath our hands. We may talk to them and it appears as if they understood. In our joyous moods they laugh with us, but when a feeling of sadness steals over us they share our sadness too. They sympathize with us in sorrow and they grieve with us in bereavement. Many feel so about the trees. Edwin Booth once said to Madame Modjeska: "I think the trees have feeling. I do not know what religion I have, but I believe the trees love us when we treat them kindly. Why should we have so much affection for them if they do not reciprocate it in some unfelt and unseen way? I once planted a grove of trees on my grounds. I sold the place long ago, but I never go to New York or back without stepping on the platform to look at them. They are as dear to me as children."

One might linger long to study and to admire the beautiful and noble trees, or to wander through the wild-flower gardens in the mountain meadows, or to lie on fragrant pine needles beneath the great pines and breathe the sweet incense of the trees, to dream the hours away—and what better place to dream?—and to listen to the music of the wind among the pines, and to the songs of the wild birds, and to the rustle of the leaves, and to a hundred soothing sounds that nature renders to her world-weary children who seek her sanctuary in the heart of the wildwood.

A Legend About Tea.

[London Chronicle:] Tea drinkers should remember the legendary origin of the tea plant. Daruma, a Buddhist priest, son of a king, retired to Lo Yang, in order to pass five years in prayer and meditation. Like St. Anthony he was tempted and eventually he fell asleep during his long hours of meditation. On awakening he cut off his offending eyelids that his eyes might never close again, and flung them on the ground, when they were immediately transformed into the first tea plant. It was for this reason believed that tea was a beverage sent from heaven to repel slumber and enable good Buddhist priests to keep their vigils. And tea will certainly keep you awake.

Practical Economy.

WILLIAM CORCORAN EUSTIS, the chairman of the Washington Inaugural Committee, said the other day of a proposed inaugural economy.

"No, that would look odd. It would look too much like Scrooge.

"Scrooge, at a board meeting, cut his finger, and asked for a piece of sticking plaster. Nobody had any plaster, but a merchant handed Scrooge a two-cent stamp.

"'Put that on,' he said. 'It will stop the flow of blood.'

"'Oh, thank you,' said Scrooge; and, drawing forth his wallet, he deposited the two-cent stamp therein, taking out a one-cent stamp of his own, which he proceeded to affix upon his hurt."

Henkels's Pun.

STAN V. HENKELS, a Philadelphia auctioneer, was talking about the wonderful Hale autographs which he sold last month.

"Benjamin Franklin's autographs," said Mr. Henkels, "showed him, as always, to be shrewd and witty. It was Franklin, you know, who, replying to a Revolutionary letter which said, 'The cream of the English army is now in the field,' answered:

"'I suppose you mean the whipped cream.'"

The Main Man.

JAMES J. HILL, whose research laboratory has done so much for modern farming, said at a dinner in Cleveland:

"I am glad, very glad, to help the farmer. There is a certain statue—a German statue, I think—which explains why I am glad.

"The statue represents a flight of steps. On the top step stands a king, with crown and scepter. On the second step stands a nobleman, sword in hand. Then comes a divine in his robe; then a financier with his money bags; then a soldier with his gun, then a beggar with his outstretched cup, and, last of all, a farmer, bent low under a heavy sack of grain.

"A sentence is written beneath each figure. The king says, 'I govern you all.'

"The nobleman says, 'I lord it over you all.'

"The divine says, 'I pray for you all.'

"The banker says, 'I make money out of you all.'

"The soldier says, 'I protect you all.'

"The mendicant says, 'I beg from you all.'

"And the farmer, at the very bottom of the group, the farmer, sweating under his heavy load of grain, pants:

"'Heaven's will be done, but I feed all six of you.'"

Apropos of Clothes.

LOUIS TIFFANY, at the Egyptian fete that he recently gave in his New York studio, was led by the magnificence of some of the Egyptian vestments of his guests to say:

"These beautiful robes make me think of an old fellow whom I once met on a cold day down South.

"The air was bleak, and it beat on the old fellow's flesh through the many holes in his tattered garments. Yet despite his tatters, he had a whole side of bacon on his shoulder.

"'Uncle,' said I, 'why didn't you spend your money on a warm coat instead of on all that bacon?'

"The old man answered gravely.

"'Wall, sah, when I asks my back for credit, I gits it.'

"Then, patting and rubbing his stomach, he added:

"'But dishyer, sah, dishyer always calls for cash.'"

Something In It.

SIMEON FORD, at a dinner in New York, said of the inauguration:

"I am glad that the various inauguration banquets and dinners keep speechmaking down to a minimum. There's too much speechmaking here.

"'Friend,' said one immigrant to another, 'this is a grand country to settle in. They don't hang you here for murder.'

"'What do they do to you?' the other immigrant asked.

"'They kill you,' was the reply, 'with elocution.'"

In the Cage.

ROSE PASTOR PHELPS STOKES, at a dinner in New York, urged that shop attendants of all sorts be treated with more consideration. Mrs. Stokes gave a number of examples of inconsiderate treatment of shop attendants—some grave, some gay.

"A laughable example," she said, "had a railroad station for its scene. A woman, leading a little boy, said to the ticket agent.

"'What is the fare to Monmouth?'

"'Thirty cents,' the agent answered. 'I've told you that eight times now,' he added mildly.

"'I know you have,' the woman answered, smiling; 'but little Willie likes to see you come to the window. He says it reminds him of the Zoo.'"

In the Same Boat.

"LOW-PRICED automobiles are often excellent, but when it comes to sixty-horse power limousines for $250—well, then it's time to draw the line."

The speaker was John Drew. He continued:

"Cars too low in price remind me of the 'Stucko 6' young Billings owned.

"Billings was a little unsteady, and hence wasn't considered a good parti. So, one wild March morning, he eloped with his girl. They made off in the famous Stucko 6.

"But they had hardly been gone ten minutes when, a mile behind, they saw the girl's father in another car speeding after them. Then their engine snorted and stopped, and Billings leaped out and opened up his repair kit.

"'We are lost!' cried the girl. But at that moment the old man also stopped, about half a mile away, and got out a repair kit in his turn.

"In an hour the wild chase was resumed again. For some ten miles the two cars tore onward like the wind. Then a loud report was heard, the Stucko 6 stopped again, and Billings leapt down to perform another job of repairs.

"'Oh, he'll catch us for sure!' cried the girl. But, just as she spoke, her father's car stopped, and in the distance the old fellow's figure could be seen, lithe and active, making strenuous repairs.

"The cars eventually set off again. Again Billings broke down, and again his sweetheart moaned:

"'Oh, there's no hope. He's bound to overtake us this time.'

"But Billings pointed his monkey-wrench back at her father, who was just getting down from his seat.

"'Keep a brave heart, darling,' he said, and a cheery smile lit up his grease-blackened face. 'Your father can't gain an inch on us. Don't you know our cars are both the same make?'"

"'Has he been ill long, Aunt Chloe?'

"'About free weeks, ma'am.'

"'But is his illness critical?'

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, JR., told at Louis Tiffany's Egyptian fete in New York a story that conveys a lesson.

The story was elicited by an account of the daily life of the modern young man who dissipates.

"But where do all these things lead?" Mr. Rockefeller said. "I know a sagacious man of affairs whose daughter came to him one night and said:

"'Father, dear, would you object to my marrying a fast young man?'

"'Not if he's going in the right direction,' was the father's wise reply."

One-sided Justice.

JOSEPH H. CHOATE at a dinner in New York, condemned those who would not arbitrate the Panama Canal dispute lest the decision go against them.

"Such people," Mr. Choate said, "remind me of an old lady whose son had been sued for abusing a horse.

"The old lady testified that her son had been kindness itself to the horse in question, and then the lawyer for the other side took her in hand for cross-examination.

"'Ahem,' he began, 'and now, madam, I desire to ask you a few questions.'

Statesmen, Real and Near.

THE RUSH of work during the closing days of the present Congress, with its forenoon sessions and late sessions, and sleepy, yawning statesmen, reminded young Mr. Billy Murray of the days when he was supposed to go to work at 6:30 a.m. on one of the Boston newspapers.

Getting up in time to be on the job at such an hour as that, before the birds have begun to stir about, was bad enough at best, and particularly for young Mr. Murray, who was in the City Council and up half the night, usually, attending political conferences. Besides being sleepy in the morning, he had made a vow one New Year's day to take a cold sponge bath each morning, and the dread of that ordeal kept him in bed at least an hour after the alarm clock sounded its boisterous lay.

He ordinarily got to his office about 9:30 instead of 6:30, and only his flaxen hair and pansy-like cast of countenance saved him from having mean things said to him long before they were said.

The city editor put up with Billy's hours until he became completely exasperated, and then he called him to the desk and savagely these words he did say:

"See here, fellow! You're supposed to be here at 6:30. You've been coming around here from three to four hours late. Now you'll either show up on time or you'll get out of here and stay out. Understand? If you don't get here at 6:30 tomorrow I shall expect your resignation."

Billy went back to his typewriter and began to write something briefly, day ahead. He took it over and the city ed's desk.

"What's this!" cried the city much in astonishment as in anger.

"The resignation," replied Billy, "No use waiting till tomorrow in. Your ruling is practically No fellow could get up at such as you mention."

Then the city editor began When he got through laughing, Billy Murray still had his job after

HOW JACOB METZER FOUND A BIG CREDIT.

"But wouldn't you rather have it in here?"

"The blace wot I got at home ain't big enough for all the gold I'm gonna put in it—and gold'd be too heavy, anyhow."

That afternoon while Jake was at work in the Bottleburg shops he wondered what disposition his German friend, Bill Blume, who was working by his side, had made of his month's salary.

"Say, Bill," began Jake, "dit you efer see a bill wot got a fifty-tollars in it all at once?"

"I nefer dit," returned Bill indifferently. Bill was thinking of the fifty dollars he had lost the night before over the gaming table. After a long pause Blume spoke. "Say, Jake," he said.

"Wot?"

"Dit you?"

"Sure I dit—I got one alreaty."

"You! Ain't it luck for you! Let me see it."

Jake produced the bill and held it out to his friend. Blume examined it enviously.

"Wot you gonna do mit it?" he asked, returning it.

"Save it, you dummer!"

"In the bank?"

"Sure I ain't—I trust no bank."

In the course of a few years Jake Metzer had gone to the Bottleburg Bank twenty times for a fifty-dollar bill. Each time Harvey Darden had put in a word in favor of the bank, and had extended an invitation to the German to become a depositor. Each time Metzer had promptly declined, and made for the door.

The day after Metzer had hidden his twentieth bill, and his thoughts were concerned with his riches, Blume broke the silence.

"Say, Jake," he asked, "wot would you do if you met a Landsman wot was in trouble already?"

"Help him."

"Ain't it luck?" whispered Bill to himself. Then he said aloud: "Well, you sure got a chanct. I'm in more trouble, Jake! Last night I lost all I got, and fifty tollars on top wot I borrowed from a frient, and wot I got to pay back this week yet. You can loan me one o' your fifty tollars for a couple o' months, can't you, now, Jake?"

"Now, look here, Bill," raged Metzer. "Ain't you got no more sense den to ask me for money wen I told you a tousand dimes alreaty dot you ought to quit your foolishness by drink and gamble nonsenses? I ain't no frient like wot's willing to lose money. If anybody got to lose it, why ain't it the feller wot was such a big fool as to loan it to you?"

Bill made no reply, but it was plain to Jake that he was disappointed and chagrined. The two worked on in silence for the remainder of the day. When the whistle blew that evening Bill Blume had hit upon a plan to get out of his financial difficulty, and at the same time pay Jake for his heartless stinginess.

After supper, Jake, in the quiet of his room, filled his long-stemmed German pipe from a deep tin box, which was full to the top with tobacco. He blew a few puffs of smoke into the air, and then turned the box over on a newspaper. On top of the tobacco appeared a long package, which Jake picked up as tenderly as if it had been something alive. He smiled as he playfully took off the wrapper. Removing a small rubber band, he counted twenty bills, and then counted them again.

"One tousand tollars!" he exclaimed in a half whisper. "I told her I could do it—I told her I could! Ach! Du lieber Schatz! Wen I got enough to pay my passage on top o' that, den I goes back to Deutschland in a hurry, you bet. Ain't it luck!"

The money was carefully returned to the bottom of the box, and then covered again with the tobacco. This done, Jake carried the box to the trunk, which stood between the head of his old-fashioned wooden bed and the wall. Having locked the trunk, he sat down to finish his smoke.

Bill Blume had been standing in the alley, peeping through a small hole in the window curtain of Jake's room, and had seen it all. "Ain't it luck, though!" Bill whispered. He now knew the whereabouts of his friend's savings, and anticipated no difficulty in entering the room after a while. In fact, he saw that by removing a pair of Jake's old trousers which stuck through a broken window-pane he could reach inside and unfasten the catch which held the window down.

But while Bill Blume was watching Jake Metzer, a man who had happeied along in the street stopped around the corner to watch Bill Blume—though he did not know at the time that it was Bill Blume.

As Bill turned from his position at the window the man disappeared. Bill hurried back to the saloon. His pals were there—including the man who had trusted him with a loan. Bill was in high spirits. He sang and told jokes—and best of all, treated the house twice to drinks.

About 11 o'clock Blume entered Jake's room by way of the broken window, and did it so quietly that the occupant was not awakened. He was a full minute finding Jake's trousers. In a second he had his fingers on the trunk-key, and in another second he had the key in the trunk. He emptied the tobacco out of the tin-box, as he had seen Jake do, then pocketed the package of bills, and hastily refilled the box and returned it to the trunk—leaving everything, except the money, as he had found it. The job was finished in less than five minutes. Nothing could have been more simple.

Before Bill reached the street a hand grabbed him by the collar, and a voice demanded:

"What have you been doing in there?"

"None o' your bisness," answered Bill boldly. "Me and Jake's been sitting up playing cards—let me go."

"You're a liar!" hissed the man, tightening his hold. "I saw you go in five minutes ago—and there hasn't been a light in that room for two hours. I've been watching around here ever since you peeped in through the curtain early in the evening. You've robbed Jake Metzer—that's what you have done. Hand over the money, thief, or I'll kill you."

This unexepected attack frightened Bill out of his wits. He handed over the money without a word. The man led Bill to the police station, where he was locked up for safe keeping.

The first thing Jake thought about the next morning was his pipe. The moment he lifted the lid on the tin box he saw that something had happened to his tobacco. The night before the box was full to the top, now the top of the tobacco was down fully an inch. He fairly dashed the contents on the newspaper still spread out on the table, and turned pale as death as he realized that his fortune was gone.

"Mien lieber Gott!" he cried, throwing the empty box into a corner of the room. "She won't b'liefe me, now, dot I efer had it."

He ran to the police station without coat or hat.

"I've been robbed! I've been robbed!" he yelled to the first man he met in the hall.

"I ain't no policeman," retorted the man, "I'm the janitor. Go in there."

The door of the indicated room opened. The Chief came to meet Jake. "That's all right, Jake," he laughed. "Don't be alarmed—we've got the man already."

"I don't want the man," stormed Jake. "I want my tousand tollars—have you got it?"

"No," smiled the Chief, "we haven't, but we've got him."

"Let me see him!" demanded Jake. "I'll knock the daylights out o' dat feller till I gets my tousand tollars."

The Chief led Jake to Blume's cell. Jake looked through the bars and received another shock.

"You! A nice Landsman you are, now, ain't it!" cried Jake, jerking at the iron bars. "Wot you do mit it?"

"I ain't done nothing mit it, you stinginess," retorted Bill. "Some feller grabbed me before I got to the street and took it all away."

'Ach, du lieber Himmel!" exclaimed Jake, darting out into the street.

Jake came to his room and threw himself upon his bed, discouraged, deceived and disheartened. He cried as he had not cried since his boyhood.

He had been on the bed but a short time when he was disturbed by a knock on the door.

"Come in!" He leaped to his feet.

"Good-morning, Jake!" It was the familiar voice of Harvey Darden. "I have come to ask you once more to deposit your money in the bank with us."

"Mr. Darten," wailed Jake, "you was right all the dime. Wisht I'd done it wen you first told me. But it's all gone now—I'm robbed of all dem fifty-tollar bills wot you gife me. Ach! All gone! If I had 'em back—den it would all go in de bank—I'll bet you anydings on that."

"Well, Jake," smiled Darden, "I've got a nice little surprise for you. Your thousand dollars is over in the bank this minute, and your thief is in the lock-up. Come over after breakfast and I'll give you a receipt of deposit."

"Ach, du lieber!" shouted Jake. "Ain't it another luck!" In his excitement of joy he threw his arms around Darden's neck. "I don't want t' wait till breakfast, Mr. Darten—I want t' go right away quick."

Darden led the way to the bank. He quickly wrote a deposit check showing that Jacob Metzer was credited in the Bottleburg Bank with one thousand dollars.

Metzer studied the paper for a minute, and then smiled up at Darden.

"Would you mind to let me see dem bills just a minit?" he requested.

Darden handed over the package. Jake counted twenty bills and handed them back satisfied.

IMPARTIAL REVIEWS BY WILLARD HUNTINGTON WRIGHT.

NEW BOOKS REVIEWED.

GOOD REALISM.

TOPHAM'S FOLLY. By George Stevenson. John Lane Company. New York.

IN "TOPHAM'S FOLLY" we have a book of depressing but convincing realism. Such books as these are healthy signs of the unhorsing of the stuffed dummy of romanticism. George Stevenson at least has endeavored to tell the truth. He has painted his people as they are, without embellishments; and when we close his book, no matter how laborious our reading may have been, and no matter how uninteresting many passages may have seemed to us, we nevertheless get the feeling of having come into contact with comprehensible human beings.

The book is a tragedy, but not a conventional one. Tragedy, as we have come to look upon it through the medium of our melodramatists and romanticists is a sudden death, a suicide, an unrequited love, a stab in the dark, the sudden loss of a fortune, a maiming, a conversion. But these things are merely the theatrical clap-trap of genuine tragedy. There is something persistent in real tragedy, and perhaps the most poignant thing about it is that it does not end in one coup, but continues, day after day, eating into the soul of the individual, degrading him, altering his point of view, dragging him down slowly but inevitably to the sordidness of life.

Such is the tragedy encountered in "Topham's Folly." We have here a picture of a family of the middle class—a lawyer with a wife and children and servants. The tragedy here is that of the emptiness of life, and the visitation of the sins and shortcomings of the father upon the children. Pretense adds to its somberness. The daughter of the household grows up in an environment which hardens and sours her. Two of the sons gradually undergo a psychic metamorphosis, and in both instances come near wreckage.

In telling this story Mr. Stevenson does not make use of the laboratory methods such as are used by H. G. Wells, but stands somewhat aloof from his characters. He paints them objectively, but in doing this, he at the same time reveals the motives which actuate their lives. In spite of its somewhat conventional ending, the book is worth reading by the students of the new realistic school. The book creates an atmosphere of credible tragedy by the steady accumulation of trivial details.

GEORGE MOORE, UNIFORM.

SPRING DAYS. George Moore. Brentano's. New York.

IT IS gratifying news to me that George Moore is to have a uniform edition of his works, that he is already at work upon them, and that one has already been imported and issued in America by Brentano's. Puritanism has stood in the way of American appreciation of George Moore for many years. I, myself, am Victorian enough to think that he is the greatest living English novelist. No one can ever be the same after once having read his "Confessions of a Young Man," which, taken as a study of the awakening of youth to the undercurrents and emotions of life, is one of the most remarkable literary performances of our day. It is an interesting commentary on American publishers that this book is not complete in any importation. The badly bound copy of Brentano's published years ago, and now almost forgotten, is without introduction, and I venture to say that nine people out of ten who have read this book, have read it in its bulky English edition. "The Memoirs of My Dead Life" underwent worse treatment even than this. The American version, published by Appleton's, is so garbled and expurgated in order not to shock too severly the bourgeois prejudices of the prurient members of American society, that certain chapters in it lose almost their entire significance. The principal among which is the one on "The Lovers of Orelay"—one of the most exquisite love stories in our language.

George Moore's other novels, such as "Evelyn Innes," "Esther Waters" and "The Mummer's Wife," have received better treatment. But published as they are, by different houses in America, they have not come in for that appreciation which they deserve, and today one rarely sees a copy of "Modern Painters," or of "Memoirs and Impressions," two books of critical essays of rare and stimulating qualities.

The first book to be issued in the new uniform edition of Moore is "Spring Days," a novel which, though not so mature and searching a piece of work as his later novels, and, in fact, is even inferior, let us say, to "The Lake"—contains more alkaloids and juices than 100 American novels. It is decidedly a book to be read. It contains many indications of what was to follow. There is much brilliant talk about art and music, and its characterizations are done with the hand of a master.

It is not a great step by any means from the George Moore of "Spring Days" to the George Moore of "Evelyn Innes" or "The Mummer's Wife." Much of the fervor of the later George Moore, much of that lusciousness of phrase, and much of that keen analysis into human motives, are to be found here.

A. S. M. HUTCHINSON, AUTHOR OF "THE HAPPY WARRIOR," AND "ONCE ABOARD THE LUGGER."

FIRST-RATE ROMANCE.

THE HAPPY WARRIOR. By A. S. M. Hutchinson. Little, Brown & Co., Boston, Mass.

ONE of the very best of recent romantic novels is A. S. M. Hutchinson's "The Happy Warrior," though, personally, I like it less than "Once Aboard the Lugger" which introduced Mr. Hutchinson to American readers. However, the elements of popularity in this new novel are undeniably stronger. Mr. Hutchinson undoubtedly knows how to tell a story—not merely for its plot interest, but for those finer and more lasting qualities of coloring and characterization.

The story tells of the rightful heir to an old English title, who, for sentimental reasons, refuses to accept it. Percival, the son of a village girl who was the secret wife of the elder heir, is brought up in ignorance of his claim, and another youth—a distant cousin to the late title holder—takes his place. Ignorantly, these two boys are brought together; an affection develops between them; a girl enters into the case, and they both love her. Here is the situation—both trite and melodramtic, to be sure, and yet, as told by Mr. Hutchinson, a natural and plausible one. Later, Percival learns that he can oust his cousin, but refuses, not only because of his friendship for Roland, but also for love of the girl. The son of a brave fighter, he has inherited those fine qualities which characterized his father; and in the end he is killed on the battlefield.

It is easily apparent that in itself the story makes no claim to merit or originality. But only when one has read this story does one realize that a novel depends but little on its subject matter. Though I thoroughly enjoyed the book, I somehow feel that the death of Percival was not necessary, and had the book been one of mere story interest I would have raised a loud bellow at his demise. But the actual facts of the story are of so little consequence that I do not feel justified in finding fault with him for this bogus bit of tragedy. Before the story reaches that point it has presented to us a very readable and moving picture. The book is decidedly out of the ordinary.

AN EXCELLENT handbook for art students is Arthur W. Dow's "Composition." The book first appeared as long ago as 1899, but the principles which it sets forth are more important today than they were then; for at that time the new idea, tiring of the technicalities of art, had not veered over into the abstract and thrown craftsmanship overboard. WITH THE AUTHORS.

Cosmo Hamilton, author of "The Outpost of Eternity," a novel dealing with the dangers of ill-assorted marriages, also the successful play, "The Blindness of Virtue," now filling a Chicago theater, has settled in New York for the winter and will make his home permanently in America.

Mr. Hamilton states that the novel appeals to him more strongly than plays as a medium to work with. He is now absorbed in a new book which his publishers, D. Appleton & Co., hope to publish during the current year. "The Outpost of Eternity" is still in great demand, and its message is spreading every month.

While employed as a police reporter on a San Francisco newspaper, Will Irwin was assigned to a police station in the world-famous 'Frisco Chinatown. He became very familiar with many of the most notorious characters who made the district their stamping ground and learned to speak "pidgin English," the patois of the natives, so fluently that often he obtained valuable information from them that aided the police in solving many of the Chinatown mysteries.

Roland G. Usher, author of "Pan-Germanism," soon to be published, is a Harvard graduate, at present in charge of the history department of Washington University, St. Louis. He is highly regarded as an authority on history, and his recent articles on international politics have been the subject of much attention and controversy.

Miss Elizabeth Kendall, whose new book, "A Wayfarer in China," has just been published has traveled widely, and her Chinese trip, while unique, is by no means her first experience. Turkey and the adjacent countries are familiar ground to her, and she unhesitatingly declares her sympathy for the much-abused country of the Mohammedan. Most of the feeling against that nation is, in her opinion, due quite as much to the carefully prepared reports sent out to the newspapers from the subject nations, as to any real indignities committed by the Turks.

Richard Le Gallienne, whose latest book, "The Maker of Rainbows," was published a few weeks ago, has arranged for a tramping trip in France through Provence and up the Rhone. Later he will visit England, his birthplace, which he has not seen for ten years.

Emerson Hough, author of "John Rawn," is preparing to embark on an expedition into the Arctic Circle early in the spring. Mr. Hough has made several trips to Alaska. He is a great lover of the trail and hunts and fishes in the most out-of-the-way places more than half the year.

Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews, is said to have one of the largest private collections of original French historical manuscripts in America.

Vaughan Kester wrote "The Fortunes of the Landrays" while living at Woodlawn mansion, in Virginia. This was once the home of Nellie Custis.

Frances Forbes-Robertson, a sister of the distinguished English actor, J. Forbes-Robertson, has written a novel entitled "The White Hound," which is likely to appear at an early date.

Isabel Gordon Curtis, author of "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," was born and educated in Huntly, Scotland, the home of George MacDonald. His Scottish romances were appearing serially during her childhood and she says, "I was literally brought up on them. I turn to them still and find them almost as fascinating as I did when I sat before a peat fire, listening to my father read aloud a chapter of some beloved story from the last number of 'Good Words.' "

Harry Leon Wilson, the author of "Bunker Bean," will be remembered as a collaborator with Booth Tarkington in "The Man From Home," which has had such a tremendously successful run as a play, and as the author of "The Seeker," "The Spenders," "The Lions of the Lord," and other novels.

It has recently been learned that Ridgwell Cullum, author of "The Watchers of the Plains," "The Trail of the Axe," etc., was in his younger days cowboy on a large ranch in Western Montana, in the shadow of the Rockies. Here he was employed for three years as cowhand and horsebreaker, finally rising to ranch foreman. In this capacity he was instrumental in tracking and finally locating a band of desperate cattle thieves who had for years been making raids upon the outlying ranches of the district, and through his cleverness the leaders were captured and brought to justice. This thrilling episode has been made the foundation for Mr. Cullum's new story, to be published at once under the title of "The Night-Riders."

Albert Bigelow Paine, who has been occupied for the past seven years with the writing of his "Mark Twain: A Biography," is still busy in going over the Mark Twain manuscripts, to decide which ones are suitable for publication. Mr. Paine sailed recently for Bermuda, the scene of Mark Twain's last days of health.

Will Irwin, author of "The Red Button," lived in California for many years and is an alumnus of Leland Stanford University. It was in San Francisco that he began his career as a newspaper man, and it was there also that he started his investigation of the methods employed by mediums, fortune tellers and the like, which he has used so effectively in "The Red Button."

Marjorie Bowen is a name so closely associated with those stirring romances, "The Soldier From Virginia," "The Viper of Milan," etc., that it will come as a surprise to her readers that this name is a nom de plume. Until recently she has been known in private life as Gabrielle Margaret Vere Campbell. She was married a short time ago, and is now Mme. Gabrielle Costano.

A. S. M. Hutchinson, the young English author whose second novel, "The Happy Warrior," has placed him at once among the writers who count, would have entered the army but for defective eyesight. After studying medicine for a while he took the plunge into journalism. Four years ago, his first novel, "Once Aboard the Lugger," appeared, and gave the author an immediate standing with lovers of good literature. Mr. Hutchinson did actually begin writing his second novel in 1909, and two years later he thought he had finished it. But unfortunately when "The Happy Warrior" was read over for a final revision it did not please its author, and he decided that it must be rewritten. Thus it was not completed until last September.

J. E. Patterson is a famous wanderer, and has been everywhere and done everything, from breaking a wild goat as a boy to breaking heads as a man, in all the wild corners of the world where blows and death are easily come by. At 13 he was doing a man's work in the deep-sea fisheries. From then on his life was one wild rush of Homeric escapades, which led him all the world over and back again. He stirred up hornets' nests in Hindoo temples, smuggled revolutionist literature into Russia, nearly died in an African swamp when hiding from his captain, investigated the habits of howling Dervishes at the risk of his life, etc., etc. Everything happened whether in high spirits, penury, prosperity or danger, with the inspiration of youth behind it. Mr. Patterson's new novel is "The Story of Stephen Compton." He is already known in this country as author of "Love Like the Sea," a novel; "The Lure of the Sea," a volume of poems, and "My Vagabondage," the chronicle of his own extraordinary adventures and wanderings.

Anne Warner French, for a decade one of America's most prolific authors, who died recently at her home in England, aged 44, was born and educated in St. Paul, Minn. "A Woman's Will" ranks as the first of her books, but it was when her "Susan Clegg" stories appeared that her books became popular. With these stories—"Susan Clegg and Her Friend, Mrs. Lathorp," "Susan Clegg and a Man in the House" and "Susan Clegg, Her Friend, and Her Neighbors," she attained a place in the little circle of American woman humorous writers who have achieved distinction. Her best seller, however, was "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," afterwards successfully dramatized. Mrs. French also wrote "In a Mysterious Way," "An Original Gentleman," "Your Child and Mine," "Just Between Ourselves," "How Leslie Loved," and more recently "When Woman Proposes."

LITERARY GOSSIP.

In Reginald Wright Kauffman's forthcoming novel, "Holy Matrimony," are described the results of marriage between a girl of 18 and a man of 50.

One of the first of what will doubtless be a plentiful crop of books dealing with the war in the Balkans is promised in the narrative of Lieut. Wagner, the well-known correspondent, to be published this year.

Frequently Isabel Gordon Curtis has used real happenings and real people as foundation for her stories. This was especially true in "The Woman From Wolverton," where Washington men and women were readily recognized. The reader of her latest novel, "The Lapse of Enoch Wentworth," will debate whether its situations and characters in certain instances have not also been drawn from life.

An inquiry among the libraries of New York City reveals the fact that Louisa M. Alcott's "Little Women" is still by far the most popular girl's book. It has not only held this position at the head of the list steadily for forty-four years, but it has held it with increasing strength each year. The library statistics show that the number of copies has increased continuously, until now there are more than 1000 on the shelves of the forty-odd branches of the New York Public Library.

Holman Day has just been promoted to a new dignity—that of rear-commodore of the power-boat division of the Portland Yacht Club. His boat, the Davy Jones, is a well-known visitor along the coast of Maine. Probably in one of its voyages, her owner ran across the original of that resourceful Cap'n Sproul whose deeds are related in "The Skipper and the Skipped. The scene of Mr. Day's latest novel, "The Red Lane," is an inland one, the boundary between Maine and New Brunswick, the secret road of smugglers.

A surprising number of England's greatest sons, statesmen, inventors, explorers, theologians, artists and men of letters own Devon as their birthplace. Sir Walter Raleigh, Miles Coverdale, the Coleridges, the Froudes, Keats, Eden Phillpotts and Blackmore are but a few of the personages whose early years at least were spent in this county, according to Francis Gribble, who, in his February book, "The Romance of the Men of Devon," takes up the towns of Devon one at a time, and discusses the notable men who belonged to them. The book does not profess the completeness of many county histories; the object has been to select for treatment those names that are most typical, most interesting, most provocative of curiosity. It is not a mere compilation of anecdotes and biographical material, for Mr. Gribble has assimilated all that came his way pertaining to the subject, and has passed it through the alembic of his own mind with the result that the book possesses a personal point of view. A gallery of portraits it might be called, full of wit and big spirits and enthusiasm.

An interesting anecdote of Thomas Hardy's grandfather was told at a recent meeting of the Dorset Field Club. About a century ago, in those stirring Napoleonic days of which Mr. Hardy has written in "The Trumpet Major," the old man was crossing a lonely heath one midnight, when he discovered that two footpads were behind him. He rolled a furze faggot on to the path, sat upon it, took off his hat, stuck two fern fronds behind his ears to represent horns, and, taking a letter from his pocket, pretended to read it by the light of glow-worms he had picked up and placed around the brim of his hat. The footpads, on seeing this extraordinary apparition, fled in terror, and presently a rumor spread in the neighborhood that the devil incarnate had been seen by witnesses ready to vouch as to the place, time and details.

J. Henry Harper, author of "The House of Harper," happened to meet Henry James one evening at dinner in London. Noticing that he looked much annoyed he sat down beside him as soon as the ladies rose, to inquire whether he was not feeling well. "Yes," replied James, "but I have had a very unsatisfactory time. The lady on my left at the table criticised my last novel, which she had just read, probably rushing through it during the day, as she had been told that I was to sit next to her at dinner.

She found fault with me for construction of the plot, and then proceeded to enlighten me as to how it should have been written. All of which was very irregular and unpleasant; so behold me hors de combat."

An excellent idea of Turkish life is given in Demetra Vaka's two books, "Haremlik" and "In the Shadow of Islam." The latter, especially, shows not only the domestic life of the Turks and Turkish subjects, but gives an interesting picture of the organization known as The Young Turks' Party, and makes clear the difficulties which have made it impossible in this country of many nationalities for even the patriots to become really united.

Houghton Mifflin Company announce that the sequel to "Polly of the Hospital Staff" will be ready for publication early in April. Miss Emma C. Dowd, the author of the book, recently had a letter from a physician who has been practicing for fifty-seven years, saying that he hoped "Polly of the Hospital Staff" might reach every nurse and physician.

"The Right Princess," a play based on Clara Louise Burnham's novel of the same title, which has been produced successfully in the West, is soon to be given in the Eastern States, probably opening in Springfield, Mass., under the management of John Cort.

Miss Margaret Prescott Montague, whose recently published novel "Linda" has attracted such attention, has just written a number of short stories which will be published during the coming year in the Atlantic Monthly.

NEW YORK LETTER.

W. H. W.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—My scouts have unearthed the interesting and important news that Macmillan Company are secretly at work translating and getting ready for publication that masterpiece of Freud's "Traundeutung." Freud was in this country in 1899 with William James and other psychologists, at the twentieth anniversary of the Clark University, and it is said that the arrangements for the publication of the book were made at that time. Dr. Brill, who is the foremost interpreter and exponent of the teachings of Freud in America, is translating the work. I have not been able to find out what the American title will be, but it will probably be "The Interpretation of Dreams," or one similar.

There has been so much excitement in England over the works of Richard Middleton that I have waited anxiously for Kennerley's publication of his two books, "Poems and Songs," "The Ghost Ship and Other Stories." They are just from the press and I am disappointed in both of them. Middleton seems to me to fall far short of being a great poet; his work is full of echoes of other poets. In fact, I find almost nothing of his that seems to me to be wholly original. Can it be that English sentimentality—the outcome of Middleton's recent tragic suicide—is responsible for her hysteria in regard to this writer?

A recent editorial in Life regrets the fact that so far we know little about the Balkan War "except such things as can be expressed in figures," and goes on to say, "we would like to read about it; would like these valiant people to stop fighting and give somebody a chance to talk." This desire is not limited to the editors nor to the readers of Life, for in all history there has never been a more dramatic situation than the one at present existing in the Balkans. Writing, as well as fighting, has been going on, however, and the wish for the story of it promises to be realized in a book, shortly to be published by Houghton Mifflin Company. It will be called "With the Victorious Bulgarians" and the author is Lieut. Hermenegild Wagner, the only authorized correspondent at the front on the Bulgarian side. Lieut. Wagner's dispatches to the Reichspost of Vienna, the paper employing him, have been translated for the English papers, and have attracted wide attention. They prove that he is eminently qualified to give a faithful and picturesque account of the war, and his book will be awaited with interest.

Another interesting book dealing with the Balkan war has recently been brought out by Philip Gibbs, correspondent with the Bulgarians, and Bernard Grant, correspondent with the Turks. The book deals with both sides of the struggle, thus giving it a singular completeness. Small, Maynard Company publish it.

The Putnams have in train for publication this spring a volume entitled "New Comedies," by Augusta, Lady Gregory, author of "Irish Folk-History Plays" and one of the leaders in the new dramatic movement of Ireland. The volume contains five plays—"The Bogie Men," "The Full Moon," "Coats," "Damer's Gold" and "McDonough's Wife." The plays have been acted with great success by the Abbey Company and have been extolled. They are distinguished by humor and originality.

"'The Bogie Men,'" writes Lady Gregory, "was written after my return from America last year, and though there is nothing American in the setting, the idea was suggested by some of the attacks on 'The Playboy.'" "McDonough's Wife" was written by Lady Gregory on her last year's voyage to America and deals with an event in the life of an old piper who, Lady Gregory explains, "used to play at the sheep shearings at my father's house when I was a child and who died a few years ago, leaving so great a name that his doings are already exaggerated as are those of mythical heroes."

Which reminds me of the fact that I attended the opening night of the Irish Players with George Jean Nathan who, I have reason to believe, is the best dramatic critic in America. Aside from the acting, the evening was an uninteresting one. Personally I am becoming surfeited with Celtic literature. America is certainly getting her stomachful of Irish letters. Two new books have recently appeared on the Irish movement, and I can already count up ten books on Synge which have appeared recently. The Gregorian chant is tatooing our ear drums to the exclusion of all other singing. The play which I saw on the opening night was "The Patriot," a three-acter, which was recently published by J. W. Luce & Co. There were two one-act plays to follow, but we did not wait for them. "The Patriot" was a laborious attempt to show the decline of masculinity and Irish patriotism. The author took much trouble to dissect it and account for it and seemed to prove triumphantly that there was a decline. I kept saying to myself "Well, what of it?" At the curtain of the first piece, Nathan leaned over. "Let's hit the Muenschner," he suggested. Straightway we forewent the Irish literary movement for Louis Rector's and the South American movement of Maurice.

FREDERICK FERDINAND MOORE.

Writer, Sailor, Cavalryman, War Correspondent and Victim of the Travel Bug. Has Thrice Encircled the Globe.

Why he traveled, Frederick Ferdinand Moore never attempted to answer—but travel he did, and before he set pen to paper or finger to typewriter key to write his novel of the China Seas, "The Devil's Admiral," he had thrice encircled the globe and had fought through enough wars and typhoons to satisfy two or three ordinary human appetites for adventure. "There are some people who simply have to wander the face of the earth," said Mr. Moore, "and I suppose I am one of those, but, I never figured out why it was. I always wanted to see and do new things, so I just went where things looked most interesting."

He ran away to sea when he was 15, shipping as a seagoing cowpuncher out of Boston in a cattleboat bound for Liverpool. For ten or twelve years after that he roamed the world by sea routes as a sailor and newspaper correspondent. If it hadn't been for the Spanish-American War he believes that he would be a sea captain today, and if it hadn't been for the Russo-Japanese War he probably would be an officer of cavalry in the United States army.

"Kipling and the blowing-up of the Maine made a soldier of me," he says, "and took me from the sea, for which I still have a weakness. Then the Japanese pulled off that little affair at Chemulpo, just as I was ready to get a commission in the American army. In the Philippines things were happening which I wanted to see, and I took my discharge by order of the Secretary of War, and let the commission go, preferring to be a correspondent, which promised more action than soldiering for Uncle Sam. Away I went, pursuing the will o' the wisp of adventure, and after the Portsmouth Treaty I found myself in San Francisco, waiting for the fire and other doings in April, 1906. Then I had to stay and see the city built again, and remained with a San Francisco newspaper until December, 1912. It was there that "The Devil's Admiral" was written and its characters are some of the men I knew as shipmates from the day I passed Boston Light outward bound until the day I sat down at my typewriter to tell the story. I would go over the old routes again if I could—either as a sailor or a cavalryman, for both services appeal to me strongly.

"The American cavalry I consider my alma mater, for I learned more, saw more and enjoyed life more as a trooper than at any other time. I consider it as a great school, the value of which the young men of this country do not appreciate. I have seen it make gentlemen out of hoodlums from the Bowery, which is a hard enough job. Some it makes, and some it breaks, but the latter would be in Sing Sing anyway, so the gain is greater than the loss."

WHEELOCK—A NEW POET.

By Cuthbert Wright.

THE BELOVED ADVENTURE. By John Hall Wheelock. Sherman French & Co., Boston.

ONE great difference between the poetry of Mr. Wheelock and the versifying of many gifted contemporaries is that in him an overgrown imagination is indulged in at the expense of a technical sense, while in them an exceptional technique conceals, often very effectually, their remarkable absence of ideas. This was eminently true of Mr. Wheelock's first book, "The Human Fantasy," and in the present volume it is more and more brought home to one that in the possession of the true ecstasy, he stand unique among the poets of today. We discover in those weird jungles of Darkest Poetry which his books suggest, amidst a disconcerting company of strange poetic beasts, solecisms, tangled discords and blunders which a schoolboy would be ashamed to perpetrate, the lyric voice of a Francis shouting his hymn to the sun. The comparison is not inaccurate, for the poet in an extravagant, an overwhelming acceptance of life, approaches in a degree the great Umbrian saint. Otherwise, one does not find in him that courage of opinions (and the verses) of others which so often causes our bellboys of literature to cry: "Where have I seen that before?" The only poet whom he really seems to resemble is Whitman, and this is only tantamount to saying that he has eyes and ears and a nose. Every poet worthy of the name must write to some degree like Whitman. It is primarily true of Mr. Whitman that he is characteristic of his time and his untoward surroundings, not like the other Singers of Manhattan who are absolutely incapable of his depth, but in a peculiarly personal sense. Not to use a too ambiguous term, he is intensely American and he is the one notable fledgling of that great national eagle who soared in spirit above the little town of Camden away into the vast.

Oscar Wilde, in a work of genius, "Intentions," has written of Browning in words which suggest a comparison between Mr. Wheelock and that poet. "Browning," he says, "was indeed great, but it is not as a poet that he will be remembered. He will be remembered as a writer of fiction, as the most supreme writer of fiction, it may be, that we have ever had—Meredith is a prose Browning, and so is Browning."

Well, Mr. Wheelock, be it said with respect, is to a certain extent a prose Wheelock. "The Human Fantasy" may not have been poetry; indeed, I remember listening to several people at the time who declared that it was not. But it was perhaps the most remarkable novel of the year, and the new book approximates it. In a long series of apparently disconnected lyrics, the poet did tell, in a striking and memorably poignant manner, the story of a young life and a great love, while in the present volume there are admirable instances of psychologic subtlety. I recall "Thorns; The Wages of Sin;" and "To the Average Man," the last two remarkable ideas very badly done from the standpoint of good verse. A highly astonishing little thing is "Love in Hell." A young girl, presumably one who, in a literal sense has seen better days, is sitting by a fire toying with a flower. Idly she tears the petals; then suddenly with a petulant gesture casts the whole into the flames, and we read:

The shuddering flower writhed amid the flare
Whispering a "loves you" from the heart of hell.

Vignettes of Paris.

Maren Froelich, a San Francisco painter of talent and distinction, has been holding an exhibition of thirty-five pictures and sketches in the Steckel Gallery, No. 336½ South Broadway, from February 17 to March 1.

Miss Froelich returned to California, not long ago, after four years of study in Paris, where she worked in the Menard-Simon-Castelluccchio Academy, and with Richard Millar and Theodore Steinlen. While in Paris she exhibited in the Salon, the American Woman's Exhibition and l'Union Internationale.

Her Salon picture, "The Chinese Robe," was the largest, and, perhaps, the most important, in the exhibition just closed, though many of the smaller canvases were so charming, and so well painted, that they may rightfully dispute the honors of importance. To me the most delightful pictures of all, because so intimate and so personal and so true, were the little thumbnail sketches of the colorful Parisian boulevards, gardens and markets. While not, perhaps, new in genre, their point of view was unmistakably that of Miss Froelich, who, as unmistakably, has a keen and even subtle vision.

Before she went to Paris the artist won fame in San Francisco as a painter of those lithe and smiling exponents of the classic and sophisticated dance, those graceful modern daughters of Terpsichore, the corps de ballet, and especially of its premieres danseuses. A few of these charming figures were shown, and I must confess that I liked them, even though Miss Froelich wants to paint them no more. They are of the past, it seems—a frivolous (though no doubt delightful,) artistic past that is to be buried and forgotten. At any rate, "Premiere Danseuse," the largest and best of them, was not painted in San Francisco, but in Paris. The danseuse is not a hired model, but a genuine dancer of considerable reputation.

The dancers and the Parisian vignettes are more individual than "The Chinese Robe," which is the usual Salon picture of the clever American woman painter. That's to say, it is well painted and well drawn, good in color, good in textures, from start to finish a la mode. Our talented American girls do these things so amazingly well in Paris—and so very much in the same amazingly admirable way. Fortunately, most of them become themselves when they return to America, especially if they live in regions where the "art atmosphere" is still rather thin.

Miss Froelich strayed to Venice, and did some excellent things there, and to Versailles, from whence we have her lovely records of "The Palace" and "The Temple of Love." Nor has she proved recreant to her native State, as that sunlit bit, "Coming Through the Lupin," testifies, and that notable study, "The Dunes."

The Poster Show.

Two hundred posters in one room!

That was the gallery called forth by the prize offer of the Los Angeles United Fashion Show, which is to be held here on March 6, 7 and 8. All the posters, good, bad and indifferent, were hung in the largest room in Blanchard Hall, where they were seen and admired and disparaged by thousands of people in the course of three days last week.

The show of posters was a decided advance over that of last year. Most of the work was technically better, and the competitors had a clearer (though still not always quite clear) idea as to what a poster really is. Unfortunately, however, many able artists did not compete, as they feared that their work would not be considered on poster-merits alone.

Their fears were groundless. The jury was composed almost entirely of artists or those professionally interested in art, and the verdicts rendered seem eminently fair. Nothing could be more suitable to the purpose in hand than the red and black and white poster which won the first prize, that of Sara Elizabeth Langley. Good, too, in design, though not strong in execution, was the one that won the second prize, and signed Helen Cole. The third prize went to Oscar M. Bryn. Honorable mention was conferred on Henri Gilbert de Kruif, Frances Shrewsbury, Martin J. Jackson, Elizabeth M. Thompson and Alexander Bradshaw.

I understand that there is a movement on foot to start a poster club, which will meet every month for the criticism of work. The club would hold occasional exhibitions. A most excellent idea, and one which should not be abandoned.

ART NOTES.

The fourteenth annual spring exhibition of the work of Southwestern painters will be held in the Blanchard gallery from March 18 to April 1. Everett Maxwell has been appointed manager of the exhibition. There will be no jury.

Frank A. Yama Guchi, a Japanese-American artist, held an exhibition of his pictures and sketches on February 21, 22 and 23 at No. 338½ South Hill street.

A number of recent pictures from the brush of J. H. Sharpe are being exhibited in the Nicholson Gallery, No. 46 North Los Robles avenue, Pasadena.

Forty mezzotints by David Lucas from pictures by Constable are being exhibited at Dawson's, No. 518 South Hill street; also mezzotints by Charles Turner, Alma-Tadema, John Millais, Clouston and John Sartain.

The new picture gallery planned by Merick Reynolds will soon be ready for its first exhibition, which will consist of pictures by some well-known artist.

The Age of Smash.

See the swashing suffragette
When the vote she seeks to get;
Hear her hammer smash the glass,
Ruining the tradesman class;
Anarchy and arson bent,
Terrify the government;
While the cohorts onward dash,
Law and order go to smash
  Smash, crash, crash, smash.

On, ye strikers! with a will;
Smash the loom and smash the mill;
Shout "No God, no master ours"
Scorn and fight all lawful powers;
Raise a mighty marching mob,
Keeping workers from their job;
Then, if your persuasion fail,
Smash the worker's dinner pail.
  Smash his dinner into hash.

Yellow journals, raise the yell,
Smash the trolley, smash the L;
Smash the price of bonds and stocks,
Rip up every safety box;
Smash the boards' and bankers' ranks,
Don't omit the savings banks;
Old men's earnings, widows' cash,
Knock 'em in one general crash.
  Crash, smash, smash, crash.

Politicians join the sound,
Keep your ears fast to the ground;
Smash the law and smash the courts,
Smash big business, smash the ports;
Smash the railroads and the ships,
Put success in deep eclipse;
Frightened horses need the lash,
Run amuck and cut and slash.
  Lash, slash, dash, crash.

Demagogues of every station,
Help the general conflagration:
Pulling down's your sole suggestion,
Building up's another question;
Make the fire roar and crackle,
Hasten on the grand debacle;
Forth with torch and powder dash,
Light the fuse and watch the flash.
  Flash, crash, smash, crash.

Save the Trees.

DOUBTFUL LEGAL REGULATIONS AS TO DESTRUCTION.

IT WOULD appear that the Board of Public Works of Los Angeles has discovered an excuse, more or less legal, for the establishment of a precedent for official tree destruction whenever said trees are in the street proper; that is, between curbs on the driveway, as distinguished from those growing in parkways. Some legal opinions tendered state said board will be liable for any damages resulting from man or beast running against said trees, after the attention of the board has been called to their existence and position (the trees, not the beasts.) Other legal lights shed differing rays, so "to play safe," as the boys say, the board has decided (to date of writing) that all such trees must go.

The writer would humbly submit that it is the duty of such public officials to do all in their power to save the trees for the people, and to that end immediately call the attention of our lawmakers to the need of amending such laws. Such a course is far more commendable than to at once set forth with the official ax, on the lookout for trees of a century old and now long years protected by sentimental and public-spirited citizens. In the streets of Garvanza are five trees, all live oaks, that were officially stipulated by the last Board of Public Works to remain in present position. Maps were filed by the Garvanza Improvement Association (a corporation) showing location and plans for curbing the same with cement curbs under supervision of the board. These official maps are filed at the City Hall, and we believe these trees to be thereby legally protected. At least, any attempt at removal will be strongly contested. A case now in controversy—a giant sycamore in Avenue 64—has a different legal standing, having been curbed under similar circumstances while standing in a county highway; now within the city through annexation of surrounding territory.

Where trees in streets subject to heavy and rapid traffic constitute a menace to safe travel, they should be removed if no other way may be found to safeguard the traveling public. In the case of the Avenue 64 sycamore the street has a width of seventy feet, while two blocks below, or within the old city limits, the street is but sixty feet wide (score one for the tree.) The parkings on said street are officially three or more feet wide. When cement curbs are constructed they should appropriate the parkings for driveways at points opposite the tree, the curbs there touching the walks and returning, by gentle curves, to normal position at points 100 feet each side of the tree. This would add three or more feet to the width of the street each side of tree. This method of treatment, together with the ten feet on one side of this avenue, given the county by private parties, surely would make the seventy-seven-foot street as safe and sufficient opposite the tree as is the sixty-foot avenue two blocks below. This case is treated at length, as it suggests ways to protect trees of like situation all over the city. In many cases known public-spirited citizens have protected such trees at considerable cost. The five oaks in Garvanza cost the local people over $40 each for curbs alone and such commendable efforts and results must not be lightly banished by even official decree.

A Tender Eucalypt.

A TENDER EUCALYPT

AFTER withstanding the rigors of winter for five years, "the broad-leaved gum" (Eucalyptus platyphylla,) introduced to California by the writer, succumbed to our late unusual cold snap. The tree here illustrated had been more or less injured each year for the whole five of its brief career, but is now dead down to the soil. It bore the largest and finest leaves ever seen on any eucalypt in California and in much-favored spots these trees may yet prove sufficiently hardy to merit further planting. Thirty feet from the one illustrated stood another of the same species, not very seriously injured, being somewhat protected by surrounding buildings. The advice given is: plant some more; "it" may never happen again.

Back to the Soil or—?

WHEREVER there is a great exodus of "back to the soil" on the part of any people, a real danger exists. It shows a deep and growing discontent on the part of the masses so moving. This shows not always such an appreciation of rural conditions as a depreciation of city life. It must be admitted that such moves often tend to avert political revolutions, etc., for the closer man gets to nature the more optimistic and the less disgruntled he becomes. But why work on the other end of the problem? Why not bring nature into the city and thereby make life not only more tolerable but more attractive. Municipalities should see that every street is fully and uniformly planted with appropriate trees well cared for. Small parks and breathing places should be found within easy walking distance of every home. We do not so much need great parks for the idle few at great distances from all as small parks and street trees to give a smack of nature about the homes of each and all. Rather than special improvement and beautification, it should be general. Los Angeles, for example, stands not in need of more great parks, we have one alone (of more than 3000 acres) sufficient for all our people for years to come. But in both small neighborhood parks and street trees we are, indeed, sadly deficient. The time is not far distant when we must, yes must provide both, and the small parks will prove a costly yet necessary provision for the masses. Still, "the time will come" and to pooh-pooh the suggestion is but to defer the day of reckoning. Back to the soil may be largely checked by bringing nature to the city.

Our Narrow Parkways.

A CITY official was overheard the other day saying that it is of little use for the city to take over municipal control of street trees and attempt the task of making more beautiful our streets, for our parkings are too narrow. Which shows as much common-sense as a hungry man who will not eat except he get terrapin stew or canvas-back duck. Los Angeles is very poorly supplied with parkways of suitable width, and the city should officially frown upon future street building unless six or more feet is reserved for planting space. But it would be folly to reject the crust because we are denied the whole loaf.

There are instances in the city where trees of a quarter-century growth stand in parkings of eighteen inches or two feet in width, though such narrow spaces are not common. Nearly all in the city are of three or more feet in width, and in such space any tree may be grown so far as root room or feeding system is concerned. Large holes, the "10-cent tree in the 90-cent hole," will go far toward solving the problem. Judicious root pruning, more especially the first year, will also aid in the solution. All top roots should be cut at end of first year of planting, the top pruned to correspond, and an examination made at the end of the second year to see that all expanding roots are below the curb and sidewalk foundation by several inches. The danger line has then been passed. This digging about the young tree is also much needed for the good of the tree, whether roots are cut or not, and is a part of the work too often neglected. A city official is indeed to be pitied who must wait for favorable wind and tide before embarking on this much-needed improvement, more especially when assured that present conditions will always prevail on the streets now in use, or at least with a few exceptions. It has been said "he also serves who merely stands and waits," but it has a special application, and is subject to many marked exceptions. Every city stands in need of officials who will do their level best with what they find, whether in stress or storm, and not idly stand till the clouds roll away and the sun shines fair. Everyone labors then. Emergencies prove the man. We should have a city street-tree commission now and as rapidly plant our streets as is possible, intelligently taking note of existing conditions and plant and care for according to the several needs.

Pruning Young Street Trees.

YOUNG street trees are very generally insufficiently pruned and very few are pruned at time of planting, though many merit such treatment. At one year of age nearly all young trees are too top-heavy and should be heavily pruned. In deciduous trees a sapling ready for planting should look like a hoe handle—just a mere club and at one year be cut back to branches, but little if any more than a foot long. If every tree had 5 cents' worth of pruning during each of the first two years after planting, it would prove far better than 50 cents' worth the fifth year. "As the twig is bent so the tree is inclined" is as applicable to street trees as to any other. Allow but short annual gains in length of branches when young and they will sustain any weight of top when aged.

Street Tree Pointers.

KEEP these points in view when planting either on country highways or city streets: Choose trees according to width of street; pepper trees on a twenty-foot street or Italian cypresses on a broad avenue would be nearly equally inappropriate, though the first is the greater mistake of the two. Allow plenty of space for each tree to develop unrestricted its natural growth and individualism; a green wall on each side is not the end sought. Choose trees that are native or from climates not widely dissimilar to ours; except where long-continued special care is assured. Any kind of a tree is no kind; trees should be ornamental and appropriate as possible, and the cost of caring for the best certainly is less than that required by the poorest. Above all (or rather below all) dig the holes large, deep, and wide, and refill with soil "good enough for any plant."

Entailed Estates.

IT IS somewhat to be regretted that rich Americans do not build homes with the expectation of handing them down to oldest sons through successive generations. We could have much finer gardens were this the case. As it is now each so builds as to derive the greatest pleasure for himself alone—let those that follow do the same. One thing we do, however, of the very best and that park building. American parks and park systems are already, many of them, quite famous, and years to come can but add to their glory. Even in California we have some that will stand the test of time. But parks are but a small part of our landscapes, and we need fine old gardens to give us stately that our "esteemed friend and en-" (as Dooley says,) J. F., has started his return trip to his polar home, we may venture to take stock of the "tropicals" he has left with a faint vestige of remaining vitality. Roots of these plants are very seldom seriously injured by cold, for some of them survive, with a light covering, the snows of the Eastern States. Let us once more bring to prominence, yet merely as garden incidentals, all the bananas, cannas, callas, elephants ears, etc., that we had before J. F. came. Do not aim to make them a fundamental, however, for every winter many of them must go into temporary retirement. Group them about a palm or some plant showing tropical luxuriance yet of sufficient hardiness to prove permanent.

How the Army Fights Fires.

Perhaps the low percentage of fires in the army is directly due to the fact that guard duty is never suspended.

In daylight and dark, during peace or in time of war, armed sentries walk their posts scattered everywhere over the garrisons. Falling asleep while on guard is a serious offense. Therefore the guards are always alert. Never is a sentry mounted on a post without a caution to look out for fires.

One of the first charges in a guard's general orders is one in which he is cautioned to keep a sharp watch for fire. His first duty, in case a building is occupied by humanity, is to warn the occupants. Next he turns in a general alarm. And when fire call is blown by the trumpeter at the main guard house every male member of the garrison, except the guard, is compelled to hurry to the scene of the fire, no matter where he is, and no matter how he is dressed.

It is not necessary that a man should be in regulation uniform to respond to a fire call. Military fires do not wait for antagonists in full dress parade costume, any more than city fires procrastinate while the members of the department make careful toilets.

Once a week, sometimes oftener, in every military garrison, large or small, throughout the country, and there are several hundred at home and in our possessions, a fire drill is held. Not a soul save the commanding officer is advised of what hour of the day or night or on what day of the week a fire call will be blown. As fires do not give warning of their coming, writes Monroe Woolley in Insurance Engineering, it is obviously advantageous that a fire drill should be as uncertain.

When the fire call goes, either for drill or for a fight for life and property, the soldiers rush out of their quarters, leave their posts in the company kitchens, and on the drill grounds, picking up fire buckets and fire axes as they go in the race for the fire station. Some may be hatless, some coatless and others shirtless. But it is an honor to be among the first to take hold of the fire equipment.

All the officers dash for the fire house, too, and the highest ranking officer present assumes the duties of fire chief. A run is made with chemical engines and hand drawn hose carts and hook and ladder trucks for a building designated as the scene of the fire. When the equipment is out for a fire drill the men take advantage of the occasion and play water on the windows of the buildings, giving them a good cleaning.

The amount of fire fighting apparatus furnished the posts by the government for their protection is regulated, of course, entirely by the size and needs of each post.

Clothing as an Insulator.

[The Lancet:] In dealing with persons suffering from electrical shock, if the victim remains in contact with the circuit his body must not be touched by the rescuer, but the latter may pull him out of contact by hauling on the clothing, or he may take off his own coat, insert his hands in the sleeves and then handle the victim with little or no risk.

Almost any article of clothing or material may be used, provided it is dry and of moderate thickness. Dr. Morton points out that death from electrical shock is only an apparent death at first, and that there is practically always a time during which it is possible to resuscitate the victim by artificial respiration.

The Development of Incubators.

By Prof. Frederic H. Stoneburn.

An Ancient Art.

SMALL AND MAMMOTH MACHINES FOR HATCHING.

[Modern poultry-farming depends largely upon artificial methods of incubating the eggs and brooding the chicks. Without incubators and brooders, most poultrymen would find it difficult to hatch and rear the vast number of early pullets required for egg production and the out-of-season market stock, which is usually the source of much profit. Since the introduction of practical, easily-operated incubators, in the early nineties, the poultry industry has made its most rapid development. Prof. Stoneburn has had wide practical experience in the operation of incubators of many different styles, under widely-varying conditions. His discussion of the subject in the subjoined article will prove helpful to the beginner and suggestive to the experienced operator.

Ideal specimens of Silver Campines are shown in Mr. Graham's sketch. This breed has been bred for centuries in the Campine district of Belgium, though its introduction into England dates back less than twenty-five years, and into America even more recently. Recent importations by energetic fanciers have revived the interest of American breeders, and Campines bid fair to speedily gain considerable popularity.

Silver Campines rival the popular White Leghorns in laying, and their eggs are large in size, with shells of almost crystalline whiteness. The breed should prove of greatest practical service to producers of market eggs for the New York and tributary markets.]

THE art of successfully hatching eggs by artificial methods is an ancient one. Certainly it was practiced in Egypt, and probably in China, before the Christian era. The Egyptian method was mentioned by Diodorus and Aristotle, and from time to time by other observers up to the present time.

The Egyptian incubators are huge ovens or small buildings with tremendous egg capacity and operated by men who do their work while actually within the incubator chamber. The necessary degree of heat is secured by burning some combustible material, as dried dung, and the temperature regulated by the proper adjustment of the fire. Of course, thermometers are not used, the operator depending upon his sense of touch to keep the incubator at the proper temperature.

The fireless brooder is also an ancient device, apparently having been used by the Egyptian poultry raisers since the central hatcheries were established. The newly-hatched chicks were placed in small boxes as cages, from the tops of which lambskins were suspended.

In China a radically different method of incubation has been developed. The eggs are placed in large earthenware jars, heated by a small fire underneath. At hatching time the eggs are spread out on shelves and closely covered with soft blankets. The number of incubators is increased according to the necessities of the business. It will be noted that the Chinese hatcheries use batteries of small "machines" and the Egyptian establishments the "mammoth" incubators.

Professional producers of baby chicks in China frequently open up small shops. The work of hatching is done in a rear room, the front portion being reserved for a store or office, where the eggs are received and the chicks delivered. A recent observer states that the operators of these Chinese hatching establishments are able to determine the sex of chicks as soon as these are hatched. When taken from the shelves the chicks are divided, cockerels being kept separate from the pullets. Purchasers may then secure the sex they desire, egg producers taking the pullets and growers of table poultry the cockerels.

These Egyptian and Chinese operators are said to be wonderfully expert, regularly hatching a large proportion of the eggs incubated. The knowledge of the art seems to be confined to certain families, and is handed down from father to son.

The development of successful incubators in Europe and America has taken place within comparatively recent years. As late as 1837 the author of a book on poultry-keeping refers to artificial methods of incubation, as follows:

"Our author details several methods of hatching chicks by artificial heat, but observes no person will attempt artificial hatching but from the motive of mere curiosity, and that motive must, indeed, be powerful to carry one through the endless labor and attendance required."

If the writer of the above paragraph could visit the average commercial poultry farm of today, he would doubtless quickly change his opinion.

Like most other appliances in common use, the modern incubator has been evolved through years of careful work on the part of a large number of individuals. Perfection is seldom reached on the first attempt.

One of the earliest European machines—if it may be dignified with that name—in which chicks were hatched appeared in France. A contemporary writer describes this as follows:

"The last system of artificial hatching is that shown me by M. Manoury

The Great Layer of Belgium.

BY LOUIS PAUL GRAHAM.

Campines, both Silver and Golden, are at present just beginning to ride the wave of popularity among American poultry breeders. The Golden Campine is of recent introduction, and is probably less known than the Silver Campine, which enjoyed a short-lived "boom" in America about eighteen or twenty years ago. As is usual when a quick demand is created for a fowl of foreign lineage, great numbers of inferior specimens are dumped upon the American market. This procedure in the first boom of the Silver Campine promptly smothered its bid for popularity. About seven years ago an enthusiastic fancier, knowing the economic and decorative value of the real Silver Campine imported and bred some specimens of this fowl possessing real merit. He used plenty of printer's ink and made many exhibits of the fowls together with their eggs at the large poultry shows. This Silver Campine was something entirely different from the refuse that had been formerly imported, and its great laying qualities and fine large eggs rapidly made converts among discriminating poultrymen. For at least six years Silver Campine eggs have won virtually all prizes offered on whitest eggs, best white eggs, largest white eggs and best display of white eggs at the Boston poultry show. This has probably done more to popularize the breed and give it standing than has its beauty of plumage.

The Silver Campine is a native of Belgium. It has been the fowl generally bred throughout that country for centuries and is found there in both single and rose-comb varieties. It was imported from Belgium to England, where those ardent fanciers improved it both in color and egg production, and from England it journeyed to America. Some breeders have been imported direct from Belgium to America, although the latter are more of the type known as Braekel—larger and coarser than the refined English Campine.

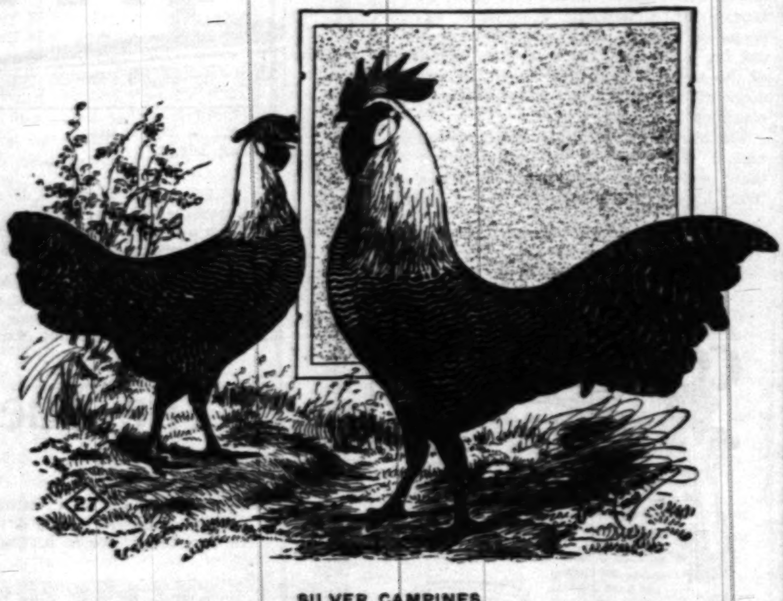
This is a fowl of the Mediterranean type, small of bone and body, active and nervous. Like the Mediterraneans it is a heavy layer, great claims for it having been made in this direction. Its eggs are exceptionally white—a beautiful, rich, pearly white—probably the whitest egg laid by any fowl, and therefore very attractive. For supplying markets demanding white eggs, Campines furnish eggs which, on account of their size and extreme whiteness, would command the topmost egg prices.

The fowl itself is the long, narrow so-called egg type, with full, round breast, and is characterized by alertness and activity. Its plumage is beautiful silvery white, marked by broad bands of glossy, greenish black. The white between these bands is narrow, and the straighter the bars the more preferred the specimen. The legs are blue and the skin white. These are the only drawbacks to its popularity with the American public, which has been so long schooled to prefer yellow skin and yellow legs on dressed poultry.

The fowls can be handled as successfully as Leghorns. They are of about the same size; will stand confinement equally well, but, as with Leghorns, will do better on range. They may be fed about the same, and the chicks develop with equal rapidity.

The eggs are as generally fertile and hatch as well as the Leghorns.

For a flock of "egg machines," either on farm range or for a home flock, the Silver Campine will fit perfectly, and its handsome black and white coloring is not only attractive, but will not show the soil of confinement easily.



SILVER CAMPINES.

A fowl that is winning the first rank through its great laying qualities and the size and whiteness of the eggs that it produces. They have been known and bred extensively in Belgium for centuries, but English and American breeders have adopted them but lately. They are about the size of the Leghorns, alert and active, good foragers, doing well on range. They are adaptable alike to large farms or small poultry plants, as they are real egg machines. The hens are non-sitters and their eggs must be hatched and the chicks reared either by artificial means or other hens. The chicks are active, hardy and grow rapidly, reaching maturity about as promptly as do the Leghorns.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] There are two systems in use for the feeding of fowls, in one of which all the feed is given dry and in the other of which one or more of the daily feeds consists of a moistened mash. For convenience they may be termed the "dry feed" and the "mash" systems, although in the dry feed system a dry mash is often fed. Dry feeding is used by many where it is not convenient to make and feed a moistened mash. The greatest advantages to be derived from the dry system are the saving of labor and the lessened danger of bowel trouble resulting from sloppy or soured mashes.

[Baltimore American:] A large part of the heavy loss from bad eggs can be obviated by the production of infertile eggs. This has been demonstrated beyond a doubt by the investigations concerning the improvement of the farm egg which during the past two years have been conducted in the Middle West by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture.

[New York Sun:] A Pekin duckling weighs about two ounces when hatched, and should gain weight rapidly, weighing one pound at four weeks of age, four pounds when eight weeks old and five to six pounds when ten years old. Ducklings should be marketed at from nine to twelve weeks old. After that they gain weight very slowly and there is no increase in profit over that realized when they are twelve weeks old. Geese grow about as rapidly as ducks, but are about twice as heavy when hatched. Turkeys do most of their growing after they are three months old.

[New York Sun:] The effect of meat rations was tested at the West Virginia experiment station, where one pen of fowls received a ration largely of corn and other starchy grains while another pen was fed largely on meat and green cut bone.

The meat-fed birds laid 7555 eggs, while the grain-fed birds laid 3431, or less than half as many as those receiving the nitrogenous rations. The eggs from the meat-fed fowls were larger, much firmer, rather better and produced far more vigorous chickens than those of the others. Both lots of fowls remained in a healthy, vigorous condition.

[Baltimore American:] Many persons neglect to provide each house with a grit and shell box. This is essential to the health of the fowls and the furnishing of material to form the shell of the egg. Remember that a hen has no molars with which to grind her food and meat, therefore, rely entirely upon the grit that she eats to perform this service. Therefore, chickens should be provided with plenty of grit. If you do not attend to this you are treating the hen precisely as you would be treated should all of your teeth be extracted and no false set provided in their stead.

[Philadelphia Record:] The day has gone by when a hen is a hen, and an egg is an egg. There is a difference in hens and in eggs, and many enterprising farmers are waking up to the fact. A standard or thoroughbred flock will grow uniform in size, as well as color; mature more quickly and produce eggs more uniform, both in size and color, and more of them on less feed than any scrub or mongrel stock that ever existed, and all you need to do to prove it is to try it. It is this uniform, attractive product that brings this extra price in both eggs and meat.

Motto: He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten the cause.—[Henry Ward Beecher.

Erroneous Impressions.

CERTAIN results are sometimes obtained without understanding the why and wherefore. This does not make any material difference as long as the object desired is obtained, except that the statements are sometimes misleading, as in the following case. A noted singer has reduced her weight thirty pounds in six months. The same might have been done in as many weeks. This reduction she attributes to the omission of meat—eating it only once in thirty days, and this she does "only to prove," as she claims, "that she is not a vegetarian."

We give herewith her daily bill of fare that we may consider it and comment as to the correctness of the theory:

At 6—Rise and take tepid bath, followed by ice spray; no other exercise.

At 6:30—Go over plan-book for the day; arrange time schedule for theater.

At 8—Breakfast. Juice of lemon, grape fruit, tea and eggs.

At 1—Tea and toast.

At 6—Wafers and tea.

At midnight—Caviar sandwich and tea; then to bed.

To use her own words: "We eat too much meat. Six months ago I weighed 216 pounds, now I weigh 179 pounds. I owe the reduction to lemon juice, grape fruit, hard work, worry and abstinence from meat."

It is a well-known fact that acids reduce and sweets and starches increase one's weight. But the omission of the meat from the daily menu is placing the credit where it does not belong; that is, if the meats were good beef or mutton—not wienerwursts, pork chops, etc. The lean of meat furnishes the proteid, or flesh-forming, not fat-forming; the former (the proteid) being necessary for the repair of the system. "Meat," she says, "is the chief secret" of the reduction; but she makes a serious mistake in substituting eggs for meat, as the white of the egg (the albumen) contains the same element as the meat, while the yolk of the egg is exceedingly fattening. The reduction, in this case, is really her restricted diet (quantity, not kind,) and "hard work and worry."

Worry will reduce anyone, but it is as useless and as futile as it is foolish. If you can show me one person who has ever been benefited by worrying—but you can't, as that person has not yet been born—I can show you a million that are worse off in proportion to the degree of worriment.

A restricted diet and hard work will reduce anyone, without the worry feature entering the game, and when reduced it is easy to remain at the weight acquired and desired, for what is desired may be acquired.

A New Formula for Obesity.

FROM time to time I have given various methods for reducing obesity, but never, in any formula did I prescribe "worry." As all previous methods have been more or less prosaical I give one, herewith, taken from "Life," that is poetical:

"Sleep but little; never eat
Anything that's fat or sweet.
Shun tobacco, alcohol;
Eat potatoes not at all.
Beans, rice, puddings, pies abhor,
Never pass your plate for more.
With your meals no water take.
Walk until your muscles ache.
Exercise an awful lot,
Especially if the weather's hot.
Hungry always leave the table,
Eat as little as you're able.
If you're really faint for food
Unbuttered toast is very good;
Or, if that does not suffice
Two or three stewed prunes are nice.
Milk and cream you must taboo,
Sugar in your coffee, too.
Try this plan two months or three
And I'll give my guarantee
The advice I give is true
And you'll lose a pound or two."

Sometimes a diet is restricted by necessity, but it only goes to show how little we can get along with when necessary. Recently in a small village in Tuscany a cave collapsed burying an old miner who had made it his home. With little light and air and cramped for space, he managed to live through a confinement of three weeks, his only means of sustenance being straw and earth. We say "sustenance," and yet is it not a question as to his receiving any nourishment? But who can tell how much the mind had to do with it, inasmuch as it was diverted for the time being simply by chewing something—no matter what. It is said by some neighbors who had accidentally discovered his unpleasant predicament that he was quite healthy when liberated. Undoubtedly his three weeks forced fast proved beneficial.

Automobiling for the Nerves.

DR. MATTHEWS, in "Health," in speaking of a business man who now looks sound and hearty and is up to his ears in work with no thought of nerves, says he came to his present condition by automobiling. This man speaks for himself: "My automobile saved my life. I was on the point of a nervous breakdown. Appetite gone, couldn't sleep. Then I bought an automobile and went out every afternoon. A long ride over country roads and I would come home with the appetite of a woodchopper; eat supper, tumble into bed and sleep like a top."

A ride in the country, away from the city's din and confusion and nerve-racking sounds, should be, indeed, a nerve restorer, a rest for the tired brain; and among the beautiful surroundings as found here in Southern California man's very soul should expand. This, however, can never be done when one goes like the wind; moderation is the keynote for all nerve ailments.

It is said that Edison finds relaxation, after a prolonged period of work, in riding for days in his motor car over the most remote country roads in New Jersey.

For those of us who do not have this great enjoyment, except by the kindness of our thoughtful friends, there is left that next best thing, a choice of one of the many pleasant trips on the car lines, some of which cannot be excelled anywhere in this country for beautiful and diversified scenery, from ocean to flower-laden valleys and sweet-scented orange groves to snow-capped mountains. Then again, there is that most healthful exercise, walking, in which we may all indulge if able-bodied, especially able-legged. The exercise and fresh air will purify the blood, calm the nerves and promote healthy sleep. One physician says this sort of simple exercise, persisted in, will cure the worst case of nerves.

Sensible Suggestions Regarding la Grippe.

IN A COMMUNICATION received from Dr. Willard Carver of Oklahoma City he says: "Well, the ever-recurring ailments are with us again. A perusal of the newspapers reveals the fact that from the lakes to the gulf we are again in the hands of the grippe. Most people believe that la grippe is epidemic, that it is a thing that comes upon them without any fault or neglect on their own part, but that it just happens. Of course it is needless to say that persons having such an idea are seriously in error. Let us look the situation squarely in the face and see if we cannot, by a proper analysis, isolate the elements entering into these ever-recurring disturbances.

"After the debilitating and tedious heat of the summer had passed, people generally began to be more active, to eat more, put on flesh, and generally to feel a sense of uplift and vitality; this during the period when it was still warm and they were thinly clad and in the open, taking much exercise. Then it suddenly became cold, and people generally shut themselves up in their houses, put on heavy underclothes, built fires, and almost wholly ceased activity, especially outdoors, but did not think to check and control appetite and continued to eat the same character and quantity of food as during the days of activity, in fact, adding to the menu heavier and more dense foods with the idea that the blood must be thickened in order to resist cold.

"The addition of the dense, heavy foods began about Thanksgiving and continued with increase of general food up to the holidays. It therefore happened, as a result of this 'stuffing' of the digestive system, that impaction and congestions were numerous, so that throughout the length and breadth of the land where these conditions prevailed there was a tremendous catarrhal elimination that received the name of la grippe, and the people thought it an epidemic. In fact this was nothing in the world but a strenuous effort on the part of the various systems involved to eliminate the superfluous load that had been congesting for some time, and free themselves of a destructive incumbrance of filth.

"This form of attack did not apply to any one class of individuals, but included the meek and lowly and those in high places, in fact, including everything from the country urchin to the President-elect of the United States, which fact, being translated, only means that he has attended too many banquets, and under high mental pressure has congested his alimentary canal, thus damming up the avenue of elimination, which rendered a catarrhal elimination necessary to save his life.

"It is indeed strange that with these facts so simply before the people they cannot, or will not, look the truth squarely in the face. They will not see that abstemiousness in the matter of food-taking is a necessity.

"They would know instantly that it would not do to crowd any other machine beyond its capacity. In so simple a matter as running a grain separator, or a fanning mill, they would know that you cannot feed more rapidly than the riddles and sieves can take care of the various substances, yet when they turn to that most wonderful of all machines, the human body, the valuable experience they have had as to all other machinery is not considered in the least. They fail to see any relevance between their machine—their body—and the ordinary machines constructed by human hands all about them, and yet the lesson is perfectly patent that the human machine is based upon exactly the same principles entering into all other machines, and that it must be cared for, looked after and kept in repair just the same as all other machinery if it is to do good work and remain at a high degree of efficiency.

"Colds, generally speaking, are not the result of exposure and accident. They are the culmination of processes, the elements of which exist because of the fault, carelessness, and neglect of the individual, who finally must suffer. Incidentally and as a result of the very same thing, there is a tendency to the production of all of the general fevers, especially pneumonia, bilious and congestive fevers."

If you do not wish to have la grippe confine yourself to an abstemious diet. By this I mean to two frugal meals a day, separated by at least ten hours; drink copiously of water; wear light underclothes; keep in the open air as much as possible; exercise freely and plentifully; breathe through the nose deeply and diaphragmatically and be careful to keep covered up when in bed. Do not bundle up, but dress warmly when going out. Remove the heavy garments when coming in, and give careful attention to securing good and sufficient elimination through each of the depuratory channels of your body, and you will get along without having la grippe no matter how many so-called epidemics of it may come and go.

e reason why remedial measures in al, mental and nervous troubles so fail," the Cheerful Hygienist pointed s that they are not persisted in, and d to their logical end. Of course I am lking of those cases where the poor, ed patient has been subjected to a e of super-drugging, and finds out be- it is too late that he has been heading ght for hygienic wreckage. This one become indeed a subject for the most ent and persistent efforts of the real enist.

ay a subject whose system has be- e run down through neglect, or the mis- habits of years, suddenly wakes up to that things are radically wrong with er her. The mother, in bringing up her en, through their tender years, over h she has brooded with a vigilance that quired a consciousness of its own, dur- both sleeping and waking hours, often that after these children have arrived age when they are able to take care of selves, this constant habit of alertness taken so strong a hold upon her that she able to relax from it, and it sometimes s in a chronic nervous disease, ia, and chronic constipation. Every sibility for home, children and hus- 's comfort has so long been hers that she has raised up other willing and hands in her family to assume a good of these duties and responsibilities cannot realize the change. If she sits to read her mind is not on the printed before her, but is often scouring the e from cellar to garret for some duty undone. If her girls are away from she unconsciously begins to worry them; for it is very easy for her to the chasm of years to the time when was really necessary. And these chil- in their growing years have become h a part of her life, that however gen- she may be, she cannot quite accus- herself to the fact that they are grown, endent individuals. When they are ing company she will be restless. She t withdraw her mind from them, and to her own resources, her rest and her And it is not because she would to deprive her sons and daughters of enjoyment in their own way, but she been so much identified with them that nerve is still painfully alert in their w, a word to this good mother. This on habit, this mental assumption of sibilities of which years and changes relieved her, is quite as wearing to her al system as if the responsibilities isted. It is a nervous momentum h, if not checked, will bring inevitable age. One such patient made the ession to me that it was beyond her r to stop it. Every remedial sugges- made to her she met with a negative. was a sweet and lovely woman, seeking sphere of usefulness, because she felt he real demand upon her in her home low. My first admonition to her was to all of the negatives, and substitute 'I for them. Then the suggestion was e to her to compel herself to realize it was no longer necessary for her to me the responsibility for every little hold duty. She must learn to ignore e dust and disorder—she must learn to things drift somewhat. She must learn the young hands that owe her so much p the many duties that had been hers. must learn to relax, to lie back and her eyes in the sunlight, knowing that well, and that considerable mental and al healing is not only due her, but ary to the recovery of her health. But to do with the mental machinery in hours? Teach it to loiter in beautiful of imagination—say the words rest, and love, over and over again.

plementary to this, for the safety of ance of mental temperament, it is ry to take up some project—some that will still not overtax the physical ; and if the subject be excessively and sympathetic, this hobby can- d to charities among the sick and y. For this subject herself is in need She needs systematic exercise, muscular and respiratory and frequent massage will help her. She needs to forget the weight of years, and to go to moving picture shows, or to some entertainment where she may laugh. And she must not say that she does not see anything funny in this or that—this is one of the forbidden negatives.

"The final word to the subject who has come to that state of nervous deterioration where he cannot sleep save in broken snatches, where he is constantly losing weight, and the face wears a haunted expression, is that he must make a determined effort to come out of it—if he is not strong enough to persist on the remedial measures by himself, let him do so with the temporary help of some strong, capable personality with a thorough knowledge of hygiene.

Cultivate Nerves From Brain Cells.

[Journal of Expert Mental Medicine:] Nerves grown from portions of removed brain represented a discovery made by Dr. Ragnvald Inglebrigtsen at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research It is a continuation of the work of cultivating the tissues outside of the body begun by Drs. Carrel and Burrowes. The latest results show that the most delicate and highly organized cells known may be cultivated when disassociated from the body, and they may lead to new methods in the treatment of diseases resulting from the degeneration of nerves.

The physician worked with the brains of chicken embryos of various ages, putting small portions in glass test tubes surrounded by a broth used as the culture medium. From the brain cells the axis cylinders began to develop. Those cylinders are not found in the new born, and when they grow the child begins to get control of its muscles.

The investigator conducted numerous experiments showing degeneration and regeneration of nerve fibers. When those filaments were cut, the portion beyond the section began to show degeneration in twenty hours, and the change continued until the close of the second day, when the threads died. But after the twenty hours, so swift are the recuperative powers of nature, the development of new axis cylinders began from the central part of the cut fibers.

Stop Hump-back Growth.

[New York Times:] Dr. Harvey F. Newhall of Lynn, at the Salem, Mass., hospital recently performed what is known as the "Albee operation," for prevention of humpback from tuberculosis of the spine.

The operation consists in grafting a piece of bone into the spine so that the formation of a spinous "knuckle," which causes humpback, will be avoided.

In the operation the spinous processes of the vertebrae, above and below the side of the disease, are split longitudinally and a piece of healthy bone is grafted into the groove.

The new method replaces a older one which required the use of a plaster jacket for two years.

Paralytic Cured While Sleeping.

[Chicago Inter Ocean:] A remarkable case of sudden recovery under dramatic circumstances from complete paralysis of the lower part of the body and of both legs has occurred at Nottingham, Eng.

Four and a half years ago Samuel Flecknoe, now 32, was seized with a fit, and when he recovered consciousness his lower limbs were useless. Ever since, he has been carried or wheeled about in an invalid chair. A year ago the doctors declared the case to be absolutely hopeless.

What Flecknoe describes as his "miracle" happened last Sunday morning. "When I woke," he said simply, "something seemed to tell me to get up and dress and walk downstairs. So I did."

Daily for four and a half years he had been carried up and down stairs. Sunday when he suddenly walked into their midst unaided, members of the family were astonished. "He has been walking about ever since," said his mother.

New Cure for Insomnia.

[The Family Doctor:] A curious cure for sleeplessness has recently been reported. A piece of calico, about eighteen inches wide and two and three-quarter yards long, is rolled up like a bandage, and a third of it wrung out of cold water. The leg is then bandaged with this, the wet parts being carefully recovered by several layers of the dry part, as well as by a layer of gutta-percha tissue, and a stocking drawn on over the whole.

This causes dilation of the vessels of the leg, thus diminishing the blood in the head and producing sleep. It has been found by Winternitz that the temperature in the ear passage begins to fall a quarter of an hour after the application of the bandage; the decrease amounting to 0.4 degrees Centigrade, and the normal not being again reached for from one and one-half to two hours afterward.

The writer has employed this means of producing sleep for a couple of years, and finds it especially useful in cases where here is congestion of the brain.

Fly a Paralysis Carrier.

[Buffalo Express:] The study of infantile paralysis following the epidemic here last July has resulted in discoveries which, it is believed, ultimately will result in the finding of a cure for the disease, according to F. E. Fronczak, health commissioner. The disease is caused by a germ which is ultra-microscopic, a discovery resulting from experiments by Dr. Simon Flexner and Dr. Hidego Noguchi of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, made from cultures obtained during the epidemic here.

The virus resulting from the germ has been discovered, however, and from this a cure can be worked out.

"It was discovered that the virus will go through the best filters and even porcelain. By the identification of the virus a tremendous advance in the ultimate arrest of the disease has been made.

"It is now a settled fact that the stable fly is responsible for the spreading of the germs. We are now planning to eliminate every possible danger and the key to the elimination will be the wiping out of the stable fly."

Cheese Cause of Appendicitis.

[New York Sun:] Twenty-nine boys have been brought from the St. Francis Industrial School at Eddington, Pa., to St. Mary's Hospital to undergo operations for appendicitis within ten days. The boys are from 10 to 16 years old.

Dr. S. B. Kaufman, resident physician at St. Mary's, believes that the overeating of cheese was the cause of the appendicitis epidemic.

Use Extreme Low Temperatures.

[Minneapolis Journal:] Great interest is shown in medical circles at the communication read at the Berlin Academy of Science by Dr. Darsonval, on the use of extremely low temperatures in surgical operations.

Dr. Darsonval pointed out the application of great cold in the treatment of wounds of various kinds gave great advantages over high temperatures of 200 to 300 degrees, hitherto used, and that by a new apparatus, his invention, patients can now be operated upon with temperatures as low as 252 degrees below zero.

This result is obtained by using not solidified carbonic acid gas as hitherto, but a blend of alcohol and carbonic acetone, inclosed in a narrow silver tube surrounded by a double glass cylinder, which was devised for the purpose by Dr. Darsonval.

A further advantage claimed for Dr. Darsonval's new appliance is that it does away with the danger of infection caused by the direct application of solidified carbonic acid gas.

Nearer the Perfect Man.

[The American Practitioner:] Man is handsomer, better housed, fed and clothed, more charitable and is more rarely assailed with gout than in "ye olden times," according to Dr. John W. Wainwright. In fact, man has had an average of six years added to his life in the last century.

"No doubt the stress and strain of life today are conducive to nervous complaints," says Dr. Wainwright, "as well as to arterial, cardiac and gastro-intestinal disturbances. And yet with all of this hurry one is amazed at the outward calm, the poise, of the man of affairs today.

"We read that man is old and worn out at 60, but statistics prove that the average length of life is between six and seven years longer than a century ago.

Human Typhoid Incubator.

[Sacramento Union:] Harry Olsen, perambulating typhoid incubator, is still hatching daily germs. To his record of having caused thirty cases and three deaths another death has just been added.

Between August, 1908, and February 2, 1912, when he was a sailor on the ship Acme twenty-six men contracted typhoid fever from him and three died. Olsen was detained and isolated at the United States Marine Hospital. Last October the doctors thought they had conquered the army of organisms and Olsen was freed on probation. He got a job on the steam schooner Noyo, but not a month had elapsed before two men were attacked by typhoid fever. One of them died.

Olsen was discharged to prevent a mutiny among the crew, and he must now go back to the hospital for further treatment. He may be subjected to an operation for the removal of the gall bladder, which has been found to act as an asylum for germs.

Man's Leg Asleep Eight Months.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] Doctors here were puzzled today when they were asked to treat George McCullum, a candy maker of Alton, Ill., whose leg has been "asleep" eight months. A year ago McCullum suffered muscular rheumatism. He obtained relief by using an advertised remedy. Then after the pain left, his leg went to "sleep." Efforts of a dozen physicians have failed to "awaken" it.

Life Shortened by Automobiles.

[New York Herald:] Those who go in for motoring with enthusiasm are endangering their lives, if the conclusions of City Clerk Lincoln E. Rowley of East Orange, N. J., are based on sound reasoning. Mr. Rowley is register of vital statistics, and has just compiled his report for the year. He notes an alarming increase in deaths due to organic diseases of the heart, cerebral hemorrhage and Bright's disease.

"These may be regarded as induced largely by irregular and overstrenuous modes of life," says the statistican, "and the mad craze for nerve-racking speed in automobiles perceptibly contributes, according to some observers."

Pointers in Respiration.

A musician, while calling on the writer a few days ago, had something to say about respiration. Of course he spoke about the perniciousness of shallow, chest breathing, and what he said further was interesting. "Most people, in practicing deep breathing, raise the chest too much. They expand the lungs so that there is too much pressure on the bony structure—the ribs. Another mistake is the raising of the shoulders while taking a deep breath. Many women singers do this. The shoulders should not be raised. I have a method for guarding against these errors. In the first place, the body should always be carried so that there is a hollow in the back at the waist line. Now bring your arms forward so that the bended elbows touch in front of the body, the ascending forearms touching all the way up to the meeting hands. You are now in a position to expand your lungs deeply and widely. You will feel your back enlarge. This, in my mind, allows the lungs to expand in better position. Another means to accomplish the same purpose is bending forward with your hands on a chair. Deep inspiration in this position also throws the expansion into the back. Women seem more prone to use the chest in breathing than men."

The musician certainly has a finely developed back, and a splendid carriage. But we do not recommend the exclusive use of his method. Chest, diaphragm and abdominal expansion should also be particularly practised. The two systems practised every day in conjunction will be productive of a splendid torso and lung development.

PRAYER IN SILENCE.

Lord, give me but the power to hold the pride
For which my flesh has been so crucified;
And give me power to smile on friend and foe,
With heart-uplift, that they may never know.

The wounds of Love, its raptures or its pain
Sink in the soil of souls, and are the grain
From which are sprung the fairest harvests, so
In quiet and in secrecy they grow.

Lord, that I have the strength to brave and bear,
The veil of smiling silence let me wear.
Lord, let me fight my battle in the dark,
Alone, unaided, let the stillness hark
Alone to my heart's struggle; let my hands
Alone tear up each rock that ragged stands
To bar my way, and rend my quivering flesh.
From far, free heights there blows a breeze all fresh
With purity from crests of virgin snows;
Deep—deep into the mettled breast it goes,
To stir the ruddy blood to meet its chill,
To nerve the spirit with its quickening thrill.

Lord, that I have the strength to brave and bear,
The veil of smiling silence let me wear.

Man, Woman and Comradeship.

What a pity it is, boys, that you and we girls cannot go in more for the friendship thing—that we cannot associate more freely with each other, with less of the embarrassment of sex-consciousness. Of course, this sex-consciousness can never be eliminated entirely, nor would we have it so. There is the masculine mental and the feminine mental, as well as the masculine physical and the feminine physical. It is this difference in mentality, and the difference in individual development that it brings, which makes the inter-association of the sexes desirable. Association among women and women and association among men and men are good, but that between men and women is of the utmost importance.

Yes—yes—I know this inter-association is a great deal more free than it used to be, even a couple of decades ago. We are getting further and further away from those stringent lines of demarkation that separated the sexes in times past, made it impossible for them to understand each other, and rendered real happiness in marriage almost a physical and mental impossibility. We do not, like the Quakers, separate the men from the women in "meeting." We do not so frequently now teach our daughters to look upon men as depraved monsters, not to be trusted alone with a girl, but with whom these girls must eventually pair off, giving themselves utterly into the keeping and control of this creature who is supposed never to have learned self-control. No, no, we feel ourselves far beyond the period when babes were thrown to human Molochs. And yet there are signs by which we may behold the trail of the serpent.

If I had a bevy of young sons and daughters I would give one night a week to getting them all together, and calling in their boy and girl friends. We would read a little together, recount experiences, tell stories, have music, ending up, perhaps, with a little dancing or a game. My own children would have an early understanding of the meaning and purpose of sex, of the sacredness of their own physical bodies, and a knowledge of every trap that is set against sex cleanliness and decency from babyhood up. Having that knowledge they would not have to prowl pruriently around one another, in their search for understanding. The boys would not grow up with but one idea about a woman, and my girls would not be among those who stand about like forlorn chickens on one leg, among members of their own sex, at the summer resort, while some brilliant young minx, with a knowledge of the male creatures and their ways, found an easy way to become acquainted, and had every one of these creatures at her beck and nod.

No—no, my boy should not grow up to look upon every woman who happened to be a trifle unconventional as his legitimate prey, and consider it his masculine duty to try her caliber, to feel that no matter how powerful her mentality, or how exquisitely fine the grain of her nature—if she happened to possess sex magnetism and a charming, expansive sociable nature, these last qualifications could have but one meaning. And he would not for economic and other reasons, front her splendid, complex personality, ignoring all of the finer possibilities of comradeship, and overestimating the possibilities of appeal in his own physical person. He would remember that there might be dozens of other men of equal personal charm dancing social attendance upon this sort of fair lady. He would realize that the clear, laughing eyes were looking right through him, and anticipating every maneuver. He would realize that one does not meet every day the woman who combines personal charm with mentality, and ideals worth while.

Have you ever known it—real comradeship between the man and the woman, where they could walk safely side by side, hand in hand, where the respect which they held for each other was so profoundly beautiful that it was entirely possible to hold the wildest sex impulses in leash? Where the shyness which existed between them was of the soul, where they learned little by little each day more and more about the hidden treasures in the mind and heart of each, through some appealing passage of a book, through the growing of a flower, in some purpling shadowing over the mountains, or some sinking of the sun into the crimsoning horizon—or, perchance, through some great fineness and loyalty of conduct in a practical hiatus? Have you ever known it, in its infinite beauty, warmth and tenderness, this friendship, this comradeship between the man and the woman?

Do's and Don'ts for the Ambitious.

Don't let your ambition so fill your horizon that it excludes everything else from your mental vista.

Don't neglect and abuse your physical body because of your ambition; you cannot possibly fulfill a great ambition without a good, enduring body through which to work.

Don't think that because for a while you are able to work twenty hours out of the twenty-four you are going to be able to do it always, and that you are going to escape the consequences of setting the laws of nature at naught. If you make the attempt, you will probably be cut off in the midst of your labors, with your ambition unfulfilled. Or you will come to that death in life of chronic invalidism, when you, in enforced idleness, shall watch the busy world flash past. Or you will dodder along producing the feeble shadow of the virile work you should have done in the blind belief that you are doing something worth while—which is the most pathetic result of all.

Don't let your ambition make you ready to sacrifice others to it. If you cannot devote yourself to your ambition and fulfill your manly or womanly duty at the same time, choose duty, and before you know it you will find yourself on the road that leads to your goal.

Don't be impatient, and make too hurried an effort at the attainment of your life's labor.

Don't throw all of your fuel into the fire at once, and that before you shall have gathered in a goodly store with which to replenish. If you do you may get an early bright flame—but it will die down early for want of feeding.

Do not believe that you can constantly produce and give out without taking in commensurate material to the end of increasing your knowledge and effectiveness.

Do not commence a life labor which requires knowledge, experience, and ripeness of intellect at too early an age.

Do not become discouraged and lose belief in yourself because, with an instinctive realization of the quality of work you should produce, you fall far short of your ideal, not being fully equipped for its attainment, and think that it is not in you to accomplish your purpose.

Never for a moment lose sight of your ambition. Work toward it constantly, even if compelled to do so by indirection.

When you are compelled to do something which seems to lead entirely in an opposite direction, let the doing of this thing serve your purpose in the development of character, or the accumulation of knowledge which will be useful later. Keep the main theme always in mind, and the lesser matters will serve as subordinate notes to fill out the harmonies.

Learn to realize the usefulness of delays in that they will give opportunity for the ripening and enrichment of your mind, and the skillfulness of your hand.

Don't, on the other hand—if you have a noble ambition, and one worth attaining—allow ineffective people whose minds and moral fiber are mere sieves to consume and waste your time and energies. These belong to a class who, not having a desire to accomplish anything themselves, make it their business to frustrate others. Beware of them. They are dangerous.

Don't allow your love of real comradeship to interfere with you in your working hours. Comradeship you surely need—it brings the cream of your nature to the surface, and it will be all the sweeter for your stern hours of labor.

Learn early the lesson that you must depend upon yourself primarily in the prosecution and fulfillment of your ambition. If you depend too much upon any friend or instructor you will awaken some day to find what you have builded has but a frail foundation.

Listen with sweetness and humility even to the instructions of fools—sometimes you can learn even from them. But learn to winnow the wheat from the chaff.

Do not talk too much about what you expect to accomplish; by doing so you weaken your purpose.

Is It to Laugh?

Does a man love a woman because she is good, noble, self-sacrificing, because she does her duty, and devotes every moment of her life to making him comfortable and trying to make him happy? He does not. If he loves her notwithstanding, it is for some other reason. Many times a man will most unreasonably love the woman who is selfish, who treats him as her adoring slave—which he is—who is capricious, exacting, hard to please, and alive to the attractions of other men. But neither does he love her for these traits. He loves her because she keeps his interest piqued, because he is never entirely sure as to just what she is going to do, and because he is never quite sure, under any circumstances, that he shall forever retain possession of her. The man who says he wants a good wife who will make him a comfortable home, so that the twain may settle down to happiness for the rest of their days, no doubt means what he says. But after he has ceased his lover-like attentions to her, and has hammered her into comfortable negativeness, his eyes will brighten up over the first fine-looking, spirited woman he meets, and he will ask his wife why she does not dress herself up and carry herself like Mrs. So-and-so. And he may have just finished growling over the month's dry-goods bill, and telling her that her last spring's gown is plenty good enough!

With the Supersensitive.

We seem to take great credit to ourselves for being supersensitive—we take pleasure in describing to others how easily we are hurt, how easily we are repelled by this, that or the other, how quickly some unpleasant noise may grate upon our nerves, how impossible it would be for us to live in any but the best surroundings, and so on. We grow to fancy that because others do not talk about these matters [illegible] we do, they cannot be equally [illegible] the same conditions. We also forget that every a distinctive manner of growth, best arrangements are those that habits and peculiarities of each ful consideration.

Arrangement of Flowers.

Stiff, straight flowers with sword-like spiky leaves, such as tulips, jonquils and narcissuses, should not be gathered into loose, languid bunches with the blossoms leaning out against the sides of the vase. It is entirely contrary to their nature. A good way to prevent this is to take a strip of sheet tin or lead and bend it around a knife handle into a cluster of cylinders. Set it in the bowl and put the flower stems in the cylinders, and they will hold themselves up in a natural way. The weight of the cylinders, will keep the vase from blowing over, as it is apt to do when struck by a breeze.

Certain flowers, such as roses, heliotrope, mignonette, etc., look best in glass, but the glass should be plain, not cut, nor in any way ornamented. Roses are never lovelier than when seen against this crystal background. In using glass, however, great care must be taken to keep the water fresh, since if only slightly discolored the perfection of the whole is marred.

HOME ECONOMICS.

Chintz for Old Furniture.

[New York Sun:] If you are a woman of moderate means and if you feel a bit discouraged when you find your furniture and draperies becoming shabby you should be cheered by the knowledge that chintz is enjoying an extraordinary vogue. If you cannot afford to recover chairs and sofas with the lovely brocatelles and the rich velours then turn to the chintzes, which invite you to try an excursion in economy that should bring joy to every member of your family—unless you are not wise in selecting colors and patterns.

Manner of Selection.

It is always economical to obtain the greatest degree of comfort for the least possible outlay, and when it comes to making old furniture masquerade as new the old chairs that are favorites have a chance to remain in their accustomed places. With new chintz covers they will be doubly welcome to all and the first care should be to choose colors that will not soil too easily, but that does not mean that beauty should be sacrificed or that anything like cold or dull hues need be selected. With the thought of pleasing the men as well as the women of the family due consideration should be given to the value of contrast and to the proper massing of the dark pieces of furniture so that the room will not have a mottled or piebald appearance, so easy for it to acquire when chintzes are used.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

[Washington Star:] A wooden shelf, labeled "Cleaning fluids," and containing four bottles, with glass stoppers, is a useful adjunct to bathroom, sewing room or kitchen. The bottles contain ammonia, turpentine, naphtha and benzine.

Practice economy in small things. When using the oven for roasting, bake a pie or pudding, or bake potatoes, and eliminate the use of the other burners.

A place for table linen, dust cloths, tea towels and the like is necessary, and the writer has yet to find the woman who complains of her kitchen cabinet, which holds practically everything that used to go into the pantry.

A galvanized scrub bucket is lighter than a wooden one, and dries more quickly.

The sink should be made with a good drainage board, preferably with one end on two hinges so that it can be lifted and thoroughly dried.

The patent wringer mop or scrub cloth is a labor-saver, and a sprayer on the faucet is useful about the sink for many purposes.

If rain gets into the cellar, or there is any leakage whatever to cause dampness, have it attended to at once. A damp cellar, aside from being dangerous, will ruin practically all foods.

Provide dry boxes for fruit. These should be raised from the floor by bricks. One brick may be placed under each corner of the box.

CULT OF HOMEMADE.

Tyranny of Fashion.

[St. Louis Globe-Democrat:] Some time ago, when no woman would admit that she hadn't a waist; when seams were many and fashion was a tyrant who could condemn you to the scourging of ridicule or imputations of insanity if you refused to follow her lead into ugliness and discomfort, the woman who made her own clothes was a creature to be pitied. "Homemade" was then almost as atrocious a label as "not paid for," and every home dressmaker strove to give her garments a professional finish. She would slavishly copy some needless elaboration in construction, some needless absurdity of trimming—lest by their simplicity, or comfort, or by some expression of her own temperament, they betrayed their honest origin.

Preserving Individuality.

Happily, that particular phase of snobbery is passing. The woman of today who is clever enough to make her own clothes is wise enough to have her own way about them, and sane enough to take pride in the achievement. She realizes that for a woman to fashion her garments is not a matter of makeshift, but actually the ideal state of affairs that when we find Utopia we shall all have sufficient time and talent to dress ourselves.

Long ago it was discovered that the indefinable stamp of being homemade was entirely desirable in children's clothes. They must have that wholesome air of well-considered simplicity to be really "good style;" now, it seems, we are realizing that the grown-up garments are also improved by having that same air.

This modern feeling is of too strong and widespread a growth to fade again. The homemade doctrine is one that will flourish.

USEFUL ACCESSORIES.

The Window Shelf.

[Dallas News:] The housekeeper in an apartment should get permission to have a shelf outside the window—it will save her much in ice bills and be an untold convenience in the winter months.

Should there be a small porch, try to put up a fresh air closet. This need be nothing more than a good sized packing box with the front and sides cut to hold wire gauze. The front should be hinged and several nails can be driven on the inside. Such a contrivance also saves ice, as, save in the very hottest weather, food supplies keep better in a current of air than in a refrigerator.

A patent lock is advisable unless you live in an exceptionally honest neighborhood. Also, hang the closet high enough to be out of reach of dogs and cats.

To Make a Tea Tray.

[Baltimore American:] The daintiest tea tray may be fashioned from the lid of a cheese box in this manner:

First, sandpaper the wood until it is perfectly smooth and stain it a mahogany color. The stain may be purchased already prepared.

Polish the wood with turpentine and linseed oil.

Attach brass handles, which may be obtained at the upholsterer's shop for a very small sum.

A round, embroidered doily placed in the bottom adds to the appearance of the tray.

These trays are especially nice for the piazza or for serving breakfast to the invalid.

HEARTSEASE.

Use Love and Patience.

[McCall's Magazine:] A great deal of time and unlimited patience are needed if we would make of our children anything approximating the ideal we have in mind. Few mothers are willing to exercise that patience; many think they cannot spare the time, and so they resort to whipping as the easiest and quickest way to accomplish their purpose. No greater mistake than this can be made. We mothers forget that we are training immortal souls for eternity, and the few hours of time taken from our other tasks can very well be spared for so stupendous an undertaking. It is refreshing to find mothers fully alive to these responsibilities, and their methods will be a help to others who are struggling along the same path.

Gratitude.

I wonder does the bee forget the flower,
That gave him perfect nectar on his way?
I wonder does the bee forget the flower
Forget the splendor of the long June day
From which he caught the garment for his soul?
I wonder does my friend of friends forget,
As in an ashen wind his years unroll,
Her who gave beauty to his life's regret?

Much Obliged, Sheriff.

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] "Much obliged, Sheriff," said Robert Philips, city employee, at Frederick, Md., as Sheriff Fagan, his close friend, released him from the bars of a cell in the local jail which had served as a whipping post while Fagan administered fifteen blows on Phillips' back.

Phillips had been convicted of wife-beating and given his choice of sixty days in jail and a fine of $25 or fifteen lashes at the post. He chose the latter.

"Sixty days is a long time in jail and $25 is a lot of money," he told the court, "and if the State wants anything out of me it will have to come out of my hide."

Paris Family Moves Into Sewer.

[New York World:] Paul Hatin, his wife, sister and five little children were evicted from their home for non-payment of rent, and moved their belongings into one of the main sewers in the heart of Paris.

City workmen had left the traps open while away at breakfast and Hatin with ropes lowered a bed, bedding, cook stove and other household belongings into the sewer.

When the workmen returned they found Mme. Hatin preparing breakfast in the sewer. They would not allow the family to camp there, and gave Hatin money enough to allow him to get a room. Hatin had tried in vain to obtain aid from the authorities, and was at his wits' end when he espied the open sewer.

If Babies, Why Not Hens.

[Baltimore American:] Complaint has been filed with the postmaster at Guthrie, Okla., by John Anderson, a farmer, because Luther Arnold, a rural mail carrier, refused to accept for parcel-post delivery a live hen, which Anderson tied to his mail box with the destination address card fastened to its leg.

Didn't Know Right Hand From Left.

[New Orleans Times Democrat:] When arrested for driving on the wrong side of the street, Miss Resie Goldberg, 18 years old, said:

"You can't arrest me, for I don't know which is right and which is left. I never could tell my right hand from my left until I had time to stop and think it over, and you can't expect me to stop when I'm driving my buggy. I have done nothing wrong intentionally, and I insist upon your letting me go right away."

Nevertheless, she was booked for violating the traffic ordinance.

Good Man to Sandbag.

[Baltimore American:] Benjamin Beasely Hardin of Washington, Ga., carries with him everywhere he goes a heavy walking cane, in which are embedded $20 gold pieces and gold coins of smaller denominations. Four diamonds adorn the handle. In all, the ornaments are valued at more than $4000. He also wears an ornamented belt made of leather and ivory, worth about $1000, and a watch fob worth $300.

Picturesque Suicides.

[New York World:] Charles L. Briggs cut his throat in court at Cambridge, Mass., as he was sentenced to four months in jail for larceny. He used a pocket knife. He had been convicted of stealing supplies from his employers.

Peter Wassen of Norwood, Mich., 40 years old, who was arrested on a statutory charge, committed suicide by setting fire to his prison mattress and crawling beneath it.

Ghostly Arm Wandering Around.

[New York Herald:] Many families at Latrobe, Pa., are alarmed because of a "ghostly arm" that sweeps tables clear of dishes and food at one stroke, that causes stoves to defy the laws of gravitation and has a penchant for encircling the waists of young women.

Landlords who formerly jeered now are growing serious on account of "To Let" signs appearing upon numerous dwellings.

Herman Relig, a baker, rented a house in Cherry street. While Mrs. Relig was alone in the house with her baby having supper the "ghostlike arm" swept the dishes from the table. It then seized the waist of Mrs. Relig, and, according to the young wife, squeezed her gently several times.

The arm was in the home of the Waldenecks, in Spring street, where it cut a few capers by lifting a stove and caressing Weldeneck's two daughters. The arm called upon the Semplers, Kingbooks, Colemans, Curtos and Donnellys. In each residence it did startling things.

Wife's Scorn in Verse.

[New York World:] An advertisement in a Jackson (Mich.) paper warned the public against extending credit to the wife of Lee Gillespie. It was signed by the husband.

Through the "personal" ad. column the wife retorted as follows:

No bed or board as yet I've had
From Lee Gillespie or his dad.
But since the day that we were wed
I've labored for my daily bread.
Now for cause and provocations
I've sent him home to his relations.

[Signed] MRS. LEE GILLESPIE.

A Costly Five Dollars.

[Cincinnati Enquirer:] Accepting Albert Coe's $5 bet that he could not hold his finger in a cupful of snow until the snow melted, Pearl Eaton of Marion, O., won the wager, but surgeons say he will lose his finger.

Asbestos Pocket for Smokers.

Explaining a large order for asbestos a prominent Walnut-street tailor said:

"Why, some of my customers are bringing back their overcoats to have an asbestos pocket sewed in for saving cigar butts. The pocket is made practically airtight and the cigar goes out as soon as it is put in." The tailor said he got his idea from a business man who paid 50 cents apiece for his cigars and did not want to throw away 45 cents' worth.

Asked for a New Brain.

[New York Times:] A primly-gowned middle-aged woman from Boston visited the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research today in search of a "new character, a very popular one."

She thought this could be obtained by a surgical operation to insert in her head a new brain. The woman said she was Miss Emilie Jane Clarke, and that Mrs. J. Berlingett of Norfolk, Va., was a sister and her nearest relative. She was sent to the psycopathic ward of Bellevue Hospital.

Stomach Wins Owner $50.

[New York Herald:] "Blind Tom" O'Neill, who has sold newspapers at No. 620 Grand street for the last twenty-two years, has an india-rubber stomach which won him a $50 bet from his friend, Capt. Jack Cookly. If you think it was "easy money," just scan this list of eatables that "Blind Tom" devoured to prove Capt. Jack's stomach can't stretch as far as his:

Eleven pounds of beefsteak.
Two pounds of bread.
Eight large Irish potatoes.
One quart of gravy.
Six green peppers.
Four red onions
Six bottles of beer.

Capt. Jack quit after eating ten pounds of steak.

Vexed by Eight-floor Fall.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] Charles A. Gardener, fireman in an apartment-house, was on the eighth floor repairing the dumb waiter when he lost his balance and plunged down the narrow shaft.

After traveling a couple of stories, Gardener grabbed the rope. He managed to hold it for four stories until it got so hot he had to let go. He landed in the basement, peevish and cross.

At the hospital, they couldn't find enough the matter with him to make a case.

Piano Added to Court Proceedings.

[Cleveland Plain Dealer:] Music and prayer have been added to the regular court programme in Danville, Ky., in the hope that clandestine liquor sellers may be reformed while they are being sentenced for violation of the law

A piano has been placed in the courtroom and a musician hired to play a dirge when sentence is being pronounced on keepers of blind tigers. The sentence alone has proved ineffective, as the offense is immediately repeated.

While the accused is testifying "Almost Persuaded" and "Lead Kindly Light" will be played to keep the witness within the bounds of truth.

Object to Being Overpaid.

[New York Times:] The city of Yonkers can boast of the proud distinction of having six residents who object to being overpaid for public service. These citizens are James A. Cosgrove, Fielding Grower, George P. Jackson, August E. Harquest, Walter G. Rauppius and George J. Dohn of Bryn Mawr Park.

They were appointed to several street-opening commissions. After viewing the land they fixed nominal damages and filed their reports. The Board of Estimate and Apportionment decided upon the sum of $100 each for their fees. They have written a letter to Mayor Lennon protesting that $100 each is too much for eight hours in the public service.

Husband Wants a Thin Wife.

[Chicago Record Herald:] Morris Lanisman of 1441 Hastings street told Municipal Judge Gemmill how, when he failed to keep pace with his wife as to weight, she denounced him as a thin, frail thing, too slight to be a good husband.

"My wife weighed 118 pounds when we were married," he said. "Now sh 180, and she says she won't hav light husband. As soon as we ma ried she began to get nervous an fainting spells. She would fai night and I would have to put her After a while she began to grow I could not do it, and I left her ly floor.'

Mrs. Lanisman glared at her hus band.

"It's true, Your Honor. And lived in her mother's house after she wouldn't let me even look in ror. She would say, 'Get away It belongs to my mother.'"

GOOD LITTLE POEMS.

A Seashell.

Iridescent with the tints of dawn
And golden dusk, it rests within my hand;
High on the sun swept whiteness of the sand
It lay—a vacant house with tenant gone.

With patient toil and rare material drawn
From green sea depths, the little spirit spanned Himself with pearl, with thought he could withstand
The touch of death that makes all life its pawn.

Where has he fled? And is all well with him?
Where went his spark of life in time's long night?
Where is he in the world's immensity?
The mighty sages of the ages dim,
The deep browed dreamers with the mystic's sight,
Are mute before this relic of the sea!
—[Arthur Wallace Peach, in New York Sun.

Caliban in the Coal Mines.

God, we don't like to complain;
We know that the mines are no lark.
But—there's the pools from the rain,
But—there's the cold and the dark.

God, You don't know what it is;
You, in Your well-lighted sky,
Watching a meteor whizz—
Warm, with the sun always by.

God, if You had but the moon
Stuck in Your cap for a lamp,
Even You'd tire of it soon
Down in the dark and the damp.

Nothing but blackness above,
And nothing that moves but the cars—
God, in return for our love,
Fling us a handful of stars!

The Playground of Dead Children.

["It was always summer in the Playground of Dead Children and I stayed longest there."]

Soft moss grew here for tender stumbling feet,
Low seats upon smooth rocks they found, spice-seeds
And aromatic leaves for feasts. Gay beads
They hunted hid in fragrant pods, and sweet,
Tart berries far in witches' wild retreat.
Brisk squirrels dropt them nuts, and water-reeds
Piped gladly when they danced upon the meads;
Birds brought them tidings, brooks conveyed their fleet.

'Twas always summer and the days were bright
With brightness lost from homes bereft and dark.
All seemed abundant, glad, save when at night
They wept for arms but dimly missed by day.
Then singing angels held them till the lark
Bid all God's cherished children wake and play.

HUMOR.

[Washington Star:] "Is your husband in favor of woman suffrage?"

"I don't know exactly. But he is very polite and chivalrous in discussing the subject. He says he is willing at any time to sit down and give a lady his place in a parade."

[Judge:] "Among the tenements that lay within my jurisdiction when I first took up mission work on the East Side," says a New York young woman, "was one to clean out which would have called forth the best efforts of the renovator of the Augean stables. And the families in this tenement were almost as hopeless as the tenement itself.

"On one occasion I felt distinctly encouraged, however, since I observed that the face of one youngster was actually clean.

"'William,' said I, 'your face is fairly clean; but how did you get such dirty hands?'

"'Washin' me face,' said William."

[Cassell's Journal:] A large crowd was gathered waiting for the cars. A very fat man was the recipient of several vicious pushings as an elderly woman, red in the face, very much flustered and fussy, kept digging her elbows into the convenient ribs of those about her. Finally, a particularly vicious push caused him to wince, and he moved to one side as far as possible. She followed him and thumped him on the back.

"Does it make any difference which of these cars I take to go to Regent street?" she asked.

"Not to me, madam," he answered as he slipped through an opening in the crowd.

[Cassell's Journal:] Vicar (to Mrs. Thatchbag, whose baby has recently been christened). Ah, Mrs. Thatchbag, I never remember any baby behaving so well in the water.

Mrs. Thatchbag: Lor', sir, that was because me and Jim 'ad been practising on 'im for about a week afore with a watering-can.

[Pearson's Weekly:] A funeral procession was moving slowly along the village street, when old Mickey O'Hea stepped out of his house. He had not heard of the funeral, and so was curious to know.

"Good mornin'," he said to a neighbor; "who is it they be buryin' today?"

"Ah, sure," replied the neighbor, "who but poor ould Dinny O'Callaghan."

"Ould Dinny O'Callaghan, is it? Phwat! is poor ould Dinny dead?"

"Well, now, ye don't think they be rehearsin' wid him, do you?" snapped the neighbor.

[Philadelphia Telegraph.] Some of those at a Washington gathering the other night declared that moving picture shows have great influence on the youthful mind, and Gen. Wood smilingly admitted it.

"At the movies some time ago," said the general, "little Jimmy saw a band of Indians painting their faces, and asked his mother why they did it. Mother explained that it is a custom of the Indians to always paint their faces before going on the warpath, which meant tomahawking, killing and scalping.

"Just after dinner two evenings later little Jimmy galloped downstairs wild-eyed and excited.

"'Beat it, mother!' he exclaimed, making a dive for the door; 'beat it, quick!'

"'What in the world is the matter, Jimmy?' asked the wondering mother.

"'Everything is the matter!' called back the agitated Jimmy. 'Sister is going on the warpath.'"

[London Answers:] The case had reached a critical stage. Even the Judge seemed to awaken to a live interest in the proceedings, for the most important witness was about to be cross-examined.

"So you are the lady's maid?" began the relentless barrister.

"Yes, sir."

"And where were you at 7 o'clock on the evening in question?"

"I was in my lady's room, sir."

"For what purpose?"

"I was dressing my lady's hair, sir."

The barrister leaned forward and spoke slowly and impressively.

"Now, think," he said, "I want you to be very careful in answering this question. Was or was not your mistress in the room at the time?

YOU WANT THE BEST

If people could buy a second pair of eyes as easily as they can teeth, the importance of rightly fitted glasses would not be so important. Nature gives us but one pair, and so when the eyes fail they fail for ever, unless they are helped by skilful methods.

My efforts as an eyesight specialist rest upon this foundation. The best work possible to be done for the eyesight is none too good.

The best lenses that can be secured are none too good.

Bargain purchases can better be made for every other portion of the body than for the eyes

It is for such reasons that my specially ground Toric and Kryptok lenses are the best lenses anybody can wear for the saving of the eyesight and stopping nerve drain.

Can YOU AFFORD to Look Old?

Old-fashioned, two-vision glasses are conspicuous of increasing age. KRYPTOK LENSES are perfect to see far and near without lines or seams, not only like any other single lens, giving great comfort and saving the sight, providing they are perfectly fitted. I order KRYTOKS only after two or three tests.

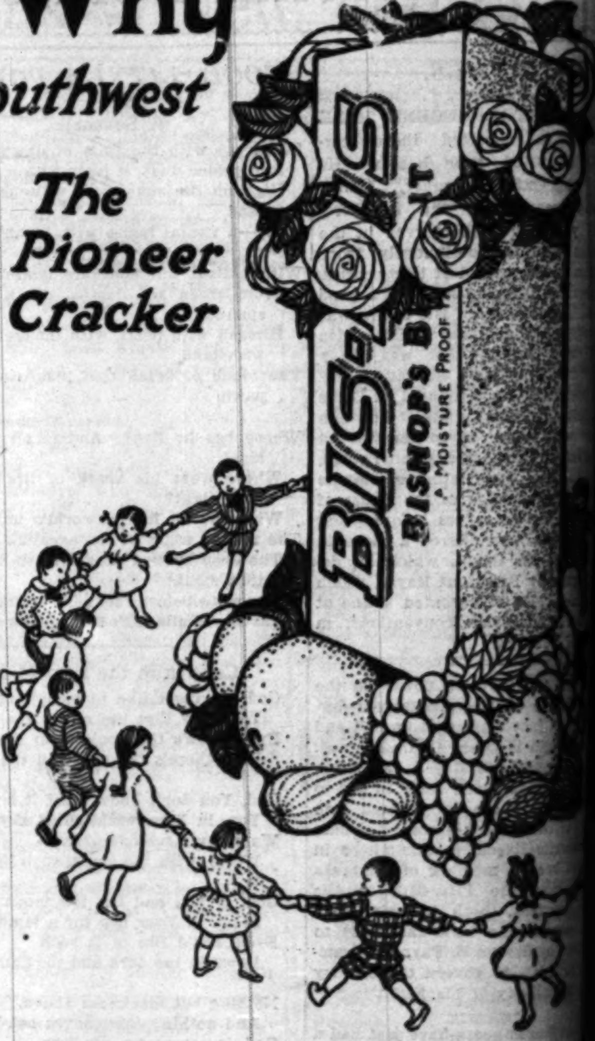
Who's Who—and Why

Noted Products of the Southwest

BIS-BIS

The Pioneer Cracker



—A native of California, birth place Los Angeles.

—And at the time of the baking of the first Bis-Bis crackers Los Angeles was but a village. But the people who were here then—though small in number, were hungry every day for a fresh baked cracker, sent them direct from the ovens.

—So the cracker factory of Bishop & Company was started in a small way—but with great faith in the future. As the Southwest has developed, the Bishop cracker factory has grown, and from the beginning this factory has been a very prominent factor in the progress of the city.

—The Bis-Bis cracker has always been a noted product of the Southwest, not only because it is a native—and a pioneer—but primarily because it is a cracker one delights to eat, a cracker of high quality, a cracker Californians can point to with pride as a local product that can't be beaten in any cracker factory anywhere.

—The sanitary package protects itkers in one—makes it very inviting. The sanitary package protects its goodness absolutely. To what an extent BIS-BIS Crackers are identified with the growth of the Southwest, you may judge by the brown and white packages, seen in practically every grocery. Price but five cents a package.
